Confusion Reigns As Austin Protests

Impeached on 7th Count Combining 6 Charges Dropped Previously.

By Felix Bruner.

The judge was found not guilty on six counts. On the seventh and last the vote stood 56 for conviction and 28 for acquittal, the exact two-thirds necessary for conviction.

For two hours, the tall, slender, 63-year-old jurist sat before the bar of the Senate, his arms folded, his face expressionless, but almost as white as his hair, as one Senator after another stood in his place on each of seven roll calls and announced his vote as either "guilty" or "not guilty."

As roll call after roll call resulted in acquittal by the slimmest margins—once by only one vote—the expression of the defendant remained unchanged. But when the final vote was announced as for conviction he appeared stunned.

Nothing to Say.

Surrounded by reporters, Ritter said:

"I have nothing to say. God, you can see why I have nothing to say. I'm going back to Florida."

The seventh charge, the one on which Ritter finally was convicted, was a combination of the other six charges, plus an accusation that he had brought his court into "scandal and disrepute."

The other charges, with the vote in each instance, were:

That he granted A. L. Rankin, a former law partner, an exhorbitant $75,000 fee in the Whitehall receivership case and corruptly received $4,500. Vote—55 for conviction, 29 for acquittal. The change of one vote from the acquittal to the conviction column would have meant conviction.

That he connived with Rankin and others to bring the Whitehall litigation and then dissipated the hotel's assets. Vote—52 for conviction, 32 for acquittal.

That he practiced law for the Mulford Realty Corporation while on the bench. Vote—44 for conviction, 39 for acquittal.

That he practiced law for the late J. R. Francis, of Flint, Mich. Vote—36 for conviction, 48 for acquittal.

That he paid no income tax in 1929 on $12,000 he received in addition to his salary. Vote—38 for conviction, 48 for acquittal.

That he paid no income tax in 1930 on $5,300 received in addition to his salary. Vote—46 for conviction, 37 for acquittal.

Appointed by Coolidge.

The vote of the Senate automatically removed Ritter from the office to which he had been appointed for life by President Coolidge in February, 1929. A native of Indiana, he practiced law in Colorado for 30 years, going to Florida in 1925.

In addition to removing the judge, the Senate had the power to bar him forever from holding any public office of trust. An order to this effect was presented by Senator Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, but it was voted down, 76 to 0, Ashurst himself voting against it.

The balloting, conducted before galleries crowded with tourists, proceeded quietly until announcement of the vote on the last count. Then the Senate broke into confusion. As Senator Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, president pro tem of the Senate, who was presiding, announced the result of the vote, Senator Aus-

Three American Aviators Win Harmon International Trophies

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 17.—Americans were awarded three of the five 1935 Harmon air trophies of the International League of Aviators, it was announced tonight.

Edwin C. Musick, pilot of the Pan-American Airways' "China Clipper" on its first flight to the Philippines, was awarded the aviators trophy.

Capt. Orvil A. Anderson copilot of a stratosphere balloon flight last November which set a record of 72,395 feet, got the spherical balloon award, while Amelia Earhart Putnam and Jean Batten, of New Zealand, received an equal number of votes for the year's best woman aviator. Both were given awards.

The other major award, for a dirigible pilot, went to Capt. H. von Schiller, of the Zeppelin Co.

Miss Earhart in January, 1935, became the first woman to fly the Pacific solo in a hop from Hawaii to California in 18 hours, 16 minutes. Later she flew to Mexico City from California alone.

Young Miss Batten set a record for the South Atlantic crossing in December, flying from England to Rio de Janeiro, via Africa. She also became the first woman to fly the South Atlantic alone.

'Made' Work Relief Upheld By President

He Opposes Diversion of $700,000,000 to Ickes for Jobs Plan.

Hopkins Likely to Spend Entire Proposed 1.5 Billion Fund.

President Roosevelt put his foot down yesterday on a movement in the House to earmark $700,000,000 of the proposed $1,500,000,000 relief fund for construction under the Public Works Administration.

The President indicated that he expected all of the money to be used for projects which can be completed within a year and which will provide maximum employment. He has previously given this number as 3,000,000.

The Presidential action, in spite of a pending bitter fight in Congress, is expected to mean that the entire fund will be turned over to Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator, with few, if any, strings tied to it. It also means that the entire amount will be spent within the year beginning July 1.

Some observers believe that even under a Hopkins "boondoggling" program the amount will not be sufficient for a year and that, if he is re-elected, the President will ask for an additional appropriation early in the next Congress.

Schwellenbach Involved.

Meanwhile, there was another development, involving Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, in the dismissing by Hopkins of George H. Gannon, WPA administrator in Washington State, for "obvious political skullduggery."

Gannon, the Associated Press reported from Seattle, declared that money raised among members of his staff was to have provided a sound wagon in which Senator Schwellenbach could tour the State, broadcasting his speeches. Gannon said he vetoed the plan as soon as he learned of it and ordered the money returned to the subscribers. He reported his action to Hopkins two weeks ago, he said, then resigned last Monday "in order to avoid embarrassment to the Administration."

Of Hopkins' action on Thursday, dismissing him, Gannon said:

"I regard his action on such a flimsy pretext as purely a political gesture which indicates his attitude toward the problem of relief."

If the President is successful in preventing earmarking of funds for the PWA, that organization, under Secretary Ickes, will retain only the job of completing work already begun. Ickes also will be without a new housing program, unless Congress enacts a housing law giving him additional money, and there is increasing evidence that there will be no such legislation this session. President Roosevelt indicated that little progress was being made in that direction.

The Presidential pronouncement came as the House group favoring more money for Ickes announced that it had 200 signatures on a petition asking for earmarking of funds and that it expected the signatures would total 300 by the end of the week. Mr. Roosevelt's expression, however, is expected to have a dampening influence on the group, which is headed by Representative Beiter (Democrat), New York.

President Favors Hopkins.

For more than a year there has been a bitter dispute within the Administration over methods of administering relief. Hopkins has favored quick, "made" work to give a maximum employment. Ickes has insisted on permanent public works, stressing the number of jobs created in the production and transportation of materials. The President has definitely sided with Hopkins. Ickes, however, insists that he has nothing to do with the House movement favoring the WPA.

The House bloc had planned to ask Roosevelt for a conference next week to discuss the earmarking plan. It is possible the request may be abandoned, in view of the President's stand.

Mr. Roosevelt explained yesterday that there are a certain number of persons on relief who must be kept at work and that they can be kept at work by employing them on the type of project that can be finished in one year. A change of type would mean more cost per worker, which would result in a reduction in the number employed, he said. If the same number is to be employed, he pointed out, more money would be needed.

Asked about possible housing legislation, the President said that if everyone could agree there would be housing legislation at this session of Congress. He added that the problem had not been solved and that no one had suggested a plan to meet all requirements. Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, recently introduced a bill providing $876,000,000 for low-cost housing.

Meanwhile, the relief appropria-

Turkish Guns Again Rule Dardanelles

Sudden Re-occupation of Demilitarized Zone Surprises Powers.

Bulgaria Seen as Next Defeated Nation to Scrap Treaties.

By the United Press.

Ankara, April 17.—Duplicating Germany's sensational military re-occupation of the Rhineland, Turkish troops today occupied the Dardanelles demilitarized zones.

Without warning, the Turkish forces tramped into the Dardanelles zones while European governments were studying the Ankara government's recent note asking consideration of its desire to regain full military sovereignty over all Turkish territory.

Paris dispatches reported that France was ready to reply favorably to the Turkish request.

Turkish refortification of the Dardanelles and other waterways territory was restricted by the Treaty of Lausanne. Ten nations, as treaty signatories, are interested in the remilitarization of Turkish straits.

Decision to reoccupy the Dardanelles zones was reached at a cabinet meeting Thursday night, when President Ataturk presided. The decision was taken in the presence of Marshal Fevzi, chief of staff of the Turkish army.

Move Surprises Britain.

Dispatches reporting that Turkish troops had reoccupied the Dardanelles caused surprise tonight in British quarters, which were without official confirmation.

Officials were startled because Turkey recently took up the question legally through notes to powers signatory to the Lausanne Treaty. The British reply was favorable.

Informed quarters were unable to decide what reason caused Turkey to go ahead before formal permission was granted. Belief was expressed that there may be secret motives that Turkey has not yet indicated to the other powers.

Turkey's bold move further complicated the delicate European crisis and observers predicted that Bulgaria would be next to flout the World War treaties.

Demilitarization of the forbidden areas on either side of the tortuous Dardanelles Straits, in effect, closes the Black Sea to all navies excepting Russia's.

For many months official circles have been watching Bulgaria suspiciously, fearing that the World War ally of the Central Powers would follow Germany and Austria by re-arming. Bulgaria now is the only member of the former Central Powers which has not scrapped the peace treaties.

It was believed here that Turkey finally decided to go over the head of the League of Nations and the Lausanne signatory powers as result of the Austrian government's recent decree ordering compulsory universal military training.

Situation Serious to Rome.

Rome, April 17 (AP).—Italian official sources said tonight they were awaiting precise information on the reports of the Turkish re-occupation of the Dardanelles before stating the attitude of Italy, one of the signatories of the treaty which demilitarized the area.

They declared, however, that if the reports were true, a situation would arise which would be equally as serious as Germany's violation of the Locarno Pact.

When the Turkish desires for re-occupation of the Straits area were first expressed they were greeted with little sympathy here. Italians recalled that the Lausanne Treaty was not an imposed covenant but one which was signed voluntarily by Turkey, Italy and other countries involved.

Bulgars Mobilize Youths.

Sofia, Bulgaria, April 17 (AP).—The government tonight announced the mobilization of 20,000 youths for compulsory labor service beginning May 1.

The order was issued before the Turkish occupation of the demilitarized zone around the Dardanelles was disclosed.

The Turkish move created excitement here, especially since Bulgaria borders European Turkey. There were some unofficial expressions of concern for the security of Bulgaria's southern frontier.

Parley at Geneva Fails; Rome Reports Selassie Is Willing to Abdicate

Italians Assert Emperor Would Quit Throne to Gain Peace.

Son Would Reign As Duce's 'Puppet'

Negus' Decision Said to Have Followed Italian Troops' Advance.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Rome, April 17.—Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia today was reported to have informed Italian representatives of his readiness to abdicate in favor of Crown Prince Asfa Wosan.

This would be a preliminary gesture of surrender to Italy.

The crown prince informed Italian general headquarters, sources close to Premier Benito Mussolini said, that he is ready to negotiate peace terms "unconditionally."

Mussolini, upon receipt of urgent advices from East Africa, instructed his commander in chief, Marshal Pietro Badoglio, as to the terms of an armistice which would be possible upon abdication of the Negus Negusti.

Word to Badoglio Reported.

Emperor Haile Selassie also is reported to have informed Badoglio of his own readiness to negotiate peace unconditionally, even if such negotiation means his abdication in favor of his eldest son.

In this connection it is recalled that when Italian troops occupied Dessye, former field headquarters of Emperor Haile Selassie, they discovered that Asfa Wosan, with a bodyguard of 1,000 men, had departed only 24 hours previously for an unnamed destination.

The Negus Negusti is reported to have made his offer to abdicate and negotiate peace unconditionally when he was informed that Italian troops, advancing down the imperial highway from Dessye, were within 150 kilometers of Addis Ababa.

Sources close to Il Duce said that the crown prince agreed to submit to the Italians with all the forces under his command. Then, it was said, he would reign as "puppet emperor" at the head of a government under Italian domination.

News from East Africa involving negotiations between the crown prince and Badoglio followed collapse of peace efforts within the framework of the League of Nations at Geneva.

Officials here were most reserved in commenting on reports that the Negus Negusti would abdicate and that the crown prince has gone over to the Italian side. Full details of Badoglio's reported communication with Asfa Wosan were lacking, but reliable quarters said the crown prince consented to become "puppet emperor" some time ago. Negotiations during which his consent was obtained allegedly were conducted at Djibouti, capital of French Somaliland.

Badoglio has removed his headquarters to Dessye from Asmara. His headquarters staff and press correspondents, formerly stationed with the Italian troops at Asmara, Eritrea, also are moving to Dessye.

Air Base Advanced.

Press messages from the northern front reported that base for Italian air patrols has been advanced 10 miles south of Dessye. Troops moving out from the Dessye base have occupied Bidersa and have reached Lake Mai Baron down the imperial road from Dessye to Addis Ababa.

Bidersa is directly south of Dessye.

Military quarters report that already 2,000 motor trucks have arrived at Dessye, where they are being refitted for a drive on Addis Ababa.

White troops are being poured into Dessye to reinforce the native Eritrean forces which occupied the city Wednesday.

Dispatches from the south, not officially confirmed, reported that

House Is Told Of 'Corruption' In Army's Sales

Bill Is Drawn to Change Methods of Disposing of Surplus Goods.

Seeking legislative remedies for alleged "loose and careless" War Department sale and purchase methods, the House Military Affairs Committee, it was learned yesterday, has reported to the House that "international complications" have resulted from existing practices, and "the degradation and corruption of some officials of the War Department" is involved.

Covering sale of Army goods to the Newbury Manufacturing Co., and the Breecot Co., Inc., the latter one of several firm names under which Joseph Silverman, jr., operated, two reports, charging contract breaches and other abuses, have been made to the House and called to the attention of the Department of Justice.

One bill already has been drawn to provide for sale only after advertisement to the highest bidder, of military stores, and further legislation will be drawn to repeal or modify the existing statutory laws governing disposition and sale of surplus properties and goods.

"The Treasury and taxpayers will ultimately benefit to the extent of many millions of dollars," said Chairman John J. McSwain.

"The corrective influence of this whole investigation will be felt to our common advantage for more than 50 years. Unless other Congresses in the future shall closely scrutinize the departmental and bureaucratic transactions dealing with the buying and selling of munitions, arms, war instrumentalities, supplies, equipment, transport, etc., their loose and careless methods may again prevail, thus giving opportunity for graft, corruption, and consequent waste of our resources."

Involved in the Army sale and purchase procedure, the committee charged, were:

"1. The degradation and corruption of some officials of the War Department.

"2. The formation of vicious lobbying agencies and influences to represent dealers in such surplus properties and goods, and

"3. The improper exploitation and final ruin of legitimate manufacturers and dealers in such kinds of property and goods in the domestic markets."

International complications which the committee charged resulted from Army sale and purchase procedure under existing laws were:

Charge of "dumping" on foreign markets.

The swearing by combatants of League Council Is Called for Monday to Meet New Emergency.

Rome Rejects Plea Of Paris for Truce

Fascist Envoys Certain African Capital Will Fall Next Week.

The Foreign Situation:

Negotiations for peace between Italy and Ethiopia collapsed yesterday at Geneva. A special session of the League of Nations Council was called for Monday to deal with the critical situation.

Emperor Haile Selassie was reported to have informed Italy of his readiness to abdicate in favor of Crown Prince Asfa Wosan. This, according to Rome reports, would be a preliminary gesture of surrender to Italy.

Americans in Addis Ababa were ordered to concentrate at the British Legation in event of emergency. The order was issued by United States Minister Cornelius Van H. Engert as Italian troops drove toward the capital.

Italy was warned by Great Britain that the bombing of British Red Cross units in Ethiopia must cease.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, April 17.—League of Nations negotiations for peace between Italy and Ethiopia collapsed today.

A special session of the Council was called for Monday to deal with the critical situation.

Italy, confident her troops would be in Addis Ababa by next week, rejected an earnest French appeal for an armistice to permit peace negotiations and ease the international tension.

The Ethiopian delegation firmly refused to accept a peace program advanced by Il Duce and the Committee of Thirteen, which is the Council without Italy, then admitted its 45 days of efforts for peace had failed.

Italy is prepared to participate in Monday's session to state her case again. An Italian spokesman said it was too early to say whether troops could take Addis Ababa by then, but "1,000 motor lorries already are rolling in that direction from Dessye."

France, trying to keep both Italy and Great Britain as her allies in the Rhineland crisis, sought a way out by appealing to Italy to halt hostilities, even for a short period.

Appeals to Aloisi.

This plea was made to Baron Pompeo Aloisi, chief Fascist delegate, by Joseph Paul-Boncour, French minister of state. Aloisi telephoned Rome and later Paul-Boncour announced the request had been refused.

A resolution concerning the war probably will be adopted by the Council Monday for submission to all members of the League. Great Britain was said to hope the League resolution would show that the international organization is "standing firm" behind Ethiopia and will proceed in an effort to effect peace.

The Italian spokesman said his delegation would come to Monday's meeting without any hope of lifting sanctions.

"Sanctions," he said, "are not working anyway, so it is immaterial to us what is done about them."

British circles took an entirely different view of the sanctions situation. They contended the latest figures show the League's punitive measures are having a cumulative effect on Italy's foreign trade and will bring disaster to Fascist national economy unless Il Duce comes to terms with the League.

In case new sanctions should be urged, Dr. Augusto Vasconcellos, chairman of the Sanctions Committee of Eighteen, has full power to convoke the committee at any time.

The Committee of Thirteen tomorrow will take official note of the failure of peace negotiations and on Monday return its mandate to the council, putting the problem of peace back into the hands of that body.

Mussolini's Terms Hit.

Members of the Committee of Thirteen appeared agreed that Mussolini's demand for direct peace negotiations with Ethiopia had "flagrantly" disregarded the League's responsibilities.

By the Associated Press.

Nutley, N. J., April 17.—Seven swift, silent men executed a daring train robbery in the metropolitan area today, intimidating an Erie Railroad train crew and finishing their job before passengers were aware anything was amiss.

They got away with $958.35 in cash and $50 worth of X-ray machine equipment, but Newark police said they had evidently expected to get a larger amount and the first reports made by detectives were that the bandits, armed with sawed-off shotguns and revolvers, had actually taken $58,000.

The detectives later disclosed the railroad and the railway express agency, which was carrying the money to a Belleville bank, had expected a holdup for some time, and had even gone to the trouble of stuffing bags with paper to mislead gang spies.

Six months ago, the detectives learned, an employe of the railroad, whose name was withheld, was approached by a man who tried to get his promise to help in a holdup. The matter was reported to the police, and the company took precautions by continuing to ship dummy bags of "money," so that not even the train crew knew how much was being carried.

Topcoat Weather Continues Today

Bright skies and continued chilly weather, with the temperature hovering in the 50's, were predicted by the Weather Bureau for the District today. The forecaster expected the mercury to rise to about 55 this afternoon.

Before dawn, officials asserted, the reading here will be about 36. Yesterday's high was 52 at 2 p. m., and Washingtonians went to and from their offices and homes in topcoats.

Meanwhile park authorities forecast that the double-blossom Japanese cherry tree display in East Potomac Park this year will be a disappointment.

An examination by horticulturists yesterday revealed damage by cold rains and flood indicated scarcely more than 20 per cent of the normal number of blossoms will appear over the week-end.

House Defeats Rent Measure By Wide Margin

By James D. Secrest.

The House yesterday upheld Representative Norton, chairman of the District Committee, in her fight to end a three-day filibuster, but it rejected the Ellenbogen rent commission bill by a vote of 196 to 85.

Constant questioning of the constitutionality of the measure and the raising of a Communistic bugaboo, together with a hodgepodge of personal enmities, were blamed for the bill's defeat by its sponsors.

Rejection of the proposal to set up a commission to adjust rents in Washington as an emergency measure brings to an end a two-year fight of local labor and government employe organizations for legislation to force a reduction in rents.

It also ended a filibuster that actually began last session and wasted three full District days this session before the House Rules Committee granted a special rule to the committee and permitted the bill to be called up on a day other than the two set aside each month for local legislation.

The rule, waiving the reading of the lengthy measure for amendments and restricting all debate on amendments to an hour and a half, was adopted on a roll call vote of 198 to 90, but only after it was threatened with defeat by a division vote of 49 to 50.

The hour and a half debate was marked by frequent parliamentary tangles and so much bickering over matters extraneous to the bill that Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, arose at one point to ask the chairman:

"Are we doing business here or running a burlesque show?"

The presiding chairman, Representative Umstead, (Democrat), of North Carolina, was forced to suspend proceedings time after time to

$4,800 Given Victim's Mother In First Rockville Bus Suit

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., April 17.—Mrs. Bessie L. Emerson was awarded $4,800 damages here tonight in her suit against Howard R. Poe, owner of the school bus in which her daughter, Pearl, was killed in a grade crossing crash at Rockville, Md., April 11, 1935.

No damages were assessed against the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, which also figured in the joint suit. The circuit court jury deliberated more than six hours before returning the verdict at 11:30 p. m. Mrs. Emerson had asked $25,000.

The judges this afternoon refused to take the case away from the jury and give a verdict themselves. They ruled on 22 prayers offered by attorneys at the conclusion of the testimony.

The suit was the first of 14 which have been filed as a result of the crash a year ago when 14 persons were killed. A total of $400,000 damages is asked by relatives of those killed.

Bolt From League By Mexico Urged

Mexico City, April 17 (AP).—Senator Candido Aguilar, a member of the foreign relations commission of the Senate, said tonight Congress will request President Lazaro Cardenas soon to present Mexico's resignation from the League of Nations.

Aguilar declared the League means for Mexico "nothing more than an expense of $90,000 annually in dues," and that this country was "misled by romantic sentiment" when it joined.

"The League," Aguilar stated, "is an instrument of the great powers who turn it to their own ends in settling continental disputes with which Mexico is not concerned."

Other Senators backing Aguilar's proposal declared that "the argument that Mexico is defending a weak country like Ethiopia by belonging to the League is a dream, because Mexico really is serving the imperialistic interests of England."

They also suggested that the money saved in dues to the League could be used for paying for Mexico's participation in "the League of American Nations proposed by President Roosevelt."

Three Children Are Sentenced For Failure to Salute the Flag

By the United Press.

Northampton, Mass., April 17.—In a decision believed unprecedented in the Nation's history, two brothers and a sister, ranging in age from 6 to 9 years, and pupils of a nearby Belchertown Grammar School, were sentenced to Hampden County Training School today on delinquency charges growing out of their refusal to salute the flag of the United States on religious grounds.

Sentences, imposed by Judge John W. Mason, of Hampshire County District Court's juvenile division, were appealed by Attorney O. R. Moyle, of Brooklyn, N. Y., representing the children and their father, Ignace Opielouski, Belchertown farmer.

First names of the children were withheld.

The action was taken at a private hearing.

Opielouski, a member of the religious sect known as Jehovah's Witnesses, was fined $20 on each of two counts of failing to send his children to school.

He appealed the fines and furnished $500 bond for the appearance in the June term of superior court.

Their teachers, Nellie Shea and Helen Keyes, and Superintendent Harman E. Knight of Belchertown schools, testified during the private hearing that the children refused consistently thereafter to salute and justified their action by quoting Biblical passages against bowing before "graven images."

The father told the court he did not believe in the flag salute law and had instructed his children not to obey it.

Hampden County Training School is a special institution for corrective treatment.

While the Opielouski children were being sentenced to the training school, the case of Carleton B. Nichols, jr., 8-year-old Lynn Grammar School pupil and original "baby pacifist," was being studied by the State Supreme Court.

Young Nichols, whose father also is a member of Jehovah's Witnesses, was expelled from school early last fall for refusing to salute the flag. The elder Nichols appealed the action to the highest court in the State.

Yield in Doubt, Tax Bill Nears Floor of House

$799,000,000 Sought in 1936-7 by President May Not Accrue.

By Robert C. Albright.

With the first draft of the Administration's proposed 1936 revenue law virtually drafted and ready for full committee consideration, it developed yesterday that neither the Treasury nor Ways and Means committeemen have any estimates of the ultimate yield of the bill.

Uncertainties as to yield were admitted after sub-committee changes in the program raised widespread doubts as to whether the measure will produce the $799,000,00 claimed for it when the full Ways and Means Committee last passed on the proposals.

The President had asked that $790,00,000 be raised annually for the next three years, and $620,000,000 thereafter, to balance ordinary budgetary outlays.

Asked yesterday what the sub-committee's proposed bill will produce for a three-year period, however, Chairman Robert L. Doughton replied:

"The Treasury has made no estimate on the yield of the new tax bill for a three-year period. It is impossible to answer with any degree of certainty what any tax will yield that far in advance."

Future Yield Indefinite.

The same answer was given to a question on what the proposed law will yield either in the first year, the second year, or the third year.

The most serious threat to the bill as a 1936 revenue producer, many observers believe, is the fact that dividend payments to individuals from January 1 to March 15, 1937, will not be taxable until 1938 returns. Asked by newspapermen what this "lag" will mean in the loss of revenue, Doughton replied:

"No estimate."

Laboring strenuously to whip into bill form a proposed tax "reform" that despite the President's claim of tax "simplification" has proved to be one of the most involved and complex tax proposals ever handled by a committee of Congress, the tax sub-committee headed by Representative Samuel B. Hill (Democrat), of Washington, yesterday had reviewed all but one section of the bill.

The remaining section, having to do with a proposed 90 per cent "windfall" tax on unpaid or refunded processing taxes, probably will be completed today, and the bill reported back to the full Ways and Means Committee. Representative Hill said the bill may be introduced in the House on Monday, and called up for floor consideration on Wednesday. The bill will be called up under an "open" rule permitting three days debate.

As to the ultimate yield of the bill, Hill said the committee would like to produce all of the revenue asked by the President, but is first anxious to draft an "equitable" tax bill.

"We are not working to the definite end of balancing the budget, but we are hopeful the revenue will balance the budget approximately," said Hill.

Recently, Representative Doughton told newsmen the committee is principally concerned with drafting into law a new principle of taxation and would have to be "patient" about the revenue.

The proposed tax "reform" concerns shifting from the present system of taxing corporation income to a tax on corporate earnings based on the amount distributed to shareholders in dividends, the primary object being to induce distribution of earnings. A normal income tax on dividends thus distributed would be imposed for the first time.

Submitted Questions.

In an effort to discover just what revenue possibilities the bill has, newspaper reporters yesterday devised a list of questions which were submitted to Representative Doughton, who agreed to ask enlightenment of Treasury experts.

It was in answer to this questionnaire that Doughton revealed the Treasury has made no estimate of the total yield of the bill, and believes it impossible to make one over a three-year period.

Some of the other questions and their answers were:

Q. How much revenue was lost by preferential tax concessions to companies with outstanding debts?

A. No estimate.

Q. How much revenue was gained by taxing bank dividends?

A. $5,000,000.

Q. How much revenue was gained or lost by the alteration in the proposed tax on foreigners?

President's Action Indicates Another Year of Boondoggling; Ross Puts 'Spell' on Borah.

By Franklyn Waltman

WELL, whether President Roosevelt is re-elected or defeated, it appears that we are destined to have another year of boondoggling under Mr. Roosevelt's decision yesterday against earmarking any of the new relief funds for a useful public works program.

WALTMAN

Those who are convinced that President Roosevelt is assured of re-election and that the real news ahead is what he plans to do after election day, may mark down that decision as indicating that the naive, breast-beating Harry L. Hopkins still has a place on one of the Presidential knees.

And it is another blow for the Republican Secretary of the Interior, Harold L. Ickes, who despite all the derision about "Honest Hal" has done a good job in the handling the public works program. And for those who want to look beyond next November, Mr. Roosevelt's decision gives color to the view which is widely held that Mr. Ickes will not be in the next Cabinet, Roosevelt win or lose.

Indeed, a high authority within the Administration privately expressed the view a few days ago that only three of the present Cabinet would be renamed if President Roosevelt is re-elected. He named the three survivors as Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., and Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace—the latter a Republican.

This forecast was predicated on the belief Postmaster General James A. Farley would voluntarily resign and that Secretary of the Navy Claude Swanson's health would make it impossible for him to continue. Either of these two members, it was said, could remain if they desired.

The reason given for the prediction that Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins would be found among the missing next January—Roosevelt win or lose—was that she makes Cabinet meetings a nightmare to all who attend them by talking interminably. Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady—who has been running the department in recent months, anyway—is being mentioned for that Cabinet portfolio.

It is generally assumed that Jim Farley, soon or late, will retire from the Cabinet before the Roosevelt re-election campaign gets fully under way. But none seems to know when. Mr. Farley's resignation has been predicted on specific dates—now all passed—three or four times, and yet he remains on. And it is possible that he will not resign at all, since whenever inquiry is made of the departure date in Administration circles, the answer is that the matter has not even been discussed.

On the other hand, it is also possible that this inside advice about all but three of the present Cabinet going if the President is re-elected, may not materialize. It may be campaign propaganda, being subtly projected to appease voters here and there who have a grudge against this or that Cabinet member. It also raises hopes within the breasts of those aspiring to high office. One cannot believe all he hears these days, even when it comes from impeccable authority.

But to get back for a minute to the boondoggling program, which is a compromise between a public works program and a dole, with the worst features of both, it is entirely possible that there may be some improvement in the next year. Harry Hopkins, despite a disagreeable arrogance, realizes the mistakes he makes and undertakes to correct them. Certainly the present boondoggling program is somewhat of an improvement over CWA.

For months he has been beating his breast and screaming that there is no politics in the relief program. The consensus is that he was honest in making such declarations. He really did not believe that any politics was being played and discounted such charges as coming from New Deal enemies. Anyway, the accused State administrators denied it, so that proved the charges were false.

But finally, Mr. Hopkins took a look around for himself. He has discovered that some of his State administrators have been playing politics and see nothing wrong whatever in it. It is to Mr. Hopkins' credit that he has stopped the silly breast-beating about the purity of his organization and has sought the truth. He has fired one State administrator. It is reported that several more are heading for the skids.

Word comes from Pennsylvania that Fred Perkins, the York, Pa., battery man whose prosecution at the hands of the NRA attracted Nation-wide attention, is a candidate for the Republican nomination for the House of Representatives. It would be ironical if the Blue Eagle should be responsible for putting a Republican in Congress.

Pity poor Senator Borah! Not only is he having a hard time with his Presidential aspirations, but out in Idaho, Gov. Ben C. Ross has commenced practicing a Yogi spell on him. Gov. Ross, who says he has gotten everything he ever wanted by concentrating on it and praying 20 times a day, now goes around calmly remarking to everyone: "I'm the next Senator from Idaho."

Rent Control Bill Defeated

call the House to order and to rule upon nonsensical points of order. The House applauded him at the end, however, for his disciplinary handling of the situation.

Twice the chairman reprimanded Representative Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, for interrupting a speaker without addressing the chair, and a half dozen times he instructed Representative Zioncheck to obey the rules of the House.

The bickering between the Washingtonian and the Texan which has become an expected sideshow of every District day, reached a new high as the former sought vainly to read into the Record an account of the Texan's sale of a house to the late R. Q. Lee, who was elected to Blanton's seat when the latter ran unsuccessfully for the Senate several years ago.

Red Issue Bobs Up.

The Red issue was injected into the scrap during debate on the special rule when Blanton charged that the Ellenbogen bill was communistic and Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, agreed with him.

To this charge, Mrs. Norton and Representative Ellenbogen replied: "Ridiculous and absurd."

"If this bill is Communistic," said Ellenbogen, "then all public service laws enacted by the States are Communistic."

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, arose to inquire: "When has it been Communistic to lower rents in the District?"

Mrs. Norton, replying, said:

"If rents continue to soar they will bring about a Communistic sentiment."

Early in the debate the lawmaker from the Seventeenth Texas District offered a motion to strike out the enacting clause of the bill. It was defeated by a vote of 56 to 36.

Vainly did Chairman O'Connor, of the Rules Committee, and Chairman Sabath, of the Select Committee to Investigate Real Estate Bondholders' Reorganizations, come to the aid of the District committee.

O'Connor complained against the "arduous filibuster" and offered an amendment designed to remove one of the sections challenged as unconstitutional. The latter amendment, striking out a provision which gave the commission the right to disregard leases and tenant-landlord contracts, was accepted by the committee.

Blanton Denounced.

Sabath cited evidence uncovered at his committee hearings and predicted that if the bill became a law, rents could be lowered and realty property owners could still make a fair profit on their investments.

The point of view of the majority who voted against the bill appeared to have been summed up by Representative Main (Republican), of Michigan.

"Many of us here do not like to be gouged by high rents," he said, "and we resent the tactics employed to block action on this bill, but we seriously question its constitutionality."

After the final roll call vote had been announced, Mrs. Norton arose to explain her position on the measure. She said she had no criticism of the members who voted against the bill, but she pointed out that the opposition had been tied up with the fight against the Sisson bill to repeal the anti-red rider.

Citing remarks of Blanton as carried in the Record, she said:

"This is the first time I have ever seen one bill defeated in order to beat another one."

She concluded by denouncing the Texan for his "disgraceful filibuster which cost the taxpayers of the country thousands of dollars."

tion bill still was before the House Appropriations Committee and demands in both houses for an investigation of politics in relief were being held in abeyance, with little prospect that there would be any such inquiry.

Representative Bacon (Republican), New York, member of the Appropriations Committee, in a radio talk, hit at politics in relief.

"Corruption of relief machinery," he said, "is due entirely to the corroding hand of partisan politics."

He read the text of a letter written by a New Jersey man who was seeking a job in a CCC camp. The letter said that the applicant was instructed first to get on the preferred list of a certain Senator and of members of the House.

Bacon pointed to the removal of a relief administrator in the State of Washington for political activities and said that charges of similar activities have been made in West Virginia, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Maine, Ohio and California.

Nice Will File For Presidency In Maryland

Actual Entrance Delayed Until Other G. O. P. Candidates Act.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 17.—Gov. Harry W. Nice ended months of speculation today by admitting he had prepared papers for filing as a candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination.

He added, however, he would not file formally unless some other Republican candidate does so before the deadline Saturday midnight. The Governor did not say whether he would file in other States.

"Yes, it's true," was Nice's only comment on reports he had prepared the papers and signed the check required for filing.

President Roosevelt and Col. Henry Breckinridge already have filed for the Democratic nomination subject to the May 4 primary. The President opened his national campaign here last Monday and plans for Breckinridge's Maryland tour were announced today.

Thomas F. Cadwalader, Breckinridge's Maryland manager, said the candidate will speak in the State during the week before the primary. Breckinridge has been touring Pennsylvania. He plans at least a dozen addresses in Maryland.

"Support for the Breckinridge candidacy in several sections of the State has reached surprising proportions, "Calwalader said, "in view of the fact that the campaign has hardly progressed beyond the planforming stage."

If there are Republican Presidential candidates in Maryland, the names will appear on the primary ballot, together with a space in which a voter could vote for uninstructed delegates to the State convention.

If there are no candidates, the organization will see to it that there is a full slate of Nice-pledged State convention delegates in each legislative district.

Farley Sees Roosevelt Sweep.

By the Associated Press.

James A. Farley, of the Democratic National Committee, last night interpreted the results of recent primary elections and the trend of registration figures as indicating a "tremendous Roosevelt sweep next November."

"Figures and facts tell the story and the conclusion is inevitable that President Roosevelt is stronger now than he was in 1932," the Democratic chairman and Postmaster General said in a formal statement.

Other political developments in the Capital included:

Carl G. Bachman, chairman of Senator Borah's campaign committee, said in a statement that it seemed "very queer" that official returns from two districts in the Illinois Republican primary had not come in.

"The information that I have does not indicate that there is any good reason for the final official returns in these districts (the Fourteenth and Twentieth) not to be open to the public at the present moment, and it appears to me that apparently there is something wrong," he said.

G. O. P. Brain Trust at Work.

The Republican National Committee professorial advisory group was reported by Senate Republicans to be drafting material intended for use in a concerted Senate and House minority attack on the Administration's tax and relief proposals.

Representative Martin (Republican), Massachusetts, described a private dinner given by Henry P. Fletcher, Republican national chairman, to members of the professorial staff and a few Congressmen as "a private affair of not much significance." Martin was among the guests.

In his statement, Farley said that "final and complete registration returns from California show 1,676,267 Demhocrats and 1,156,696 Republicans," while "in 1932 the Republicans had a majority of 469,775."

"In the recent Illinois primaries," he continued, "President Roosevelt, running unopposed, had a total vote which exceeded by almost 400,000 the combined vote cast for the opposing candidates in the Republican primaries."

After citing what he described as Roosevelt gains in Wisconsin and Nebraska, Farley pointed to Pennsylvania.

"For the first time in history," he said, "the Democrats have a majority in Pittsburgh, Pa., the registration figures as announced April 14 showing 130,545 enrolled Democrats and 125,718 enrolled Republicans.

"Figures are unavailable as yet for other parts of Pennsylvania, but all authorities agree the Democrats are showing substantial gains in all sections of the State."

A.F.L. Supports Roosevelt Plea On Hours, Pay

Pointing to six strong indications of a continued rising tide of business which "is becoming irresistible," the American Federation of Labor last night moved to support President Roosevelt in his demand that business maintain wages and shorten hours

The monthly business survey of the A F. of L. said:

"This is no time for temporizing. Either we make the transition from Government support to private employment by increasing wages, shortening hours and putting the unemployed to work in industry, or we keep a standing workless army seething with discontent because of the injustice done them in denying jobs at decent pay.

"Already the unemployed are organizing and recent demonstrations show that American workmen will not submit forever to forced idleness and public support."

The indices used by the survey to outline the present recovery surge showed:

"1. Industrial profits continue to increase: National City Bank records, now available for 1,490 industrial corporations, show a 49.7 per cent increase in profits in 1935 over 1934.

"2. Dividend payments have increased: The New York Times reports a gain over last year of 18 per cent, or $105,000,000 in dividends paid during the first quarter.

"3. Stock market prices, a senstive indicator of business optimism, have risen almost steadily for more than a year.

"4. Industrial production in April is estimated at 14 per cent above last year, and production in the second quarter is expected to exceed 1935 by 12 per cent.

"5. Gains are marked in the heavy industries: Steel is operating at 66 per cent of capacity, the highset level since 1930; General Motors' sales, for the first quarter this year, set an all-time record, exceeding even the pre-depression peak; orders for machine tools exceed last year by more than 100 per cent; building contracts in March were 83 per cent above last year.

"6. Consumer buying, the foundation for all these gains, is considerably above last year as indicated by auto sales, a 9 per cent rise in department store sales (first quarter), the best Easter season in retail stores since 1930."

The survey then reminded that the unemployed still number "more than 12,000,000."

Supreme Court Asked to Test New Deal Laws

By the Associated Press.

Two New Deal cases, challenging the validity of PWA loans for publicly owned hydroelectric projects and of the Government's seizure of gold held in this country by foreign corporations, were appealed yesterday to the Supreme Court.

Both were won by the Government in the lower courts.

In a test case, the Duke Power Co. and Southern Public Utilities Co. appealed from a ruling by the Circuit Court of Appeals at Charlotte, N. C., upholding a PWA loan and grant of $2,852,000 for a Greenwood County, South Carolina, power plant.

Filed by Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War in the Wilson Cabinet, the petition asserted the Government was attempting to "coerce privately owned utilities to reduce their rates."

The purpose of Secretary Ickes, the PWA administrator, it added, "is to establish yardstick regulation of intrastate rates and promote public ownership."

Swiss Corporation Appeals.

In the other case, a Swiss corporation—Uebersee Finanzkorporation Aktien Geselischaft—appealed from a ruling by the Second Circuit Court of Appeals denying an injunction against turning gold with a face value of $1,250,000 over to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York at the direction of the Treasury.

John W. Davis, 1924 Democratic nominee for President, told the court that the order by Secretary Morgenthau reversed a previous statement by William H. Woodin, who was Secretary of the Treasury during the early days of the Roosevelt Administration.

The petition contended that the Swiss concern did not have to abide by the anti-gold hoarding legislation because it was "an alien corporation, alien owned and controlled and never engaged in business within the United States."

It owned the gold before the legislation was enacted and contended the coin was worth more than $2,100,000 if exported to Switzerland. The Treasury would pay the face value in present day currency.

Officials said final decisions in both cases, if the court should agree to review them, would be deferred until next fall unless extraordinary procedure is resorted to.

One Week for Arguments.

Under present plans, only one more week of arguments, beginning April 27, will be held before the summer adjournment in early June.

The Duke petition said the Circuit Court of Appeals had conceded that "under ordinary circumstances the power would not exist to raise and expend" Federal funds for such a project, but that it was justified by the unemployment emergency.

"Manifestly," the petition added, "the indirect and incidental relief of unemployment (even if in fact accomplished), cannot be made the basis for the exercise of Federal power in matters where it does not otherwise exist: for if that were not so then there obviously would be no limit to Federal power.

"To the extent that the Federal Government can relieve unemployment, it must do so by constitutional means and methods."

PWA loans were said to violate State rights and title 2 of the national industrial recovery act, under which the funds were made available, was challenged as unconstitutional on the ground that it delegated legislative authority to the executive.

Sleepless Indian to Try Plane Hop as Soporific

Calcutta, April 17 (U.P.).—Rai Bahadur Ramjidas Bajoria, who has offered fabulous riches to anyone able to bring him sleep, today agreed to try a long airplane flight as a possible soporific.

He underwent a medical examination and announced he would be ready to take off next week. He was much more cheerful today after 20 minutes' sleep yesterday morning, the first he has had in 27 months.

Wendel, Freed, Aids Hunt for Abductors

Trenton, N. J., April 17 (AP).—Paul H. Wendel, cleared today of a charge of murdering the Lindbergh baby, left Mercer County Jail tonight for Brooklyn, where he was taken to aid in the search for the men he said kidnaped him and forced him to "confess" the crime.

Wendel was released after a Trenton baker posted his home and bakery shop as security for the $2,000 bail which County Judge James S. Turp set earlier today on old embezzlement charges pending against Wendel.

Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, who left a sick bed to hear the case, dismissed the murder charge today following the voting of a "no bill" against Wendel by the Mercer County grand jury on Wednesday, which completely cleared the former Trenton lawyer and pharmacist.

Stanford U. President Urges Stable Currency

New York, April 17 (AP).—Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford University and Secretary of the Interior in the Hoover Administration, told the American Provident Society today that the first function of intelligent government is to provide security and stability to its currency.

The society is an association for education in personal economics.

Unless, said Dr. Wilbur, the currency is stable, the savings of the citizens will not have permanent value.

Ziegfeld Girls Of Other Years Organize Here

Mrs. Pope Recalls First Show of the Noted Impresario.

Sometimes, down in the Agriculture Building, Mrs. Katherine Roberts Pope looks up from her files and stares out the window. And instead of the peaceful, green-coated Mall, she sees New York, vibrant with music and gayety. She sees the days when in gay colored silks, Katherine Roberts was a splash of color behind the footlights.

That was when Flo Ziegfeld was beginning his career and the story of Anna Held and her milk bath was being told in the papers of the Nation—the days of Rector's and after-theater champagne parties.

Katherine Roberts Pope was with Ziegfeld then. And yesterday, as she met with three other women at the Hotel Willard to form the Washington Chapter of the Ex-Ziegfeld Girls, she recalled when the stage was life and she was a "pony dancer" in the chorus.

"In Stock for While."

"I'd like to go back to it," she said. "But I'm too old to make a comeback. I was good once, though. Ziegfeld, you know, used to pick his girls for their legs and ankles."

"I ran away from home when I was just a girl," she went on, "and I got a little part in Klaw and Erlanger's play, 'Liberty Bell.' I was 'Gladys, the Stuttering Girl.' I was in the chorus, too, of course."

After that, Mrs. Pope was in stock for a while. Then she joined Ziegfeld's "Mlle. Napoleon," went on the road with it as far as San Francisco.

Leaving the show there she started out with another company, bound for Australia. But she left after they had played in Honolulu and returned to the mainland.

It was after returning that she joined Ziegfeld again as a member of the chorus of his first "Follies." And yesterday Mrs. Pope exchanged reminiscences with women who had known Ziegfeld later in his career.

Emilie Burton Here.

Irma L. Schubert, now a WPA artist, was there, a tall girl with dark eyes and a flashing smile. She was a showgirl in the 1924 Follies. In several shows after that, she finally tired of the stage and learned to fly. She sold airplanes for Curtiss-Wright, then returned to her original field, art.

Then there was Mrs. Lawrence Walton, who, as Dorothy Mason, was a dancer in the 1925-6-7 editions of the "Follies." She's a home girl now and has a 7-year-old son.

"That's the biggest show I can handle," she said.

Most recent of the Ziegfeld beauties was Emilie Burton, whose slim, lithe figure graced the chorus of "Showgirl" in 1929. Miss Burton, who also played with Earl Carroll and who had a part in "Five Star Final," lives here with her mother. She plans to open a dancing school soon.

'Society' Slayer Loses Appeal to High Court

Oklahoma City, April 17 (AP).—Phil Kennamer, 19-year-old son of a Federal judge, was ordered by the Criminal Court of Appeals today to surrender Wednesday to serve a 25-year manslaughter sentence in the 1934 Tulsa "society" slaying of John F. Gorrell, jr.

The court's ruling closed Kennemer's last State legal avenue of escape. The youth indicated he was prepared to obey the mandate. He had no comment.

Kennemar was convicted in February, 1935, for the admitted slaying of Gorrell, Tulsa dental student. He said he killed the youth "because Gorrell planned to kidnap" Virginia Wilcox, pretty daughter of an oil millionaire, H. F. Wilcox.

Lynching Foes Again Refused Petition Study

House Caucus Chairman Says Only Gavagan Bill Will Be Accepted.

Leaders of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People were frustrated again yesterday in their attempt to have the House Democratic caucus consider an anti-lynching bill, when Caucus Chairman Edward T. Taylor (Democrat), Colorado, announced from his sickbed he would accept no anti-lynch petition except from Representative Gavagan (Democrat), New York, whose Harlem district embraces a large Negro population.

Gavagan, meanwhile, is in California for the Bell committee, checking up on the Townsend old-age pension movement, and no date has been set for his return, although it was believed in some quarters Gavagan would return to the Capital late next week.

Gertrude Stone, executive board member of the District of Columbia branch of the N. A. A. C. P. professed to see something more than a coincidence in Gavagan's continued absence and in Chairman Taylor's refusal to entertain a petition submitted by anyone but Gavagan.

"We all know," Miss Stone said, "that the House Democratic leaders are unalterably opposed to a caucus on this subject. Despite the fact that we have more than enough names of House members on our petition, a policy of delay has been pursued throughout. And the longer the delay the slimmer becomes the anti-lynching bill's chances for consideration this session."

Representative Taylor's office disavowed insinuations made by the N. A. A. C. P. that Gavagan is being purposely kept away from Washington. His secretary admitted freely, however, that Chairman Taylor believes an anti-lynch caucus would be entirely futile. Taylor's attitude is seconded by Speaker Byrns and by Democratic Majority Leader Bankhead.

Fifteen identical anti-lynch bills have been introduced in the House this session. A petition signed by 37 House Democrats seeks to bring one of these bills up for consideration by the Democratic caucus.

Cars Coast Uphill Backward; Optical Illusion Gets the Blame

Grade on Stretch of Maine Road Held Only Apparent; Creek Seems to Flow Contrary to Gravity; Compass Needle Goes Haywire.

By the Associated Press.

Wilton, Me., April 17.—Wilton's "trick road," on which automobiles seemingly coast uphill backward, drew its quota of the curious tonight despite a statement by highway officials that the apparent reverse grade was an "optical illusion."

There were many to testify to their belief that some other influence than delusion made compass needles gyrate to the south when pointed at the north and automobiles or trucks meander up an ostensibly long, slight grade in neutral and without power.

H. Stanley Weymouth, superintendent of State aid roads, said the illusory 350-foot stretch between Wilton and East Dixfield on highway No. 2 was only one of several in the State that appeared, "due to the slope of surrounding country," to be of a different grade from what it actually was.

"We were deceived," he said, "by the appearance of the grade when we built that section of the road. Traveling down the grade, some people's eyes see a reverse grade, or hump, that isn't actually there."

Nevertheless, scores of persons said cars had been seen to roll as much as 300 feet up the grade which rises a quarter inch in 4 feet.

The peculiar terrain also is said to give the illusion that a nearby brook itself runs uphill.

The nature of the grade permits a car to start from the top of the hill in neutral, coast downward a short distance and stop of its own accord. A slight push sends it back up again. Some have started uphill without assistance.

People in this vicinity had various theories. Some agreed with Weymouth that it was an optical illusion. Others held that some magnetic property exterted by a possible metallic deposit was the right answer.

Mrs. Longstreet Denies 'Poverty'

Mrs. Helen Dortch Longstreet, widow of the famous Confederate general, sent word here yesterday that she still is able to buy "even such luxuries as lip sticks and rouge," and denied reports she was stranded in the Virgin Islands.

In a letter to Mme. Cantacuzene-Grant, granddaughter of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, she returned a contribution sent by the Union general's granddaughter who had heard Mrs. Longstreet was in need of funds to buy a ticket home.

Mrs. Longstreet wrote:

"In the midst of the terible poverty which holds the rank and file of Virgin Islanders in economic bondage worse than slavery, I have taken rank as a retired capitalist."

The letter said Mrs. Longstreet was writing magazine stories and working on a book. "My daily routine," she added, "is about as follows: Tennis or golf, a 3-mile constitutional, a swim in Lindbergh Bay and a canter over the bridle paths of the island."

Thanking Mme. Cantacuzene for the gift, she asked that everything possible be done "to relieve the sore wound to my pride and my cruel humiliation before the American people."

Ill With Meningitis, Girl Is Improving

Margaret Graham, 17-year-old Rhode Island high school student stricken with spinal meningitis Tuesday night, was reported "very much improved" yesterday at Garfield Hospital by Dr. William J. G. Thomas, physician in charge of the case. Her condition still is critical.

A member of a group of 30 high school students from Wickford, R. I., who came on an Easter tour of the city, Margaret became ill while going through the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon and was taken first to her hotel and later to the hospital and her widowed mother was summoned.

Yesterday Dr. Thomas said a second blood transfusion was not needed just now. One blood transfusion has been administered, a schoolmate being the donor.

Thursday afternoon the group returned to Rhode Island on a special train to Wickford, where they were to be quarantined on arrival.

Monumental Peek At City Prize for 45

The Washington Monument will be open at 8:30 a. m. today for the winners of the Good Citizenship Contest of the Daughters of the American Revolution who are in Washington as guests of the society. The early opening of the Monument was arranged by Representative Edith Nourse Rogers.

The 45 contest winners arrived here yesterday. A program for their visit has been arranged by Mrs. Charles J. Bullock, official chaperon, aided by Ada Howard Johnson, of this city, who is incoming State regent of Paris.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will receive the visitors Monday at the White House. Tuesday morning they will be presented with good citizenship medals by the president general of the D. A. R.

Roosevelt Invites National Inventory

New York, April 17 (AP).—An inventory into the state of the Nation as "revealed by the public press" was urged today by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in a special message to American publishers.

Through Editor and Publisher, weekly trade journal, President Roosevelt asked the newspaper publishers and executives gathering here for the annual meetings of the Associated Press and Newspaper Publishers Association next week to review events since the meetings last year.

He wrote: "This yearly gathering of the various instrumentalities which a great statesman of an earlier day so aptly called 'the Fourth Estate' invites an inventory into our standing as a Nation as revealed in the public press since the meeting a year ago. And surely the business and financial pages of all of our newspapers have given a cheerful chronicle of improvement in business throughout the Nation."

2 Giant Liners To Give U. S. Lead on Sea

Huge Ships Planned to Carry 10,000 Passengers at $50 on 4-Day Crossing.

By the United Press.

New York, April 17.—A model of a ship to dwarf any vessel afloat, and bring the transatlantic fare down to $50, was shown today by Paul W. Chapman, who rose from an office boy to president of the United States Lines.

The superliner's specifications far surpass those of France's Normandie and Britain's Queen Mary. She would cost $50,000,000 to build, would carry 10,000 passengers and would cut the Atlantic crossing to four days.

All that's needed to start construction is the money—and Chapman and his associates are looking to the Federal Government for that. In bills now before Congress they seek an advance of $100,000,000 to build not one, but two, of the ocean giants.

The design of what Chapman calls the "modern Yankee clipper" would revolutionize traditional shipbuilding and steamship operation. It is ultra-modern, even to the point of providing an airplane "landing field" 800 by 140 feet, and complete air-conditioning.

Chapman would name the vessel Clara Barton, for the founder of the American Red Cross. Her projected sister ship would be named Florence Nightingale, in honor of the immortal English nurse.

"They are proposed to be built to serve the 'masses' in comfort, and not the 'classes' in luxury," Chapman said. "There will be no class distinctions aboard ship. They will be cabin-ships in reality.

"There will be 5,000 cabin rooms with private bath and twin beds, capable of accommodating 10,000 passengers at a uniform one-way transportation cost of $50 each. Meals, not included in the cost of transportation, will be available in three separate types of service, from a lunch-counter stool at popular prices to the crystal room, where, of course, we will get to you if you want to splurge.

"They are designed not for the sake of largeness alone, but rather to permit of profitable capacity and competitive speed, which can be had only in bigger ships. Capacity, which permits greater revenue, and speed, making possible more frequent sailings, are absolutely necessary to bring the price of ocean travel down to where we can all afford it."

The "flying field" is created on the top deck by lowering the giant funnels with an elevator mechanism, and tipping the masts on hinges. The funnels are only to "make it look like a ship, anyway," Chapman said, as gasses and engine room exhausts will be carried through the side under the water line.

Another departure is the housing of the lifeboats on the main deck, instead of high above, placing them much nearer the water, with consequent greater safety in launching. Steel bulkheads and a multiple hull will make the ship "almost unsinkable."

Chapman plans to have his cutrate steamship tickets sold by every railroad station in the country, in combination with transportation to shipside. Airplanes will be part of the regular equipment of the super-liners, for those to whom even a four-day passage is too slow, and to speed mail, he said.

Wife of Oil Operator Held as Artist's Slayer

Corsicana, Tex., April 17 (AP).—Brunette Mrs. Alla Mae Kent, 29-year-old wife of a once-wealthy oil operator, was indicted for murder late today in the slaying of Noble (Curley) Hataway, young musician and radio entertainer.

Hataway was shot to death at his apartment here early Wednesday after a night club party during which, officers said, he and Mrs. Kent quarreled.

Board Will Study Hall's Parole Plea

Members of the District Board of Parole yesterday refused to comment on the application of Robert Hall for release on parole from the reformatory at Lorton, Va. Hall was sentenced to four years imprisonment for assault with intent to rob when he was 17 years of age. He escaped in 1923.

A troubled conscience caused him to return to the reformatory last November to complete serving his term. After his escape he had gone to Bluefield, W. Va., his home town. There he had married and had two children. When he moved his family to Gallipolis, Ohio, he began to worry about his escape and gave himself up, he said.

Rules of the parole board, it was pointed out by Wilbur H. LaRoe, jr., chairman, forbid parole of prisoners who escape or attempt to escape, except in most unusual circumstances. Board members said they were not familiar with details of the Hall case and refused to voice any impromptu opinions. All of the facts will be gone into and studied before judgment is passed, they said.

Baby Loses Race To Cheat Death

Dallas, Tex., April 17 (AP).—A race with death was lost today when Gene Wallace Brumley, 14 months' old son of an East Texas oil-field worker, died of an obstruction in his throat after he was rushed here by airplane from Palestine.

The child, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Brumley, of Cayuga, a few miles from Palestine, was flown over the 114-mile route in 55 minutes by the son of a Palestine doctor.

The boy died, however, before he could be placed on an operating table here.

Dr. Abell Hardin, of the hospital staff, said part of a pecan shell lodged in the child's throat.

Mrs. Brumley, who made the flight with the boy, her husband and a Cayuga nurse, said she found the child with a shell-broken pecan today. Shortly afterward she heard him gasping for breath.

Hoover Bureau Sets Up Stolen Goods Registry

New Section of Department Creates Central File for Identification.

A gold watch was the first piece of property registered in the new identification bureau for stolen goods set up yesterday by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The new section is an attempt to create a central file for the use of all enforcement officers through the country so that stolen goods, when recovered, can be identified with the ease and certainty of fingerprints.

The watch was reported taken in a burglary by the Elizabeth, N. J., police department.

Only two types of stolen property are being filed with the bureau now. First, property that can be described by name, model or serial number, as watches, firearms, bonds, typewriters and similar office equipment; and second, stolen goods involved in thefts amounting to $5,000 or more.

In time the registration service is expected to be expanded to include all stolen goods, J. Edgar Hoover said.

At the time the stolen property is registered, contributing law-enforcement agencies are to be requested to report the name of the victim, type of crime and suspects, if any. Bureau officials believe this will help both in the recovery and return of stolen goods and in the detection of the criminals.

One of the functions of the new bureau will be intensive research toward devising standard descriptive methods to be used in identifying stolen property by police throughout the country.

Bandits Rob Train

John Super, of Clifton, and Edward J. Murphy, of South Paterson, clerks at the station, alighted from the train and walked toward the little station. They saw William Sutherland, the station master, walking toward the baggage car.

"I saw three men step out from the bushes," Super said. "I thought they were commuters. As Sutherland turned, one of them said to him, 'You stay here.'

"Sutherland said, 'What are you doing, kidding?' And he answered, 'Kidding hell. Move and I'll blow your brains out.'"

Passengers on the train, about 75 in number and mostly women, apparently noticed nothing wrong.

From statements made to the police and to A. M. Kelly, superintendent of the Erie at Jersey City, the police reconstructed the crime this way:

When S. Arthur Smith, of Paterson, conductor, stepped off the rear of the train, a neatly-dressed man, wearing dark glasses, pushed a revolver against his side and said: "Keep quiet and move forward."

Smith and the man walked to the front of the last car. Charles A. Kean, of Clifton, brakeman, was waiting there for the conductor's signal to the engineer to go ahead. The robber ordered Kean "to fall in and move forward."

The three walked quietly back on the platform, where another bandit had covered Sutherland. Super and Murphy. The five were kept under guard.

Then two other robbers jumped into the baggage car, disarmed George F. Duffy, the railway express messenger, took his keys, opened the strong box and removed the money—$500 in a package of coins, two $200-packages of coins, one $50 package of bills, another of $6.55 and another of $1.80—and a package containing the X-ray equipment.

A bandit, meanwhile, had covered Joseph J. Reilly, engineer, and Harry Bogardus, fireman.

The men in the baggage car emerged, and the others moved with them to a big apple-green sedan waiting near the station. In a moment the car was off.

Sutherland said the men carried revolvers and sawed-off shotguns, and were young. He said he could probably identify them if he saw them again.

The money was a consignment from the Federal Reserve Bank, New York, to the Peoples National Bank, Belleville. It was sent to Paterson on a westbound train, and there transferred to the Waldwick-Jersey City bsanch, which runs through Nutley.

Under ordinary conditions, Chief William J. Brown said, police are on hand when money arrives by train at Nutley's main station.

The engineer, Reilly, said the men evidently knew something about trains, since one pulled the angle cock controlling the compressed air brakes and prevented the train from moving.

Robert T. Cummings, Jersey City, Erie Railroad crane engineer, said he was boarding the train when a man with two revolvers held him back.

The whole affair was over in a few minutes, and the train, 6 minutes late, proceeded on its way while Sutherland sounded the alarm.

Americans Told To Seek Cover At Addis Ababa

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Addis Ababa, April 17.—Fearing hostilities as Italian troops closed in on Emperor Haile Selassie's capital, Cornelius Van H. Engert, United States minister resident in Ethiopia, today ordered all American residents of Addis Ababa to concentrate at the British Legation in event of emergency.

Another spectacular flight of Italian bombing airplanes over the capital prompted the order.

The flight also galvanized the government into action. It made plans to move the seat of government westward if necessary.

Meanwhile, Emperor Haile Selassie, in the field with remnants of his imperial bodyguard, vanquished in the battle of Lake Ashangi, notified his officials here that he plans to remain in the field.

He characterized reports he plans to flee to the British colony of Kenya as "ridiculous," but said he does not desire to maintain constant communication with Addis Ababa for fear of revealing his position.

For weeks Italian airplanes have conducted a relentless search for the Emperor.

After finally admitting that Dessye has fallen to the Italians, Ethiopian officials ordered the erection of strong fortifications to guard Addis Ababa from assault.

The appearance of Italian planes this morning plunged the populace into panic. Scores were trampled in the rush for safety. Two automobiles were wrecked and numerous mules were killed as terrified thousands ran for the hills and bomb-proof dugouts.

Panic reached its highest pitch when two bombers, flying over the capital, exploded rockets displaying the Italian colors. After scouting over the center of the city they flew off to the north.

One of the Caproni machines, its bomb racks empty, circled Addis Ababa at less than 3,000 feet, dropping red, white and green signal flares.

The natives, mistaking the rockets for gas bombs, stuffed leaves from eucalyptus trees into their nostrils and scampered for shelter.

Many officials charged that the Italian planes unleashed a burst of machine-gun fire while flying over the Emperor's new gray-stone palace. Italian machine-gun bullets were picked up in the palace grounds. One woman was badly burned by an unexploded parachute flare.

In his brief report to his government the Emperor said he was safe with 20,000 loyal troops moving to the defense of Addis Ababa.

Note Asks Pledge Against Bombings and Rejects 'Explanations.'

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, April 17.—Sir Eric Drummond, British ambassador to Rome, presented a note to the Italian government requesting a categorical assurance that the bombing of British Red Cross units in Ethiopia shall cease, it was disclosed here today.

Britain also reserves the right to claim compensation for heavy material losses suffered by British ambulance services.

The correspondence on this question was published by the League of Nations.

The British note rejects the claim contained in the Italian aide-memoire that an Italian plane was subjected to anti-aircraft fire from the neighborhood of a British Red Cross unit. It declares that the British government is unable to understand how any trained military air observer ever can have harbored illusions as to the identity of the Red Cross unit.

The note charges that according to reports received from the medical officer in charge, Red Cross lorries were bombed deliberately between Quoram and Alamata March 3 last. Further charges were set forth as follows: A British ambulance camp, 2 miles east of Lake Ashangi, was bombed deliberately, with four patients killed and several wounded March 4. The material damage was so great that the ambulance had to be withdrawn for re-equipment. The derelict camp site was bombed March 6 for a fourth time.

"On reliable evidence available to them," the British note adds, "evidence which it is understood has been substantiated by photographs taken on the spot at the time of the first raid, his majesty's government can only regard the pretentious advances contained in the letter of Signor Suvich (Fulvio Suvich, Italian undersecretary for foreign affairs) and the aide-memoire which accompanied it as due to the not unnatural desire of the officers responsible for the raids on the British ambulance to present excuses for their actions."

Discussing the French appeal to Italy for an armistice, a Fascist spokesman said Italy was reluctant to declare one before the army has "cleaned up the situation" in Ethiopia. Later, he indicated, an armistice would develop of itself.

It would be dangerous, he added, to Italy's security to stop the advance until the military situation is "satisfactory."

Italian sources insinuated the Ethiopian delegate here does not have the right to represent the Ethiopian government, claiming regular communications have stopped and the central authority of Addis Ababa has toppled.

A cablegram from Addis Ababa to the League said Italian airplanes had flown over the city and fired on it with machine guns.

Selassie Held Ready to Quit

Gen. Rodolpho Graziani has launched his long-heralded offensive against the Dedjazmach Nasibu, Governor of Harar and Haile Selassie's only undefeated commander.

Italians were reported as advancing swiftly against Jijiga and Harar, but no details were available.

Press dispatches from the southern front reported that Graziani's advance was accompanied by fierce fighting between Nasibu's troops and Italian native Somaliland forces.

Badoglio's war communique today was reserved in tone. It said: "The work of consolidation at Dessye is continuing while chiefs and notables throughout the Wolla Galla region are submitting to the Italian commanders. On the Somaliland front the movement of our advanced patrols has been intensified."

Correspondents with Badoglio said the Dessye-Addis Ababa highway is ready for "Italian baptism," but immediate marching plans of Marshal Badoglio were guarded with secrecy.

Situation Held Critical.

Rome, April 17 (AP).—Failure of the League of Nations Peace Committee of Thirteen and the convocation of a special session of the League Council to consider the Italy-Ethiopian war was regarded by well-informed sources in Rome tonight as having produced one of the most delicate situations since the war began.

In some quarters the summoning of the Council was viewed as a step toward additional sanctions.

Premier Mussolini saw Count Charles de Chambrun, the French ambassador, but no information was forthcoming on the subject of their conversation.

Usually well-informed circles said Italy's viewpoint would continue to be that negotiations for peace must be carried on directly between Italy and the "remnant of the Ethiopian government," with the League not participating in the talks, but being kept informed.

A high source asserted Il Duce plans to crush the Ethiopian government and is prepared to face any international actions which may result.

Italians asserted that "the forthcoming occupation of Addis Ababa" would be Italy's next answer to the League.

Italy intends to continue the campaign in Ethiopia, they said, in order to strengthen her position there and to "eliminate" the last of the Ethiopian troops to prevent them from making trouble in the future.

These sources said the Italian fleet and air force are at a peak efficiency and are ready for any trouble in the Mediterranean. Leaves of absence are restricted to a maximum of 24 hours and Great Britain's political and naval moves are being watched with the greatest attention.

'Corruption' in Army Sales

foreign nations at war, of United States uniforms and insignia.

"The present report of your committee and the several reports previously filed demonstrate the necessity for putting an end for all time to the administrative practice of negotiating either sales or purchases with private parties," McSwain charged in the Newbury report.

Validity of a supplemental agreement with the Newbury Manufacturing Co. modifying provisions of an earlier contract for sale of Army clothing, was challenged in the Newbury report.

The contract was originally let on a non-competitive bid basis, but was privately negotiated between representatives of the contractor and Frederick H. Payne, then Assistant Secretary of War, the committee found.

"Evidence before your committee shows that if the goods which were sold under the contract had been advertised for sale on a competitive basis without any restriction against sale for use in the domestic market, the sale could have been made at a price materially higher than the negotiated price named in the contract which was made," the committee stated.

Contract Violated.

"In fact, there is evidence to support a conclusion that a unit price from 100 to 400 per cent greater could have been received for the clothing at that time on a competitive basis and for sale in the domestic markets, and the records tend to show that gross profits of $408,085.68 were realized by selling the goods in the domestic market in direct violation of the contract restriction, against such sale."

The report declared that objections to the contract raised in the office of the Quartermaster General "were peremptorily brushed aside in the office of the Assistant Secretary of War."

The contract required the Newbury Maufacturing Co. to dispose of the goods in foreign markets, but in July, 1933, the company was advised by Assistant Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring that the contract would be modified to permit sales in the United States for one year.

McSwain said the modifications were obtained, both for the Newbury corporation, and the Brimley corporation, a Silverman concern, "only after payments on behalf of the two companies in an amount of almost $100,000 had been made to various attorneys or agents for interceding before the office of the Assistant Secretary of War."

Exerted Pressure.

"Thus influential persons were induced to exert considerable pressure on public officials, with a view of securing their decision favorable to the contractor," said the report.

The committee expressed doubt whether the supplemental agreements was legally sufficient to set aside provisions in the original contract. Even after the year's limit had elapsed, the committee charged, the contractor and others continued to sell clothing in domestic markets.

"For these breaches of contract, the United States surely has a remedy, and should be entitled to an accounting from the contractor and/or its officers and stockholders for gross profits realized by reason of such breaches of contract," said the report.

The committee said the investigation "failed to disclose wherein the Government benefited or received anything of value in exchange for its promise to suspend the operation of the export clause for one year from July 5, 1933."

Probable invalidity of the agreement, the committee said, "constitutes only a part of the irregularities prejudicial to the public interest" found to exist.

The Breecot report dealt with two contracts between the War Department and the Breecot Co., of New York City. It was stated that the first contract was modified three times.

"Under the provisions of the first supplemental contract the Breecot Co. obtained over 100,000 garments without cost and about 450,000 garments at a reduced price," the committee said. "The loss occasioned the Government by this delivery without cost and reduction in price is approximately $142,595.81."

Less Than Half Price.

The committee said that the second Breecot contract, dated September 18, 1930, provided for the sale of 650,000 cotton coats at less than one-half the price fixed by the contract of March 2, 1929, for cotton coats. The committee contends there was no authority at law to modify the contracts.

"Through the supplemental agreements, the validity of which is seriously questioned by your committee," read the report, "and through lax administrative supervision in connection with the performance of the terms of the original agreement, such as by excessive advance deliveries, the Silvermans through their Breecot Co. obtained vast quantities of the property of the United States on which no substantial cash payments were made, and the practical result of the course of procedure followed was that the Silvermans, through their Breecot Co., conducted their surplus property business for a period of more than two years after the Government goods were obtained by them substantially on the sole credit of the United States."

The committee said the Assistant Secretary of War in its opinion "had not been clothed with the power or authority thus to lend the goods or the credit of the Government to a private dealer who had been given a virtual monopoly in the disposition of surplus Army clothing under the terms of the original agreement."

Yugoslavs Expect Violence to Hasten Settlement of Old Problem.

By the Associated Press.

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, April 17.—Croats tonight feared Serb reprisals for the slaying of nine persons by Croat peasants at Kerestinets, near Zagreb.

Some observers believed the violence might hasten a settlement of the long-standing Croat problem. There was apprehension that Dr. Vladko Machek, Croat peasant leader, would be unable to curb Croat passions.

Peasants are guarding Dr. Machek's summer home at Kupinets day and night.

The latest slayings were the outgrowth of the assassinations of a deputy and other killings on April 10.

A group of peasants, returning from mass for one of these victims, learned that seven alleged Chetniks (provocators) were in the castle of Anton Miehaslovich, former governor of the province.

At the castle gates they demanded that the former goernor give the men up. After hours of negotiations the peasant group, now swelled to several hundred, broke into the castle and found seven Chetniks in a bathroom. Six of them were killed and their bodies thrown from windows. The seventh was hurt seriously.

On its way home the mob passed the home of a former Chetnik. Mob leaders asserted he fired into the crowd, so he, his wife and their 17-year-old daughter were killed and the house burned.

Several peasants were wounded by gunfire.

War Against Japan Urged Upon China

Hongkong, April 17 (AP).—Li Chung-Yen, Chinese leader of Kwangsi Province, in a statement today, urged war on Japan as the only solution of China's problems.

Reliance upon the League of Nations or Western powers interested in the Orient, is foolish, he said.

China, continued Li, is handicapped by defeatism. Admitting that the Japanese war machine is powerful, he said it would be handicapped by the vast terrain, poor communications and undeveloped sources of supplies.

By guerrilla tactics and employment of irregulars to harass the Japanese, the leader asserted, China could eventually win. He asserted China has no industrial conters and Japan could only destroy ports, "which are merely trading centers whose destruction would not strangle China economically."

Li added his belief that a war would "bankrupt" Japan and promote civil war in that country.

Byrd Plans Exploration In Patagonia and Brazil

Kansas City, April 17 (AP).—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, who twice explored the Antarctic, said here today he was "hoping to take a shot at the unexplored lands in Patagonia, Brazil and New Guinea," adding: "Just how soon I'll be able to do this I don't know."

Byrd said one more year would be required to complete scientific work of his last Antarctic expedition.

Spain Strikes At Riots in Drive To Jail Fascists

Hundreds Seized; 2 Deaths Bring Toll to 5; Many Are Injured.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, April 17.—Spanish authorities, seeking to halt political disturbances which have claimed five lives in the last two days, began a wholesale round-up of members of the illicit Fascist Party tonight.

Several hundred followers of the militant sector of Jose Antonio Primo de Rivera's Fascist Party were arrested.

The government struck out in a stern attempt to prevent further disorders as two new fatalities today were addded to three deaths in rioting yesterday.

A general strike paralyzed business in the capital and an undetermined number of persons was injured in various clashes.

Socialist, Communist and Syndicalist leaders ordered the strike to end at midnight, asserting the government had promised to take measures against "Fascist provocation."

Eloy Gomez Fernandez and his brother, Antonio, died at the hands of three gunmen who fired at them as they left their home.

Both were members of a family of five brothers, all allied with the Fascist Party and all threatened with death recently because of their political activities.

A heavy guard was thrown around the building where the Cortes was in session after rumors persisted in the lobbies that the army was becoming more indignant over the number of recent disorders.

One unconfirmed report asserted a high cabinet official had tendered his resignation.

After a cabinet meeting, the government was reported to be planning to dissolve illicit organizations such as the Fascist Party and other groups. A second cabinet project was reported to be a law which would take away the pension of any retired army officer who engaged in politics.

The general strike, arising after yesterday's clash of Communists and Fascists, continued through the day.

Restaurants and movies in the capital were closed. Several banks shut their doors, but hotels and drug stores remained open.

Most of the shops were closed after small groups of strikers announced the walkout in the various neighborhoods. The general strike is the first since that in October, 1934, when the Rightists government was in power.

Families Marooned By Swollen River

Winnipeg, Manitoba, April 17 (AP). The Assiniboine River leaped its banks on one of the wildest rampages in a decade today, marooning families, drowning livestock and uprooting trees in the Portage La Prairie area.

Reports over crippled communication lines from the area 55 miles west of Winnipeg, indicated two marooned families were in danger and a steel bridge 3 miles south of the main community may go out soon.

Parties set out by two separate methods to rescue the families of J. D. O'Reilly and Gordon Snider from houses in the midst of the swirling waters above High Bluff Bridge.

J. H. Gearhart Named Parent-Teacher Head

New Deal Foes Help Sentinels, Inquiry Is Told

DuPont, Sloan, Raskob, Smith Named in Lobby Hearing.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate lobby committee yesterday disclosed that a group of prominent New Deal opponents was backing the Sentinels of the Republic financially or was otherwise interested in that organization's activities.

In addition, Kurt Grunwald, $350 a month organizer for the Farmers Independence Council, was told that although he had defied the committee by refusing to answer its questions, he would not be prosecuted for contempt.

And the names of Alfred E. Smith, 1928 Democratic nominee for President; John J. Raskob, whom Smith made Democratic National Committee chairman; Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune; Col. Henry Breckinridge, opponent of Franklin D. Roosevelt for the Democratic Presidential nomination; William Randolph Hearst, publisher, and Gov. Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia, came into the testimony as having displayed their interest and encouragement in one way or another.

It developed that the Sentinels had been interested primarily in fighting the proposed child labor amendment to the Constitution but of late had fought the social security law; the Guffey coal act; and income tax publicity measures.

Roosevelt Depicted.

The organization has conducted an anti-New Deal campaign by the exhibition of motion pictures described as "a novel adaption of the art of political caricature to the screen" and entitled the "Fire Brigade." President Roosevelt is one of the characters depicted.

Smith and former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, it was brought out, saw the show at the winter estate of W. F. Kenny, New York contractor, in Miami a few weeks ago. The two were said to have been "delighted," although Reed thought the characterization of the of the President might be changed.

Grunwald, on Thursday, declined to reveal the names of those he contacted in the West on a campaign against the New Deal farm program. Committee members said they had considered citing him for contempt, but Black said later:

"Neither the witness nor the evidence was important enough to justify taking up the time of the Senate with contempt proceedings. The evidence was material to the inquiry, however."

Yesterday's witness was David F. Sibley, of Boston, assistant treasurer of the Sentinels. He contributed much information on the donations given the organization, which he said numbered 3,000 members. Last year, $90,000 was collected and this year $73,500 so far. Copies of letters taken from the files of Alexander Lincoln, president of the organization, and Raymond Pitcairn, national chairman, provided the rest of the evidence which was read into the records by committeemen.

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, read one of Lincoln's letters, which said that "the Jewish threat is a real one." This was a communication to W. W. Cleveland Runyon, Plainfield, N. J., lawyer, who had criticized in letters of his own "the Jewish brigade Roosevelt took to Washington" and asserted "the old line Americans of $1,200 a year want a Hitler."

Lincoln's reply was that "my hope is in the election next autumn and I believe that our real opportunity lies in the defeat of Roosevelt."

It appeared from another letter that Lincoln favors elimination of the "general welfare" clause of the Constitution and the income tax amendment. This was brought out in communications exchanged with Prof. W. A. Wilson, of Yale, who held similar views.

Raymond Pitcairn was shown by Sibley to have advanced the Sentinels $91,000 to be remitted "when and if" repayment can be made. The Rev. Theodore Pitcairn and Harold F. Pitcairn were shown to have given outright a total of $10,500. Mrs. Raymond Pitcairn $1,000 and Mrs. Harold F. Pitcairn $50. Money also came from Sloan, Stotesbury, Du Pont, Nicholas Roosevelt, Atwater Kent, and former Senator George Wharton Pepper, of Pennsylvania.

Correspondence dealing with the possibilities of a merger with the American Liberty League also was read into the record. Negotiations were dropped in a friendly spirit, it was shown.

Along this line Black read a memorandum written by C. A. Berry, a Sentinels worker, after an interview with Thomas L. Chadbourne, New York lawyer, declaring that Smith had delivered his January address in Washington against the Administration in order to remove "financial taint" from the league.

The memo read in part:

"In passing it might be noted that Al Smith refused one invitation to speak to the league at Mr. Chadbourne's insistence, but accepted the second invitation with the comment that the league needed him to help clear it of its financial taint and that he felt he was sufficiently known by the country to be able to use any board to spring back into the public eye.

"This comment is made to explain the statement by Mr. Chadbourne that the league has needed Smith and needs an opportunity to support such a program as the Sentinels. He further states that John W. Davis is also a close personal friend and he believes that through Davis and Smith he could secure the money necessary from the league provided that "minor changes are made."

Senate Convicts Federal Judge Ritter tin (Republican), Vermont, jumped to his feet.

The Vermonter insisted that the vote did not constitute a two-thirds majority because one or two Senators in the chamber had not voted. He added that it was "monstrous" to convict a man on a combination of charges of which he had already been acquitted.

The voice of the Senator was drowned by demands of "regular order" and by the voices of Senators insisting on presenting points of order. Adding to the confusion was the noise of spectators leaving the galleries. Pittman overruled Austin's objections and the verdict stood. Then the Senate voted not to bar Ritter from holding office in the future.

The balloting climaxed ten days of hearing and deliberation. For two days the entire Senate discussed the case behind locked doors, reaching a decision Thursday evening to vote yesterday.

On the last vote, three Senators reversed their verdicts on the first count. They were Senator McNary (Republican), of Oregon, who changed his vote from guilty to not guilty, and Senators Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, and Pittman, from not guilty to guilty. The changes clinched the final decision.

It was the twelfth time in United States history that the Senate has gone through the solemn formality of an impeachment vote. It was the fourth time the Senate had found a defendant guilty.

Two Women Vote.

For the first time in history two women Senators participated in such a vote. Senator Hattie Caraway (Democrat), of Arkansas, voted "not guilty" on most ballots. Senator Rose M. Long (Democrat), of Louisiana, voted "guilty" on every count.

The last conviction in a Senate impeachment trial was that of Associate Judge Robert W. Archbald of the United States Commerce Court, in 1913. The last trial was that of Judge Harold Louderback, of California, who was acquitted in 1933.

Most famous of all impeachment trials was that of President Andrew Johnson, who was acquitted by a margin of one vote, in 1868, after a trial lasting three months.

Charges against Ritter, as in all impeachment cases, were brought by the House of Representatives. House managers conducted the prosecution. Members of the Senate sat as a "jury," with the privilege of asking questions, presented in writing. Ritter was defended by his own lawyers.

Former County Official Severely Hurt by Auto

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., April 17.—Isaiah Roe, former commissioner of revenue in Frederick County, was injured severely today when struck by an automobile near Hayfield. His skull was reported fractured.

Clarence Peffer, Winchester letter carrier, was the driver of the car. R. E. Bayliss, State officer, said he had been informed Roe stepped from behind a parked truck into the path of the car. No charges have been preferred, but a hearing will be held.

Flood Will Probated.

Winchester, Va., April 17.—Disposing of an estate of approximately $40,000, the will of the late John Heber Flood, who died early this year at Winter Park, Fla., has been admitted to probate in Frederick County, his widow, Mrs. Mary Bowie Flood being named as beneficiary. She was named as executrix and has posted her personal bond in the sum of $80,000.

AAA Holds Up Crop Payments Due to 131,000

Fraud Is Charged on Some Contracts; Errors Delay Other Benefits.

By the Associated Press.

Records in the AAA comptroller's office revealed yesterday that benefit payments due on more than 131,000 crop control contracts had been suspended by the Adjustment Administration.

Officials would make no estimates of the amount of money involved in the suspensions, but said the action was temporary in most cases and that the farmers eventually would get their benefit checks.

In some cases, however, evidence of fraud was found, and high officials asserted that in such instances, when contracts had been violated, the suspension would become permanent.

Technical errors, mistakes labeled by officials as "honest" and legal technicalities were said to have caused most of the suspensions. No estimate was made of the number of contracts suspended because of alleged violations.

The AAA books showed that 96,865 contracts for 1935 had been suspended and the comptroller said about 35,000 additional suspensions have been carried over from previous years.

A tabulation compiled by officials in the comptroller's office showed the following suspensions, as compared with the number of contracts in effect for 1935:

Wheat, 580,000 contracts, 41,608 suspensions corn hogs, 990,000 contracts, 16,368 suspensions; cotton, 1,123,000 contracts, 25,181 suspensions; Bankhead cotton pool payments, 3,966 suspensions; peanuts, 10,500 contracts, 676 suspensions; rice, 8,274 contrac 24 suspensions; sugar, 84,500 contracts, 2,729 suspensions; tobacco, 217,000 contracts and 6,313 suspensions.

No breakdown was available of the 35,000 suspended contracts carried over from previous years. Neither could an estimate be obtained of the percentage of small and large farmers involved.

Seek Informant.

Authoritative AAA sources said meanwhile that there was some concern over how information pertaining to large benefit payments had been made public. Officials revealed that an investigation was underway to locate the source of this information. The same officials maintained that the AAA could not make public these names and amounts unless specifically requested to do so by the Senate.

Coincidentally it was reported that the largest payment made under the corn-hog program, approximately $157,000, went to Fontana Farms, Inc., of California. This corporation was said to have from 5,000 to 6,000 sows farrowing two litters of pigs a year.

Shenandoah Bids Reopening Sought

Secretary Ickes had before him yesterday a suggestion by the National Park Service that the lone bid received for concessions in the Shenandoah National Park be rejected and new proposals asked, according to the Associated Press.

The suggestion was made on advice of park service counsel. Ickes was said to have taken no action on the recommendation.

The one bid, received March 31, was submitted by Percy Loth, of Staunton. He stipulated that the Federal Government should install necessary utilities.

The reason cited for the recommendation that the bid be rejected was that the interior Department had no funds for installation of utilities.

A By-Pass Is Needed.

The decision of the Board of Commissioners to replace the Belgian cobblestones on P street by modern paving, against the protests of residents on that street, has been carelessly described as a triumph of progress over sentiment. That explanation may serve to gloss over an acute traffic problem in Georgetown, but it offers no solution to the difficulties which are distressing residents of this area.

Home owners on P street are opposed to having it paved now because they realize that such "improvement" will convert a quiet residential street into an artery of traffic. That, however, is not the only issue. Additional thoroughfares are certainly needed to carry traffic now passing through Georgetown, but P street cannot properly serve that purpose. It is narrow. Whatever traffic it can carry will be poured into the already congested Dupont Circle on one end, and into crowded Wisconsin avenue on the other end. An expedient of this sort scarcely merits designation as "progress."

What is really needed is a by-pass around Georgetown for through traffic. Attempts to force this traffic through congested residential sections merely creates new difficulties. The more reasonable alternatives are the connection of K street with Key Bridge, or the diversion of traffic across the bridge to a new highway on the bed of the old C. & O. Canal. Traffic which is now forced through the residential area of Georgetown could then use M street more freely.

From the viewpoint of constructive city planning, the Commissioners should give first attention to this major improvement. Now that they have ordered the paving of P street, there is danger that they will use this expedient as an excuse for neglecting the more urgent changes. Such a course would be inconsistent with the objective of keeping traffic out of residential areas, thus reducing the accident rate and preserving the amenities of life. It is to be hoped that the Commissioners' idea of progress will not stop at the replacement of cobblestones by concrete on a street that is in no way fitted to become an artery of traffic.

Public Works Procedure.

President Roosevelt's assurance that no more work-relief funds will be allocated to the Florida ship canal and the Passamaquoddy tide-harnessing project is the only appropriate sequel to the refusal of Congress to make appropriations for these undertakings. To allocate new funds to these projects now would be to undermine that legislative control of the public purse which is the greatest safeguard against tyrannical government.

Funds to continue the two projects in a modified way may be sought from Congress later. It is said, for example, that Army engineers are studying the construction of a barge and yacht canal across Florida. That would be a very different undertaking from the proposed sea-level ship canal. When, and if, these "modified" plans are submitted they should be considered upon thier merits in relation to the budgetary situation. In the meantime, the President would do well to stop all work on both projects, the more so because their future is so uncertain.

A principle even more important than the possible waste of $160,000,000 is involved in the abandonment of 'Quoddy and the ship canal. President Roosevelt committed the Federal Government to these costly projects without the approval of Congress and against the advice of his own Public Works Administration. Instead of setting aside enough of the work-relief fund to finish the projects, he made small allocations to each, apparently hoping that Congress would let itself be automatically committed to continue the work out of regular annual appropriations. Fortunately for the continuation of responsible government, the Legislature has flatly repudiated this devious procedure.

It goes without saying that Congress is not the ideal body to pass on the desirability of specific public works projects. Pork-barrel tactics are too strongly entrenched. But to have latitude in this field, under lump-sum appropriations, an Administration must show itself far more scrupulous than the New Deal has been in launching the Florida canal and 'Quoddy projects.

The adoption of a sound policy of handling public works is the more important because of the President's suggestion that $500,000,000 should be made available for this purpose annually. If such a program is to be scientifically planned, Congress will have to leave a considerable measure of discretion to an administrative agency, after laying down general principles and rules for its guidance. But the grant of discretion must be contingent upon the organization of a public works authority that will keep severely aloof from politics, sectional pressures and visionary schemes. Still more important, the President will have to respect its judgment above that of his political advisers.

Public works will continue to be a hodge-podge, involving appalling waste, until an administrative agency of unquestioned integrity, impartiality and broad experience can be developed on a civil service basis. In the meantime, Congressional approval of substantial projects seems to be the only practical safeguard against blunders of the 'Quoddy type, in spite of the log-rolling and pork-barrel propensities of the Legislature.

Have Sanctions Failed?

With the fall of Dessye, less than 200 miles by fairly good road from Addis Ababa, the complete defeat of Ethiopia is clearly foreshadowed. Guerrilla warfare may continue for a long time; the rainy season and the difficulties of "mopping up" in mountainous country will both delay the imposition of the conqueror's will. But there is no doubt that the backbone of Ethiopian resistance is now broken. In less than seven months, overcoming formidable obstacles, the Italian armies have practically subjugated a hitherto unconquered tribal kingdom. From the purely military viewpoint their achievement commands respect.

The question arises as to whether the threatened overthrow of Ethiopian independence spells also discarding the device of sanctions, applied to Italy by the League of Nations in an effort to deprive an aggressor nation of the fruits of treaty violation. Although it is clear that sanctions, even in the limited form utilized, have severely injured Italy's national economy, it is equally clear that they are not likely to achieve their basic purpose. That being so, will the system be invoked in future against some other formidable aggressor?

While no certain answer can be given to a question involving so many imponderables it is clear that this experiment in collective action cannot be dismissed as a failure merely because it has proved ineffective against Il Duce's determination. Political devices, like scientific experiments, are seldom completely successful on their first trial. The criterion of judgment is not so much immediate results, as the presence or absence of indications that with refinements the device holds definite promise as a working instrumentality. The Wright brothers were not expected to fly the Atlantic when they got off the ground at Kitty Hawk.

In several respects the sanctions against Italy have proved, from the detached viewpoint of the political scientist, surprisingly effective. It was noteworthy, in the first place, that some two score independent nations proved willing to take collective action of no direct benefit, and of considerable economic injury, to themselves. Making all appropriate discounts for British self-interest and leadership in this matter, the willingness of the League members to stand by the principles of their co-operative organization still remains impressive.

The effectiveness of sanctions in actual operation is shown by the statistics made public at Geneva this week. In February of this year Italy's exports to 23 leading nations were barely half the value of goods exported to the same countries in February, 1935. These countries, moreover, include the United States and Germany, both of which have passively or actively worked to defeat the success of the Geneva policy. Limiting the list to sanctionist countries it is found that the reduction of Italian exports has been over 90 per cent.

This invisible yet very material pressure, it will be noted, has been exercised without any serious danger of extending the area of military operations. Italy cannot go to war with Jugoslavia, for instance, because that country bought only $300 worth of Italian goods this February. It is not merely an effective form of pressure against an aggressor which Geneva has developed; of even more importance is the fact that this pressure is essentially pacific in application.

Whatever the outcome in Ethiopia it seems improbable that civilization will turn its back on so practical and potentially effective a device for making the "outlawry of war" something more than an empty phrase.

Spring Cleaning.

A local interior decorator recently said that in taking annual inventory, the wise housewife will do well to discard all bric-a-brac, knickknacks and museum pieces that have been dust-gathering in her home for years. Now, then, is the time for Dad and Brother to stand on their rights or forever after keep their peace. Cherished gadgets, no-account pipes, dilapidated hats, springless watches—they're in immediate danger of going the way of all trash! If winter comes, can spring-cleaning be far behind?

Lives there a man with soul so dead, who never to his wife has said: This is my own, my personal desk . . . For that very reason, no doubt, its pigeonholes take on all the allure and promise of a treasure hunt. It is a very strong-minded woman, indeed, who can forego a turn here and there with the duster, causing a flurry of letters, receipts, cigar butts, ashes, stamps, clippings, etc.

This seasonal memo to housewives calls to mind two notable collections of dust-gatherers. The first one consists, among other things, of: "Tools. Bones, various. Preserved Indian baby. African ditto. Bottled preparations, various . . . Cats. Articulated English baby. Dogs. Ducks. Glass eyes, various." The second, less macabre, boasts: ". . . several penny boxes of matches, scissors, a letter opener, half a dozen pencils and other odds and ends . . . and a white cloth elephant, a gray velvet donkey, a small burro, a gaily painted wooden mule, a small metal squirrel and a blue china rooster."

However, there's not much that can be done about either of these piles of junk. The first was a Dickensian inventory of Silas Wegg's shop. The latter was a partial list of the items on the desk of the President of the United States!

How To Balance The Budget.

Both the House and the Senate ignored President Roosevelt's recommendation to cancel the authorization to spend $125,000,000 for the Federal-aid highway system during the next fiscal year. And this week the House voted to authorize an additional outlay of $440,000,000 for road construction in the fiscal years 1938 and 1939.

So long as Congress clings to this heedless practice of voting new appropriations, or authorizations to spend, without covering the costs of such unbudgeted outlays, there is little hope of bringing the Federal budget into balance. And if the President were to present a plan offering reasonable assurance of producing a balanced budget within the near future, the irresponsible spending proclivities of Congress could be much more easily controlled. Administrative profligacy encourages legislative carelessness.

To secure Congressional support for a program of living within our means, the Administration must be prepared to cut out the waste, graft, and "political skullduggery" inseparable from the present system of work relief. It must also reduce relief expenditures to the minimum required to relieve the needy, instead of permitting Federal funds to be frittered away on questionable work-relief projects. Moreover, the money appropriated for relief purposes should be used to supplement State and local contributions. If waste is to be curtailed, local governments must again become the responsible agencies for administering relief, financed so far as possible by local taxation.

Reductions in expenditures, however, will not suffice to bring the budget into balance. There is also need of a tax program yielding substantial revenues without retarding recovery and therefore in the long run cutting down taxable incomes. The proposed levy on corporate surpluses is an essentially unsound proposal. It is unsatisfactory both as a revenue producer and because of its tendency to dissipate capital reserves needed to finance business expansion, and to serve as a cushion against contraction.

The politicians who shy at sales taxes, and object to levying income taxes in the lower brackets for fear of an unfavorable reaction from the public, underrate the intelligence of the average man. The American people are not fools. They know that there is no painless way of securing the revenue needed to balance the budget. If they are not called upon to cover the Federal deficit by direct taxation, they realize that they will have to shoulder the burden of taxes levied upon industry indirectly, through acceptance of lower living standards and reduced opportunities for employment.

Budget balancing, in short, requires a complete overhauling of our relief policies and a general pruning of expenses, together with a courageous and scientific tax program. In addition to these reforms, it is imperative to promote recovery by effective methods. Wasteful "pump priming," which creates unsound fiscal conditions, has done infinitely more to retard than to stimulate business activity. Monetary manipulation and increasing governmental interference with private business have intimidated investors, obstructed revival of the durable goods industries and prevented the re-employment of millions of idle men dependent upon the heavy industries.

A reversal of those Administration policies which discourage investors from putting their savings into new enterprises would provide more employment, bring more revenue into the Treasury, and automatically cut down the relief bill. That is the only way to balance the budget without placing intolerably heavy tax burdens upon the people.

Judges On Trial.

From the New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Of the nine Federal judges impeached and brought before the Senate (prior to 1936) three were convicted, four were acquitted, one resigned before trial and in one case the proceedings were abandoned. The first conviction dates back to 1804, when a New Hampshire jurist was found guilty of "drunkenness, and the last to date was recorded in 1913, when Judge Archbald of the United States Commerce Court was adjudged guilty of "corrupt collusion." In 1805 an associate justice of the United States Supreme Court itself was brought to trial and acquitted. During the '60s a Tennessee jurist was tried for "supporting secession" and convicted. In other cases the charges ranged from "tyrannous treatment of counsel" and "favoritism" to "misconduct in office."

That only ten United States judges have been impeached since the establishment of the Federal judicial system indicates the general high quality and character of its personnel. Five of the ten have been presented for trial, however, since the turn of the present century, which may invite less favorable inferences. The impeachment process naturally is cumbersome, and that may help to explain its infrequent use. The House has been asked to vote impeachments 38 times, but refused in 25 cases. The Senate has voted only three convictions. The occasional convictions justify its set-up as a wise and salutary safeguard.

Floods, '89 And '36.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There has been some discussion in regard to the stages of the March flood in the District of Columbia, as compared with the stages of the '89 flood. The stages of the March flood above Washington were, in general, higher than the '89 flood, while here at Washington they were apparently lower. It is believed that there was more water at the crest stage in the March flood than there was in the '89 flood and there has been some discussion as to why the stages at Washington were apparently lower for this flood than for the '89 flood if there was more water flowing in the recent flood.

In this connection, I recall seeing a discussion in newspaper letter columns of what would happen in case there was another '89 flood. I am not sure of the date of this discussion, but it was, I believe, within ten years. The discussion was started by someone wondering what would happen if an '89 flood should occur, in view of the improvements or the apparent restrictions in the channel of the river opposite Washington. This letter was replied to by someone who was apparently qualified to make an intelligent reply. As I recall, the gist of the second letter was to the effect that the improvements in the river channel opposite Washington were of such a nature that a flood similar to that of '89 would be passed by the city at a lower stage, or at least pass the city without causing serious damage.

Uninformed Washingtonian.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I'm always glad to entertain the tourist eager-eyed, and yet his questionings sometimes upset my civic pride. He says, "I'd surely like to live where Congressmen orate; to shake the hand of Presidents—touch elbows with the great." And then recalling public men of these and other days, he bares my abject ignorance with bland, relentless gaze, and with a look he makes me feel I've shamed my native land when I confess I've never clasped a Presidential hand.

His questions probe what I don't know of statues in the parks; his visit to Mount Vernon he discusses and remarks that I, no doubt, have often stood on that inspiring spot. By his dazed glance I know he's grieved to hear that I have not.

Alas, it is a dreadful thing to have to answer thus regarding spots the tourist thinks should be well known to us, or have him listen, which is worse, relying on our word, to vague replies concerning sights of which we've never heard.

Oh, children do not fail to heed this lesson or you may, when you're no longer young, be forced as I am to display gross ignorance, though intimate with ancient Greece and Rome, of things you ought to know about the town that you call home.

Alien Bill Debate.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Up here in Massachusetts we are interested in the following excerpt from the Congressional Record of April 4. It comes from the debate in the Senate on the Coolidge-Kerr "deportation" bill, of which our junior Senator is one of the sponsors:

Mr. Coolidge: The Senator (Mr. Reynolds) ought to know something about Massachusetts. He paid a visit to my State, which was a great compliment, and he saw many historical places and points of interest there. Perhaps about the only thing he did not see were the citizens of Massachusetts dressed in Indian uniforms tipping tea over into the ocean. However, as the Senator visited Massachusetts, he can realize the cosmopolitan character of the population we have there. In Massachusetts there are many Italians, Germans, Jews and other nationalities, and the information I get from practically every source in Massachusetts indicates that they are hoping that this bill will pass. There are many aliens in Massachusetts. I do not know how many deportable aliens we have, but I understand that we have quite a good many, and that in the State of the Senator from North Carolina there are five aliens who are deportable.

Everything Is Relative.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of April 9 under caption of "The Need for More Purchasing Power," there is a letter which exhibits the type of confused thinking which will inevitably make a howling babel of this fair land if sounder views do not prevail.

Mr. Babcock is right in saying that labor must constantly seek more. He is wrong in assuming that the small fraction of labor which has the privilege of working for the most generous paymaster on earth (Uncle Sam) has a right to hop into the trough with all four feet while the rest of us razorbacks must be satisfied with a few stray drops of the succulent pottage that splash over.

As Mr. Babcock says, everything is relative today. Very well, here is a problem in arithmetic. If the average Government worker in our Capital City has been gypped, how much more should workers in other lines feel gypped and downtrodden?

Playgoer's Plea.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Although not a regular patron of the playhouse, I feel that something should be done for the disillusioned theatergoers of Washington.

Occasionally there appears at the National a subject vitally interesting to me. So it was the other day when someone or other informed me that "Tobacco Road" was in town. I dashed madly to the box office window.

"All sold out," yelled the ticket vendor.

And so it is again this week. It is impossible, say the papers, to get within throwing distance of the peerless Cyrano—unless one can afford to pay a cool $2.75.

The Capital of the United States, it seems to me, should provide adequate facilities for the accommodation of its theater lovers. Why can't we have another theater to satisfy the obvious demand?

I'm too busy a man to reserve seats a couple of months in advance, and if I had done so, someone else would be as I am now.

Irony, If We Mistake Not.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Can it be that deliberately perpetuated hypocrisy is at last yielding to a genuine and honestly equitable prosecution of gambling laws in the District of Columbia?

Can it be possible that any public official dares to brave the wrath and resentment and condemnation (possibly the loss of position itself) by honestly admitting, as District Attorney Garnett appears to have done, that gambling is gambling irrespective of the pockets into which the proceeds go or the hallowed nature of the gambling "joint?"

The picayune fry which scratches a doubtful living from the pennies and nickels and dimes of number-writing; those who invest their dollars to eke a livelihood from the nickels garnered from bagatelle and claw machines; the boys who patiently wait with shifty eyes the coming of desperadoes so wicked as to want to bet upon a race; there, so says good old Hypocrisy, are the culprits for whom the law was writ and its strong arms sinewed. What matters it that these unfortunates are, in most cases, merely fighting to live and to support their dependents? The law is the law. Their rackets are games of chance. The good of all humanity demands they be driven from the temple!

But to say that church or fraternity or—Ye Gods!—parent-teachers' organizations are amenable to such a law is downright outrageous—unpardonable—denying and desecrating all principles of custom and the ages! It simply cannot be! Our good District Attorney must have been misinterpreted.

Our House Of Glass.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is said that additional funds will be asked of President Roosevelt for further investigation of the American Telephone Co.

Why not a careful investigation of the billions of the taxpayers' money that is being flung near and far to all portions of our country? Surely the American taxpayer has the right to know what is being done with his money. Why is this Administration so secretive and reluctant to place the cards squarely on the table? According to Rush Holt, the graft and corruption in the PWA smell to the high heavens.

It has been said that if the Federal Government functioned one-tenth as efficiently as the Bell Telephone system we would not be involved in such prodigious social disorder and up to our very ears in debt.

Why not clean our political house of glass instead of hurling costly brickbats at great corporations in the hope of discovering some flaws?

More On Washington's Parks

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The bozos and bozoettes who give your estimable sheet the daily squint are right when they say Franklin Square should not be turned into a roller skating rink and beautiful spectacle as seen from an airplane just because New Dealers are beneficent enough to use some of the deficit to pay the bill.

My only interest is that I pass through this arboreal breathing space daily on my way to the salt mines. I don't know a lilac from a broken political promise. I am about as sentimental as the steel work in the new Interior Department Building, but put your digit on any mug in Washington who approves those dizzy plans or sees any call for them and in return I'll point out to you a nut who should be merged with the nearest hoosegow in the interests of preventing another bloody war.

JOHNNY ELI.
Washington, April 16.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

That horse-chestnut tree
Will never be
A joy to me
Another spring—
Ivory magnolia
And crab tree pink
Will linger only in memory's garden.

A knoll adorned
By copper beeches
A fountain screened
By lilacs serene,
Will be seen
Only by "that inward eye
Which is the bliss of solitude."

I sigh
For pebble walks
'Round flower beds
Bright with mignonette
And roses sweet—
A parking lot
Upon this spot
Seems desecration—
Can it be fair
To do away with Franklin Square?

The Post Impressionist

From Hampton's To Hampden.

Post Office, Saturday.

IN the time when this columnist was somewhat more familiar with Cambridge, Mass., than he has been ever since, a certain, slim, quiet young fellow—then just past seventeen, in fact—matriculated at Harvard. He was the least assertive of youths and didn't remain long in college, but his classmates have had plenty of cause to remember him and be proud of their academic association with him.

His name was W. H. Dougherty.

Brooklyn was his native borough. His father was a lawyer well-known there and in Manhattan: John H. Dougherty. Paul, the elder brother of W. H., studied art abroad, returning home to become an excellent painter, A. N. A., N. A. and member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters.

More studious than most Harvard freshmen—this W. H. Dougherty. He had a passion for the drama—particularly the poetic drama: had a splendid voice, too, and a clear enunciation informed by a thorough understanding of the text.

He would read to his friends, when he managed to overcome his shyness, bits of Shakespeare and Marlowe and Webster. Those Elizabethans and their creations came alive again and walked the Cambridge streets from the Charles River to the elms of the Yard.

He would say:

"The French poetic drama isn't really the mere national form which non-French critics think it is. In blank verse, it could be made popular in the American theater."

"Never!" said those pundits.

"I believe so." Dougherty persisted. "I should like to play such a work—if I could only find a translator capable of doing it justice."

"That," the pundits answered, "is an impossibility."

W. H. Dougherty was Walter Hampden Dougherty. He is Walter Hampden.

Two years after Hampden entered Harvard there entered Yale the lad—slightly Hampden's junior—who was to be the translator Hampden sought.

Him we knew a good while later—when young literary persons used to ring the bell of an old-fashioned red-brick house in East Sixteenth street, not far from Gramercy Park, Manhattan, and go upstairs to tea. That house had been the home of a solid merchant of the Eighteen-Seventies. Now, still solid, still uncompromising, its rooms were let to studious lodgers, two of whom—a couple of girls enthusiastically crashing the gates of Parnassus in an era when gate-crashing wasn't so called—occupied what the landlady described as her "second-floor front-and-back."

These girls were Ethel M. Kelley and Louise Dutton.

Ethel had worked well as fiction-editor—such was the atrocious title for a dignified job—on Hampton's Magazine. Louise was one of Ethel's discoveries: a Maine girl. Louise produced delightful and successful serial stories—"The Wishing Moon" among them—and pretty soon married Parker Fillmore, who, for his part, wrote short-stories which would win a prize in any contest today. Ethel provided excellent novels—witness "Turn About Elenor"—and equally excellent teas.

To the latter came frequently the Yale man we've mentioned: tall, pale, not much of a talker. They called him Bill.

He was teaching English up at Columbia. However, we didn't see how he could teach it well: he wrote it too well for that.

He wrote verse superbly. Everybody thought he was going to be another Keats. So of course he would never turn out anything popular—never "make the magazines." And he had one mad theory.

He would say:

"The French poetic drama isn't just the dry formalism that most Americans think it is. I should like to translate some of it into English. If I did it justice, it would be recognized as vital, vivid, beautiful. The theater-going American public would love it—always provided that, now Mansfield's dead, there was an American actor capable of playing it."

"Bill" was (William) Brian Hooker.

We don't know when Hampden and Hooker met—probably in 1922. But that they would meet was a certainty. It was a certainty, too, that Hampden's production of Hooker's translation of "Cyrano de Bergerac" would result. Barring some textual modernisms that strike the Post-Impressionist as anachronistic, the play is pure poetry—and Hampden is a splendid Cyrano. If this year's engagement is really Hampden's farewell to the role, the American theater will have to wear black next winter.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

A Different Frick.

Mr. Ford Frick, the president of the National League, recently issued an order forbidding members of rival ball clubs to shake hands, exchange visits between dugouts and otherwise fraternize in the sight of the customers under pain of a $10 fine for each offense. The second day of the season Dick Bartell, of the Giants, and Van Lingle Mungo, of the Brooklyn daffiness boys, got into a fight and were themselves fired out of the game for disorderly conduct. Somewhere between the two extremes lies the ideal competitive disposition for employes of the National League, and we can leave them with their problem to consider the wiser system which governs the relations of the wage slaves in other lines of work.

I am more familiar with the newspaper business than with any other trade, and I distinctly recall that when Mr. Frick was packing his little portable writing machine around the circuit he often fraternized with the employes of other publishers in and out of working hours.

• • • •

Mr. Frick was a Hearst man, but he would draw up a chair in the press coop, borrow and lend cigarettes and even drink soda with men who worked for Ochs, Cox, Scripps-Howard, Curtis or McCormick. At night on the trains he would sit in at the bridge games with rivals in the craft, and because he was a fast, glib writer, with plenty of words in his finger tips, he could always be relied on to make literature for any erring brother who had swooned away for any reason.

This sort of thing, by the code of conduct which Mr. Frick now lays down for the athletes of his league, was a betrayal of his employer's property rights in him, but we didn't have that code in the press coops, and I can't understand how one so amiable as Mr. Frick acquired his present ideas.

There have been some city editors in New York who held the same views that he now applies to the sweaty artists in the pads and flannels, but somehow they never could make their orders stick.

Outside the office a man is on his own, and who can tell, when he phones in his piece for the papers, whether he was personally present when the district attorney thundered, "Crime must go!" or stopped in at another shop to ask about a better job and thus arrived late and caught the prosecutor's ringing declaration on the bounce?

• • • •

The fraternal spirit and practice among the New York journalists is always a marvel to boys and girls newly come to town prepared to fight hard for fame and fortune against appalling odds. The greenest hick from Omaha who doesn't know his way to Brooklyn, much less how to get back, discovers himself drifting along with the men who are his enemies, and when the hour comes to sit down somewhere and divvy up street numbers, first names and what the suspect said to Inspector Clancy he finds that the stars have been working for him.

Thus initiated into the fraternity of enemies he develops the proper spirit, and so when he has learned his way around the town he in turn breaks out his old envelopes and reads his notes out loud for the goggle-eyed cub from Billings.

The spirit seems to be merely that reporters hear no call to let each other's blood merely because their employers are rivals in a great industry. Reporters change employers as casually as employers change reporters, and in New York, if nowhere else, the feuds of the men upstairs at the carved oak desks are disowned by the hands themselves.

• • • •

Now, in Chicago the practice is different. Somehow, in Chicago, the boss man's grudges and interests are injected into the veins of the staff, and reporters scheme and worry in household groups to scoop their rivals and get them in dutch and, if possible, get them canned for falling down. Mr. Frick, however, was not a Chicago journalist, so his decree against the fraternal handshake between employes of rival firms cannot be thus explained. Nor can it be justified by anything in the conduct in the baseball employers who hire and fire the athletes with a whimsical hand. Mr. Breadon, of the Cardinals, will take noggins with Mr. Stoneham, of the Giants, or any other rival in the business, and over their noggins the magnates may decide to trade into new surroundings a sterling athlete who until that very moment has been forbidden to pass the time of day with his new colleagues.

The professional football players generally have better sense. They, too, like the New York reporters, regard themselves as working men with jobs to hold and fraternize in such way that they seem to be milling around in the most ferocious combat. But they seldom bear down on a crippled man and often help him up. The fellow feeling is not the only reason for this. If you do bear down on a cripple until he can't get up any more the other side then takes him out and puts in a sound man who can pay a better game and might cripple you back.

Police Balk New Riots After 16 Die in Poland

Lwow, Poland, April 17 (AP).—Sporadic attempts to renew rioting, which cost an estimated 16 lives on the streets yesterday, were made today, but watchful police cut them short.

Police patrols continually passed through the streets in armored cars and assemblies of more than three persons were forbidden. Some 200 persons have been arrested since yesterday.

The fighting resulted in injuries to 32 police, seven of whom are in a critical condition. Authorities blamed Communists for the fighting, which broke out as a funeral procession for an unemployed man, killed in a demonstration Tuesday, passed by.

What Is The I. L. O.?

Two Studies Describe Work Of Geneva Labor Office To Reassure Congress Considering Further U. S. Co-operation.

By Smith Simpson.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Two works on the International Labor Organization, published in recent months, have acquired more than passing interest to Americans by the discussion of the I. L. O. within the past few weeks by members of Congress. Appropriations for the Departments of State and Labor for the year 1937 have involved the question of the extent to which this country should co-operate with the I. L. O., and indeed the question whether we should co-operate at all. Many members of Congress are now asking: "What is the International Labor Organization? What is it doing? What is it all about?" Two careful works, "The Origin of the International Labor Organization," edited by James T. Shotwell, Columbia University Press, 2 vols., and "Labor in the League System," by Francis G. Wilson, Stanford University Press, will answer these questions.

Too much praise cannot be given to Prof. Shotwell and his youthful assistant, Miss Carol Riegelman, for their success in producing an accurate record of the origins of the I. L. O. and in assembling documents from all over the western world to make their publication possible. Their work is in two volumes.

In the first volume Ernest Mahaim (Belgium) shows the relation between international and national labor legislation; Sir Malcolm Delevigne (Great Britain) gives a sketch of international labor legislation before the World War and shows the need of a permanent institution such as the I. L. O. to make that legislation efficient; Carol Riegelman (United States) describes the war-time proposals for an international organization which came from labor groups, and the creation of the I. L. O. at the Peace Conference as an organization to function side by side with the League and the World Court, is well presented by Charles Picquenard (France), Leifur Magnusson (United States), Edward J. Phelan (Great Britain) and Ewald Kuttig (Germany). The second volume contains documents relating to the genesis of the I. L. O.

• • • •

Not only do the names of the contributors to Dr. Shotwell's volumes indicate the truly international character of the I. L. O.—for nearly all the contributors played a leading part in its fashioning at the Peace Conference—but they emphasize the care which was taken by Prof. Shotwell to secure a well-rounded, accurate record. The result is a piece of finished scholarship which all students of international affairs have greatly welcomed. The result, also, is an interesting account of the genesis of this international organization of which the United States is a member, an account which more and more Americans will read as the years go by.

Many labor and industrial problems have become so wide in their scope they are no longer national problems capable of solution by national means. They are international problems, often embracing many countries. This was clearly recognized at the end of the war, and because of the demonstrated need of an international institution to deal systematically with international labor problems the I. L. O. was created.

Forces which compelled national labor legislation in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries in order to improve the conditions of the employed were even then compelling international labor legislation. Formerly, as Ernest Mahaim says in his chapter on "The Historical and Social Importance of International Labor Legislation" in Dr. Shotwell's volumes, "a single recalcitrant employer might prevent all other employers from doing what they should." Today, a single socially backward nation can prevent all other nations from doing what they should because of the competitive advantage which can be derived in the markets of the world from labor exploitation. The same "higher considerations" of life, health, safety, morals and liberty of workers which have forced national conscience to pass national laws force a growing international conscience to develop and enforce an international labor code.

The international labor legislation which arises from the activity of the I. L. O. is voluntary. Dr. Wilson's treatise emphasizes this. No government has to belong to the I. L. O. and nobody coerces any government to belong. Furthermore, after the annual conference of the I. L. O. adopts a convention, there is reserved to each national government the right to ratify or to refuse to ratify the convention, as it sees fit. But 62 governments of the world, including our own, have decided that the work of the I. L. O. is indispensable, and are voluntarily taking part in its work, and Dr. Wilson's book shows why it is indispensable.

Annual conferences are held by the I. L. O. to which employer and worker representatives are accredited as well as government representatives. This is the only opportunity offered anywhere for a world-wide, yet systematic and searching, discussion of common labor and industrial problems. Discussion occurs on a few selected subjects by persons who are especially versed in them and affected by them; and a vote is taken on each subject. Reports on each subject are prepared by the office of the I. L. O. in advance and are so well done they have come to be a valuable source of information for the guidance of national governments in developing their individual systems of labor legislation.

In other words, research and action go hand in hand in the I. L. O. Its conferences get somewhere. It is not mere talk. Votes are taken; and conventions are adopted—so far—which through more than 650 separate national ratifications have laid a solid foundation of high labor standards throughout the world. These conventions deal with many matters of vital concern to labor. Such an achievement is not simply an appreciable achievement; it is a great achievement.

As Dr. Wilson expresses it, American labor "can turn to the Organization because it demands universal freedom of association and because it seeks to protect the workers internationally through the international codification of labor standards; capital can turn to it because, in fact, the Organization is the great effort of a post-war generation to find an alternative to labor affiliation with Moscow; the humanitarian can turn to it because it seeks social progress before it demands a pernicious national profit; and governments bewildered by economic chaos or fretful with the uncertainty of prosperity can turn to it for information, for discussion and for assistance."

Ford Declares Election Won't Hurt Business

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, April 17.—Henry Ford said today he believes the coming Presidential election will have little effect on business.

The millionaire automobile manufacturer, in high spirits, stopped here for a few minutes on his trip with Mrs. Ford to Washington, Pa., to participate in an old-fashioned dance.

He said:

"The New Deal has neither harmed nor helped business. It has nothing to do with industry.

"I don't care who is elected President. It makes no difference. If businessmen would get to work and think they'd get ahead. They don't have to worry about who's President.

Too Many Are Lazy.

"To many businessmen and industrialists are lazy. And I mean mentally, too. They won't think."

Ford said he believes opportunities are the greatest ever, for business, industry, workers and young people. As for the 11,000,000 unemployed:

"A lot of them don't want to work. If they'd think, they'd make places for themselves. They're going to work all the harder for the loafing they're doing now. They'll have to pay the bill, sooner or later."

The manufacturer said he believes no field is overcrowded now with ability. He predicted some revolutionary changes in the automobile industry, saying transportation now is the most important "art."

Blames Financiers.

Ford stretched back comfortably in the cushioned seat of his private car when he turned to talking of war and depression. He said:

"The financiers cause depressions so they can keep control. They put on the pressure. That's what the word depression means—pressure down.

"Science is going to change the whole system. Science will abolish war and take the place of the financier. I could tell you what I think, but I don't want to put ideas in anybody's head."

Don't Mention It.

Editor Declares England's Press Ignores Privacy

Detroiter Cites Instances; German Warns Papers to Print Facts.

A "deal of nonsense" has appeared in the discussion of England as a "natural refuge" for Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his family, Lee A. White, of the Detroit News, told 150 editors yesterday at the fourteenth annual convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors in the National Press Club.

"No doubt," he said, "a vast amount of supposition was involved in the production of editorials, cartoons, sermons and street corner conversations, not to say news stories, regarding the so-called self-exile of these Americans."

To show that Col. Lindbergh has not always been averse to publicity, Editor White referred to a chapter in the book, "I Cover the Water Front," which pictured the New York-to-Paris flier as courting favorable treatment in the newspapers.

That the talk of England as a refuge is "nonsense," White said, was shown by an editorial in the Morning Post of London. This warned the flier and his wife that they might find no more seclusion in England than at home.

Discusses Hutton Case.

White referred to a page in "The Sphere" of London, which carried a photograph bearing the caption, "The Mecca for News-hawks," and showing the residence wherein the former Barbara Hutton lay gravely ill following the birth of her child. "Pity the Reventlows!" was the theme of the story accompanying the picture, White said, and he added:

"How many guineas the writer got for his pity, and how valuable a page this was esteemed to be, in the absence of anything new about the private life of Barbara Hutton and her Danish count, is not in this record of the unbelievable, inexcusable harassment of a young American woman and her husband."

White's topic was "Our Journalistic Problem of the Right of Privacy." He cited from various court decisions, most of them so much at variance as "to leave the journalist aghast." He concluded that editors, lacking any clear-cut judicial guidance in the matter, had best fall back on the society's "Canons of Journalism" adopted in 1923.

Cites Recent Items.

He suggested that editors ponder some recent items of news.

"The adoption of a child by James J. Walker and his wife," he said, "was very nearly blocked by publicity, it being their fear that 'publicity would hamper their efforts to rear her quietly and without public attention,' and their belief that 'it would be a tragedy to focus attention on her.' Were the former politician father and the former actress mother in the public domain? Courts differ. Assuming that they were, was the child's right of privacy threatened with invasion? And might it have been posible to show specific, as well as general damages if it had lost the opportunity of a desirable home?"

"Would the publication of a photograph of an apparently weary Chief Executive be an invasion of his right? Or a discussion of the wear and tear on the draperies of his bedroom? Or an undesired and generally avoided, if not forbidden representation of any bodily infirmity? Are his children in the public or private domain, because of his position?

"Has an exhausted statesman a remedy if he is surreptitiously photographed in sleep, or in a ludicrous posture, and the photograph is published?

Blessed Events.

"Is the publication of a 'blessed event' in anticipation private or public?

"Is the privacy of a woman and her children invaded if they and their home is pohtographed, or if their names and address are published, and they are identified as the family of a public executioner?

"Is the privacy which is lost to a man when he is convicted of murder and executed, also lost to his widow and to his infant son, so that with impunity they may be photographed for publication at the crematory to which they have followed his body?

"Is it a right of privacy or a property right that is invaded when confidential telegrams between an employing publisher and an employed editor are seized and in peril of publication?"

Editor White did not answer the questions. He left the answers to his colleagues.

"The press is free," he concluded, "because, for all its faults, which are numerous and obvious, the public is safer and happier for the knowledge that it is able to disseminate.

Needs Freedom of Action.

"If the press is worth continuance (and its bitterest enemies still concede it some merit), it must have more freedom of action than an extension of the principle of privacy would seem to promise.

"I find myself in somewhat the same position as the author of your canons of journalism, when he dealt with the problem of decency. I am hopeful that the practices of those newspapers which are too disrepsctful of the sensibilities of normal persons will encounter effective public disapproval or yield to the influence of a preponderant professional condemnation."

At the morning session, Dr. Franz Hollering, erstwhile newspaper editor in Germany, described the "hell on earth" which is now the lot of journalists in that Hitler-dominated country. He described how the German newspapers print what the Nazi propagandists want them to print, and nothing more. He described the plight of honest writers, now in exile in concentration camps or reduced to a miserable existence outside of the newspaper business.

But what interested the editors at the Press Club gathering was what he had to say about German journalism's failure when Hitler was coming into power. The newspapers, he said, treated Hitler casually, and made no attempt to fight him.

Aided Hitler's Rise.

"It is my firm conviction," Hollering said, "that Hitler would not have been able to seize power if the independent German press had opposed him and his real goals and methods more efficiently and in time, as is the function of the honest and competent journalist."

Reminding the American editors that they could learn much from the failure of the German newspapers, Hollering urged them to handle news objectively.

"Our influence on our readers," he said, "should be exercised on the editorial page. Everywhere else the reader ought to get the facts, nothing but the facts, and if possible, all the facts.

"If we cannot trust to the intelligence of the people, then the doctrine of the dictators that citizens are cattle is correct, and freedom of the press is at an end. It is our duty to prove that the dictators are wrong."

Praises Wire Services.

Nathaniel Howard, managing editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, in a review of wire and photo services, said that the press associations are now better and faster than they have been, with the Associated Press the "biggest and best" of them all.

He found two faults with them: First, the writing is "too often plain bad;" second, too many words are frequently devoted to mediocre stories. He also criticized "the A. B. C. D." style of news writing, in which a reporter lists the highlights of a story and then, later on, elaborates once or twice on each point. Howard called for more continuity in writing news.

The Cleveland editor, recalling the words of an Associated Press wirephoto representative, said he was "dead right" when he declared that a revolution in news pictures was at hand. He said that this service is constantly improving.

Describes Campaign.

Verne Marshall, of the Cedar Rapids Gazette, described to the editors how his newspaper campaigned against graft and corruption in high office in Iowa.

"No newspaper," he said, "justified its existence unless it makes an effort to do more than report what people do and what happens to them. We have put the fear of God and of newspapers into a lot of State officials who needed it."

Carl W. Ackerman, dean of the Graduate School of Journalism, Columbia University, told of the improvement in the school since the days immediately after the World War. At that time, he said, the goal merely was to teach students the technicalities of newspaper work, the gathering and editing of news, so that they might go out and get a job.

But the depression following 1929, Dean Ackerman said, brought a problem. There were no jobs. It was then, he said, that Columbia decided to raise the standards of its journalism school.

Must Have Background.

Now, he said, a journalism student must be well grounded in economics, political science, sociology and local government.

"We decided that it was not enough to know how to read copy," Dean Ackerman said. "We decided to develop a man or a woman who could go into a newspaper and grow with it."

Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post, told of visiting the journalism school at Columbia and of listening to a lecture by Douglas Southall Freeman, Richmond editor.

"It was one of the most inspiring and effective lectures I have ever heard," Mr. Meyer said. "The way in which he caught and held the interest of the students was extraordinary."

Mr. Meyer also praised another lecturer at the Columbia journalism school—Dr. George Gallup, director of the American Institute of Public Opinion, which conducts the widely published poll, "America Speaks."

Last night the editors were guests of Mr. Meyer at a buffet supper. In the afternoon Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, publisher of the Washington Herald, entertained at a cocktail party.

An entertainment at the Press Club followed.

The editors will convene today at 10 a. m. to hear committee reports, elect directors and pass on resolutions. Luncheon and the final session will be at the Willard Hotel at 1 p. m. Walter Lippmann, of the New York Herald Tribune, will speak on "The Lindbergh Case in Its Relation to American Newspapers," and John Stewart Bryan, president of William and Mary College and publisher of the Richmond News-Leader, will discuss "Training for Journalism."

Van Devanter Tells of Refusing Third AAA Crop Benefit Check

Dean of Supreme Court Hints at Interview on 77th Birthday That He May Retire; Members Of Family Here for Celebration.

Associate Justice Willis Van Devanter, dean of the Supreme Court, in an interview on his seventy-seventh birthday, revealed yesterday that a third AAA benefit payment check had been offered him a few days ago and refused.

The elderly jurist, who with five others of the high court ruled the New Deal crop control plan unconstitutional, made it plain that his refusal of benefit payment checks was not intended as an example for anyone else.

At the same time he gave a hint that he might retire from the bench.

"I'm not saying I will and I'm not saying I won't. When one gets along in years, as I am, of course anything can happen," was the way the Justice put it.

"I'm not trying to set an example for any farmer who curtailed his wheat, or crops, under the AAA. My circumstances are peculiar and isolated. Because I voted for the invalidation of AAA I did not feel that I could accept the checks."

The short, silver-haired Justice, seated in the book-lined study of his apartment, comfortable in a smoking jacket, spoke at length of early experiences as a lawyer in Wyoming territory and his recent purchase of a farm in nearby Maryland.

"That's a good piece of ground," he said. "Some Quakers used to have it. My eldest son now is supervising it."

Asked about his birthday plans, the Justice said he was "not paying much attention to it."

But his sister, Mrs. Sanford L. Rariden, who manages his home, said there would be a small family birthday dinner this evening.

Another sister, Mrs. John W. Lacey, of Cheyenne, Wyo., arrived recently for a visit. Two sons, Isaac and Winslow Van Devanter, both residents here, were to attend.

The jurist recalled that "Chief Justice Hughes is the only living member who was on the court when I was appointed."

Hughes was named a few months earlier in 1910. He resigned in 1916 to accept the Republican Presidential nomination and was reappointed in 1930.

Mrs. Prescott Says Health Stations Will Receive Copies of Series.

"How a Baby Grows," the pictorial series by Dr. Arnold Gesell now running in The Washington Post, was praised yesterday as an invaluable aid to mothers.

Mrs. Josephine Pitman Prescott, director of the Health Department's bureau of public health nursing, said the pictures not only are highly instructive but will in many cases actually prevent or stop family discord caused by the parents' difference of opinion over baby's physical and mental progress.

Each of the 11 child hygiene stations maintained by the Health Department will be provided with a complete set of the photographs, Mrs. Prescott said.

The value of the pictures, which trace a child's development from infancy, was stressed at a meeting yesterday of the general committee on arrangements for Child Health Day, of which Dr. Hugh J. Davis is chairman.

One of the features of the annual children's health program scheduled for later this month and early in May will be the exhibition of "Life Begins," Dr. Gesell's talking motion picture based on child behavior. The film will be shown in school auditoriums in all sections of Washington.

Delegates representing parent-teacher, social hygiene, child welfare and other societies at yesterday's meeting commented on the timeliness and educational value of the photographic series in The Post.

Mrs. Prescott declared the pictures not only will prove a helpful guide to mothers, but also aid public health nurses who are introducing an aggressive campaign to impress upon parents the necessity of paying close attention to their youngsters' development. The photographs, she said, will be mounted in scrapbooks.

Issues Replace Old Party Lines In Voter Shifts

Poll Shows Strategists Are Baffled as Democrats and G.O.P. Change Sides.

By Dr. George Gallup.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, April 17.—Republican strategists—when they gather nowadays to talk over the party's chances in the election next November—have a tendency to say:

"Well, Hoover polled 15,000,000 votes in 1932. We can begin with them as a 'nest egg.'"

The reasoning runs: If a voter stood by the Republican Party in the dark days of November, 1932, he'll stand by the party in November, 1936. It shows faith in a large, irreducible minimum of 15,000,000 Republicans. It shows faith in the durability of party lines. However, it is not justified by the facts.

The facts—as indicated in successive Nation-wide polls of the Institute of Public Opinion—show that a much larger number of voters has been shifting party allegiance than heretofore supposed.

The basis for these assertions is a series of Nation-wide polls, spaced over the past two years. Two questions that have been asked on every ballot, every month since February, 1934, are: "For whom did you vote in 1932?" and "For whom would you vote today?"

In its poll reported last Sunday the Institute revealed that 54.5 per cent of the major party vote would go to Roosevelt if election were this week, while the unknown Republican candidate would get 45.5 per cent. Since Roosevelt was elected on a tide of 59 per cent of the major party vote, his present standing is down about 4.5 points from last election.

Translated into raw votes, these figures mean that Roosevelt could be expected to poll about 21,000,000 votes today instead of the nearly 23,000,000 he polled in 1932. The Republican candidate would poll about 17,500,000 instead of the 15,500,000 Hoover got.

At first these figures might suggest that 2,000,000 Democrats lost their faith in Roosevelt and switched to the Republicans. It is not so simple.

As Institute polls show, more than 4,000,000 1932 Democrats would vote Republican today, while 2,000,000 1932 Republicans—with convert faith in Roosevelt—would vote for him today.

When G. O. P. Was Lowest.

In other words, the Republicans do not have a "nest egg" of 15,000,000 Hoover voters. They have—today—13,000,000 Hoover voters plus about 4,000,000 Roosevelt voters. At times during the last three and a half years the size of the Republican "nest egg" has been even smaller.

Consider, for instance, the situation early in 1934, when the Institute took its first poll on the President's popularity. Roosevelt had taken certain decisive actions in regard to banking, liquor, unemployment and industry. In February of that year his nation-wide popularity was much greater than on the day he was elected.

Of all the voters switching back and forth in the wasteland between the two major parties, about three were switching to Roosevelt for every one that was switching to the Republicans.

Nevertheless, even at this point, almost 2,000,000 of those who voted for him in 1932 had turned against him. This loss, however, was more than offset by gains from the Republicans. Almost 5,000,000 of Hoover's 15,000,000 were on the Roosevelt bandwagon. The "nest egg" was down to 10,500,000.

The barometer of the Institute poll showed 69 per cent of the major party vote for Roosevelt—only 31 per cent against.

Subsequently the Roosevelt boom cascaded. By last September the switchers were moving in droves toward the Republicans—while only a thin stream was moving in the opposite direction. The barometer indicated 50.5 per cent for Roosevelt, 49.5 per cent for the Republican candidate. Since September the trend has switched back toward Roosevelt again.

At one time in the last quadrennium, the Republican reservoir consisted of only 10,000,000 voters. How much farther might it have been reduced? Theoretically there is no limit. Theoretically there is a point at which even Fletcher would throw up his job and register as a Democrat, and another point where Farley would pull his derby over his ears and set out for the Republican National Committee.

Next Poll Appears Tomorrow.

Next Sunday, a nation-wide Institute poll will report sentiment regarding shorter hours of labor as a means of reducing unemployment. In Washington the poll will be published exclusively in The Post, which is one of more than 70 newspapers, of all shades of political belief, that make possible the polls of the American Institute of Public Opinion.

Church Federation To Hear Dr. Sizoo

The Rev. Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, retiring pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will give the address at the annual meeting April 28 of the Washington Federation of Churches. This will be held in connection with a dinner at Calvary Baptist Church. An informal reception is planned for 5:30 o'clock and the dinner is set for 6 p. m. As this is the last opportunity many will have to hear Dr. Sizoo before his departure for New York, a lareg attendance is expected.

Dr. Benjamin W. Meeks, president of the federation, will preside. Reports will be given by the staff and the woman's council. Members of the board of directors for the ensuing year will be elected. A special feature will be attractive music by Officer Raymond Luskey, of the police department, and his wife, both accomplished musicians.

Guild Arranges Outdoor Service

The Rev. Dr. Charles A. Hart, professor of philosophy at Catholic University and moderator of the Catholic Evidence Guild, tomorrow afternoon will open the outdoor season of the guild with a talk on "The Resurrection in a Court of Evidence," in Franklin Park. The meeting will last from 1:30 o'clock until 3:30 p. m.

Dr. John G. Bowen, of Georgetown University, and John Foster, of Catholic University, will be the other speakers.

The Catholic Evidence Guild is organized for the purpose of explaining Catholic faith and doctrine in public places. Meetings are held in various parks of the city throughout the summer season, at which well-trained laity, assisted by the clergy, explain the truth taught by the Catholic Church.

Atonement Is Topic At Scientist Church

"Doctrine of Atonement" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from I Corinthians 1:18: "The preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord." (II Corinthians 5:8).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "To be 'with the Lord' is to be in obedience to the law of God, to be absolutely governed by divine Love—by Spirit, not by matter."

Simon Will Preach.

Dr. Abram Simon, of Washington Hebrew Temple, will preach at the 9:15 a. m. service to be broadcast over WJSV this morning.

APRIL 19th
The Animal Protective Association announces "Be Kind to Animals Anniversary Week,"
APRIL 19th-25th
A True Christian is actively kind to God's speechless creatures; he abstains to his utmost from practices, commodities and amusements imposing suffering upon animal life entrusted to his dominion.
He is kind to children by uplifting their character and giving them happiness through teachings of kindness to animals.
He obeys his Savior's injunctions: "Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful" (Luke 6:36) and receives the reward of the fifth Beatitude, "Blessed are the merciful" (Matt. 5:7).
HUMANE SUNDAY OFFERS
the opportunity, and it is the obligation of preachers and Christian Leaders to obey this command of the Master and receive His blessings.
Upon request, The Animal Protective Association will furnish literature and suggestions for ministers and church school superintendents of various departments.

Curious Crowds View Old Georgetown Homes

"We Have Nothing Like This Back in Iowa," Says One Tourist, Viewing Row-House; Old Yellow Tavern Proves Interesting Relic of the Past.

By Dudley Harmon.

Curious tourists from all over the country wandered through Georgetown's cobbled, sun-flecked streets yesterday in a visit to ten historic houses opened by their owners for the benefit of St. John's Church. Visitors from the far South and West admired the low-ceilinged, small-windowed rooms, and looked with interest at Chippendale highboys and Sheffield plate.

"Goodness," remarked one woman from Iowa, "we have nothing like this where I come from. This is the first time I've seen so many houses in rows before."

One of the few houses not built in a row is that of Mr. and Mrs. W. Campbell Armstrong at 3010 O street. Owned and decorated by Elsie Cobb Wilson, of Washington and New York, it was once a young ladies' seminary run by the Misses Tanney, famous 70 years ago as teachers of Greek, Latin and polite deportment.

The home of Mrs. Sidney Small, at 1524 Thirty-third street, has an even older history. Built in 1790, it was once the Yellow Tavern, a favorite stopping place with the farmers who came to Georgetown to ship their tobacco when Georgetown was a famous port. Mrs. Small, who has returned to Washington after a residence of 30 years in Canada, has furnished her house in keeping with the period in which it was built. She has even installed in the living room fireplace the original old crane over which the guests used to warm their hot toddies in the days when it was the tap-room of the Yellow Tavern.

"Pretty Prospect" Famous.

Across the street, in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Miner, are several family portraits done in pastel, so old parts of the crayon have peeled off, exposing the old newspapers over which they were painted.

Largest of the homes exhibited yesterday is that of Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. W. D. Thomas at 3508 Prospect avenue. It was built more than 150 years ago by John Templeman, owner of all that section of Georgetown Heights, and named "Pretty Prospect" because of the magnificent view it commands of the Potomac and Virginia shore.

Mr. Templeman's nearest neighbor, Secretary of the Navy Benjamin Stoddert, wrote him from Philadelphia in 1800 asking him to entertain President John Adams, who was coming to Georgetown to view the site of the new capital. The house is known locally at the Morris house because it was for many years the home of Commander George Upham Morris, son of Commodore Charles Morris. From here Louise Morris was married to William Corcoran, Georgetown's famous philanthropist.

Also visited yesterday was the home of Mrs. Walter T. Wheatley, at 3030 P street, where Miss Katharine Dougal, her sister, proudly exhibited a Japanese table sent by Commodore Perry on his first visit to that country, and a tea service which once belonged to Lord Byron.

Other Homes Open.

Other homes were those of Miss Elinor Gregg, at 3245 O street, originally built as an artisan's house; of Mr. and Mrs. F. Mott Gunther, where Admiral Decatur's widow lived for many years, and of Mrs. Paul Townsend, 1340 Tthirtieth street; Miss Genevieve Wimsatt, 1511 Twenty-eighth street, and Commander and Mrs. Ellis Stone, 1520 Thirty-third street.

Additional homes of historic interest will be shown this afternoon. St. John's Church, designed by Dr. William Thornton, who planned the Capitol, was open yesterday and will be open again today.

Composer members of the league presented at the Executive Mansion a program of original compositions in honor of and dedicated to Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

The string quartet—Linda Sool and Miriam Hadley, violinists; Sara Shatz, viola, and Lillian Pringle, violincellist played the Ballerina by Margaret McClure Stitt and the Bondage, by Radie Britain, which won the Bonita Crowe prize awards for 1936.

Ruth Miller, soprano, of the Metropolitan Opera, sang "Soliloquy," by Charlotte Caldwell, with the composer at the piano, and Miss Sool played "Melody at Dusk," accompanied by the composer, Mary Howe, at the piano.

Ruth Shaffner, soprano, sang a group of songs which won the Grace Porterfield Polk awards for 1936. They were "Life Comes Like a Pattern," by Grace Warner Gulesian; "The Low Branching Lime," by Bonita Crowe; "Fairy of Spring," by Persis Heaton Trimble, the lyrics by Grace Porterfield Polk; "Spring," by Mrs. Crosby Adams, the lyrics by Dorothy Terrel, and "Weep My Soul Away," by Lulu Jones Downing, with lyrics by Josephine Hancock Logan. The final song, sung by Ruth Shaffner, was "The Year's at the Spring," by Robert Browning.

Mrs. H. H. A. Beach played on the piano three of her compositions, reminiscences of MacDowell Colony, Peterboro, N. H. They were Schevzando, "A Chipmunk;" "Silver Birches," and the "Humming Bird."

The program was arranged by the national chairman of music, Phyllis Hoyt.

Wives of Editors and Publishers Will Be Honored at Luncheon

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Wives of newspaper editors and publishers in Washington for the convention of the American Association of Newspaper Editors, have been enjoying the Capital while their husbands talked shop. Today they will be honored at a luncheon at the Willard. Last night they were entertained, with the newspapermen, at a buffet supper given by Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer at their home.

Among the guests last night were Mr. Arthur Treanor, of the Booth Newspapers in Detroit, accompanied by Mrs. Treanor; Mr. Tom Wallace, of the Louisville Courier-Journal; Mr. Tom Dillon, of the Minneapolis Tribune, and Mr. Hamilton Owens, of the Baltimore Evening Sun, all of whom were in Europe together in 1928, when a group of 23 editors was sent abroad under the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. They have had opportunity to renew their friendship during the convention.

Mrs. Wallace, who was also abroad and joined the party at Geneva, did not come to Washington with Mr. Wallace on this occasion as their daughter, Miss Augusta Wallace, who is embarking on a stage career, is at home for a visit after having her first part in a Broadway production. Miss Wallace and her younger brother were abroad with their mother, studying French, at the time of the editors' peace tour. She returned to this country and attended Sweet Briar and Vassar colleges and finished her education at the Sorbonne in Paris. Although her father thinks a newspaper career would be the most interesting she could choose, she has already begun her work in the theater, appearing with the Strauss Dancers and later in "The Ship Comes In," in New York.

Mrs. Barrows Matthews, with Mr. Matthews, of the Buffalo Courier-Express, was another of the guests last evening, as was Mrs. Mark Foote, of Washington. Mrs. Milton H. Esberg, who is here from San Francisco, a house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Meyer, was the only woman present who claimed no connection with the newspaper world.

Mrs. Frank W. Lindsay, of Decatur, Ill., who was there with Mr. Lindsay, had been a guest in the afternoon of Mrs. Donald C. Dobbins, wife of Representative Dobbins, of Illinois, who entertained informally in her honor at the Congressional Club.

Last year Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay brought their young son with them and spent much of their time in Washington taking him sightseeing. They go today to Deerfield, where he will eventually attend Deerfield Academy. They expect to send their daughter to Washington to school in a few years. From Deerfield they will go to Ontario, Canada, Mrs. Lindsay's native province.

Mrs. Casper S. Yost, with Mr. Yost, of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, and Mrs. A. O. H. Grier, with Mr. Grier, editor and for 50 years connected with the Wilmington (Del.) Journal-Every Evening, were also among the guests. Mr. Grier carried a watch given him last June by his associates in honor of the golden anniversary of his newspaper career. He says the initials "A. O. H." are usually interpreted "Ancient Order of Hibernians."

Small tables, with centerpieces of spring flowers were arranged in the library and dining room of the Meyer home where the guests were seated. Mrs. Meyer received in a gown of powder blue with a sash of deep rose color and Mrs. Esberg, by whom she was assisted, wore a wine-colored lace.

Mr. Robert Fessenden To Marry Miss Chance

Miss Ceora Mary Chance, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Chance, of Ottumwa, Iowa, and Mr. Robert A. Fessenden, son of Mr. Arthur G. Fessenden and the late Mrs. Fessenden, of 1472 Harvard street, will be married at St. John's Episcopal Church Monday at 10 a. m. by the Rev. Dr. Oliver Hart.

Mr. George Fessenden, brother of the bridegroom, and Miss Viola L. Whitcomb will attend the bridal couple. After a trip to the South they will reside at the Benjamin Franklin Apartments here.

Sally Hinegardner Sets May 8 for Marriage

Miss Sally Hinegardner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hinegardner, 2153 California street, has set May 8 as the date of her wedding to Mr. John F. Cavanaugh, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Cavanaugh, of Clarendon.

The bride-to-be was honored at a shower, given by Mrs. William A. Schwarzmann, of Alexandria, on Thursday night.

Janet Ball Wed To Allen Haden At Home Here

Mrs. Frances Scott Carter Attends Bride; Dr. Hart Performs Ceremony.

Before an improvised altar of palms and calla lilies Miss Janet Ball, daughter of Mrs. Henry Winfield Watson and the late Capt. Mason Ball, U. S. N., was married at 1 o'clock yesterday at the home of her mother to Mr. Allen Haden, son of Mrs. Robert Allen Haden and the late Rev. Haden, of Memphis, Tenn. The ceremony, attended only by relatives and few close friends, was performed by Dr. Oliver Hart, of St. John's Church.

The bride, given in marriage by her mother, wore a street length gown of pinkish gray crepe, a brown straw hat with a veil and a corsage of orchids. Her only attendant, her cousin, Mrs. Frances Scott Carter, of Warrenton, wore smoky pink crepe and a pink hat of rough straw and carried a bouquet of sweetpeas. Mr. Edward Litchfield, of Boston, was best man.

After a luncheon at her home for guests and members of the bridal party, Mr. and Mrs. Haden left by motor for a short wedding trip. Mr. Haden, who is with the foreign service, is at present awaiting transfer to another country.

Society Will Hear Colonel Donovan On Foreign Affairs

Col. William Donovan, former Assistant Attorney General, will address the Italy-American Society at its meeting the night of April 30 in the Mayflower Hotel.

Col. Donovan, who had a distinguished service record in the World War, has just returned from an extended trip abroad and will discuss conditions he observed there. He is leaving for a trip to Arizona, but will return on April 29 in time to appear on the society's program.

The Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso, will be an honored guest at the meeting.

Miss Roth to Be Wed.

Dr. and Mrs. George Byron Roth announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Dorothy Roth, to Mr. James C. Wilson, of Bethany, Mo., and Washington. The wedding will take place in June.

Miss Burbank, Herbert Angel To Marry Today

Rev. J. F. Madison to Perform Ceremony at St. John's Church Here.

Miss Virginia Burbank, of Washington, will be married at 8:30 o'clock this morning to Mr. Herbert Angel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Cabell Angel, of Washington. The wedding will be performed at St. John's Church on Sixteenth street by the Rev. James F. Madison. Palms, ferns and snapdragons will decorate the church.

The bride, who will be given in marriage by Mr. Wharton Moore, of Maryland, will wear a dress of white embroidered mousseline de soie, with a train. Her tulle veil will be caught into a coronet of orange blossoms and she will carry a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Harald Hammar, of Washington, will wear a gown of deep rose mousseline de soie made with full sleeves, and with it, a hat of cream-colored lace. Her bouquet will be of Talisman roses.

Mr. William Heintz, of Virginia, will be best man, and Mr. Louis Mann, of the same State, and Dr. Frank Kreglow, of Washington, will be ushers.

Following a trip to Bermuda, the couple will be at home at Bradley Hills, Md., after May 15. Both the bride and bridegroom are graduates of George Washington University.

Women Democrats Honor George Creel

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace Will Be Guest at Tea.

Mr. George Creel was honored last night at a dinner given by the Woman's National Democratic Club. Mr. Creel, nationally known for his work as chairman of the committee on public information during the war, and now as a political writer, was introduced by Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, president of the club. He discussed campaign issues.

With Mr. Creel and Mrs. Meigs at the speaker's table were Mr. Robert Woolley, Miss Margurite Woolley, Judge Ray Bentley, Judge Jesse Adkins, Mrs. C. Dove, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Green and Dr. Edward B. Meigs.

This afternoon Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, will be the guest of honor at a tea at the clubhouse at which Mrs. Julian Friant and Mrs. Edward B. Meigs will also receive.

Pouring tea will be Mrs. Fred Biermann, Mrs. E. C. Eicher, Mrs. Claude Porter, Mrs. R. C. Fullbright, Mrs. B. M. Jacobson, Mrs. J. D. Howorth, Mrs. Hubert Utterbach, Mrs. June Fickel, Miss Joe Coffin and Mrs. James Newton.

Lieut. Kalakuka, Bride Leave on Wedding Trip

Lieut. and Mrs. Theodore Kalakuka, whose marriage took place Wednesday at noon in Bethlehem Chapel, will visit New York and Montreal on their wedding trip.

Mrs. Kalakuka who, before her marriage, was Miss Marian Ross, is a daughter of Mrs. Charles A. Ross. Lieut. Kalakuka is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Kalakuka, of Scranton, Pa. The bride is a graduate of Gunston Hall. Lieut. Kalakuka was graduated from West Point in 1927.

The wedding, at which Canon G. Freeland Peter officiated, was performed without attendants. On their return from their honeymoon, Lieut. and Mrs. Kalakuka will reside in Alexandria, Va.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

Posed by Marlene Dietrich.

By Mignon.

The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.

SO MANY people write to beauty editors asking them what shade of powder, rouge or lipstick to use—then they describe themselves. It is utterly impossible for anybody to recommend at long distance any cosmetic colors. Skins are much like fingerprints—all different.

Many companies are meeting this emergency and trying to help women with makeup by getting out small kits with matched makeup in them. There will be face powder, rouge, lipstick, eye shadow and eyebrow pencil, and often a foundation cream of a shade to match the rest of the cosmetics in the box. They run in as many as eight different shades.

Of course, the advantage is that you get a small amount of each and the whole outlay does not cost you very much. If you find that the saleswoman has recommended something that is a little bit too dark or too light, you are not out very much money, and you can go back and buy a shade a little bit nearer to your heart's desire.

One very reliable company has brought out a makeup kit for both dry and oily skins in eight different shades. The box contains finishing cream, face powder, a finishing lotion if you prefer it, cream rouge, lipstick, eye shadow, eyebrow pencil and skin tonic. It is decidedly new but is now distributed throughout the country, and you probably can get it without any difficulty. The price is very moderate indeed and the high quality of the products cannot be questioned.

Acute Leukemia Is Rarely Seen After 25 Years

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Lymphatic Leukemia—A Blood Disease.

We often hear the word leukemia applied to what is commonly understood to be a blood disease. While it is true that the blood is particularly affected, the seat of the disease lies in the tissues where blood cells are born—not in the blood itself. Just what goes wrong has so far baffled medical science.

We do know that the white cells are increased to high levels and, because the normal balance of the corpuscles is upset, the blood fails in many of its functions. We can understand why an excess of white cells may be disastrous, as we have learned that the blood must be maintained at a definite standard. For example, too much sugar in the blood characterizes the disease known as diabetes.

Rarely Seen Beyond 25.

Where are the white cells formed? First, in the bone marrow which produces the large granular leucocytes; and, second, in the lymph tissue—lymph glands—located in many other parts of the body. From these latter areas come the cells called lymphocytes. There are other sources, and too many white cells may be formed in any one of them. Hence, anything that disturbs blood forming tissue can bring about leukemia.

Acute leukemia is rarely seen in individuals past 25 years of age and, in general, it is considered a childhood disease. A youngster apparently in perfect health may develop rather quickly a marked pallor and become unusually tired. The pulse is rapid and there is generally a high temperature. Scarcely more than a cursory glance is required to recognize the existence of an acute illness. If a blood count is made the increase in the white cells will be detected.

Blood Picture Definite.

Chronic leukemia seldom arises before middle life and it is not common in the later decades. Mistakes in diagnosis are rare, as the blood picture is quite definite and characteristic. As a rule the spleen is considerably enlarged and there may be some complaint of shortness of breath or loss of weight. This increase in size of the spleen may be present early in the disease. There is some enlargement of the lymph glands, but hemorrhages are not usual.

On examination of white cells will be found to number from 100,000 to 300,000 per cubic millimeter or even higher (normal, 5,000).

The use of X-ray is the only helpful type of treatment and under its influence the white cells will decrease. In fact, with overdosage they may drop to too low a level. Unfortunately radiation is not curative, as new leucocytes continue to form, exhausting the patient in the process. Blood transfusions are valuable and constitute the best form of therapy, as improvement frequently ensues.

MARY HAWORTH Says:

Girl of 21 Certainly Hasn't Overtaxed Her Patience in Waiting for the Right Man to Come Along.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your wisdom and kindliness have invited my confidence many times, but only after reading "Philosopher's" letter have I felt that I should really care to voice my difficulties. My problem seems to be similar to his, although my standards regarding a life companion are even more exacting, I believe. My 21 years have taught me patience, but after reading your reply to "Philosopher" and following your column for some time, I wonder if I am overtaxing my patience in waiting for someone perfectly suited to me.

Mary Haworth.

* * * *

Having been reared in a fine Christian home I was inspired to live by very high ideals, to which I cling tenaciously. The mantle of my parents' faith has fallen about my shoulders, protecting me and giving me great contentment. This faith in God and man has made me very democratic and I like and am liked by representatives of every class.

* * * *

I am responsive to music, art and literature to the extent that I actually suffer when experiencing them at their best. I have made my living as a commercial artist; I very much enjoy singing, play the piano by ear and thrill to beauty and rhythm whenever I sense them. I have excelled in amateur athletics and always find life the "fulfillment of a promise" when I am in motion out of doors.

* * * *

I am keenly sensitive to the best in life, am thankful for the privilege of living and have tried to keep my life worthy of being a thank offering. In addition to these things I have a highly developed sense of humor, which seems to help keep things balanced and well rounded. I have come in contact with men and boys of such fine character that I have many times felt inferior, but I have yet to find the man who has been willing to save himself for the best; who is responsive to the same things to which I respond, who has a keen sense of humor and who is physically attractive to me.

With no credit due myself, my heritage is said to be a well proportioned figure and attractive facial features. Please do not misunderstand me. I feel a delicacy in discussing myself at such length, but I want you to understand that I am tempted and that it does mean something to me to procrastinate in saying "yes."

* * * *

My attitude toward marriage is that of something sacred and in the last analysis the purpose and fulfillment of life. A home, to me, is even more sacred than a church. With such sharply defined characteristics, am I justified in requiring or desiring in a man what I have been and am willing to be? I am not narrow as far as the other fellow is concerned; that is, as to what is right and proper for him; but as soon as what I feel is wrong in him influences me, it is then I rebel inwardly and build an abstract barrier that has prevented any truly mutual love. In your opinion, am I wrong? TWENTY-ONE.

What to Expect.

DEAR TWENTY ONE: I don't believe you will ever find a man corresponding to the name who looks at life through a woman's eyes or responds to life with a woman's feelings—if that is what you are trying to ask me. If you are extremely fortunate, you may one day find a man who will respect and love you for the things you stand for; who will sympathize with and try to understand and live up to your idealistic concept of what love and marriage should mean to man and wife. Before you have passed your thirtieth year, however, you will probably have had occasion to revise your husband-hunting approach considerably.

* * * *

Sir Galahads don't abound in modern society (I doubt very much if they ever existed in any quantity anywhere) and a woman who wants to participate in the broadening, enriching experiences of life, such as wifehood, parenthood, homemaking, and so on, sooner or later sees the necessity of effecting some compromise with reality by taking a more earthy man to her heart. In so doing, if the man possesses an average amount of honor, decency, dependability and intelligence, she will achieve her fair share of happiness; achieve a creditable measure of self-development and make an honorable contribution to the world's work.

* * * *

I am not in a position to say whether or not you are acting wisely in holding yourself austerely aloof from men who fail to measure up to your expectations. You say " . . . As soon as what I feel is wrong in (men) influences me, it is then I rebel inwardly and build an abstract barrier that has prevented any truly mutual love." That tells me exactly nothing about what you are rebelling against, so how am I to know if you are being wise or merely finicky?

* * * *

It may be, since you are so very young, that you are more or less in the dark as to what you do expect of life and men, and are whiling the time away inventing imaginary obstacles to romance. Of this much I am sure, at 21 you certainly haven't overtaxed your patience in waiting for the right man to come along. M. H.

Lecturer Sees Women Losing Hard-Won Rights; Declares Her Sex Is Facing a Crisis Today

Mrs. Blatch, Pioneer Suffragist, Thinks They Are Resting on Oars.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

HARRIOT STANTON BLATSCH, lecturer, writer and pioneer suffragist, now visiting in Washington, admits she began resenting discrimination against her sex at the age of 8.

"My 5-year-old brother and I climbed a chestnut tree one day," she reminisced yesterday, her blue eyes twinkling. "My father discovered us and ordered me to come down immediately. From my tree-top perch I replied, 'Why don't you ask Bob to come down, too? He's three years younger and one branch higher than I am!' My feminist activities began then and there."

Now, more than 70 years since the day she climbed the chestnut tree and defended her lofty position, this famous daughter of the famous suffragist and orator, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, looks back on a long series of activities in the interest of the rights of women.

Founded Women's Union.

A graduate of Vassar College, she founded the Women's Political Union, the first suffrage group of modern times to organize a procession and to hold open-air meetings and mass meetings. She was the first woman to make an appeal for pickets to the White House, and campaigned through many States for suffrage, crossing the continent five times in the course of the final fight.

Compared with women who worked for the vote back in those stormy days, Mrs. Blatch believes modern women, as a whole, are settling back on their oars, indifferent as to whether their hard-won rights are wrested from them.

She sees woman's position slipping considerably today because "Women aren't thinking things through. In too many cases, they like to be petted and pampered and 'conditioned' according to man's idea of protection. Women of the leisure class far too frequently fall in with plans along this line, thinking they are doing a favor for their wage-earning sisters," she went on. "Yet most so-called 'protective measures' are generally discriminatory."

Sees Leisure Class Support.

The bill for a 40-hour work week for women is definitely so, she believes. "Just as much as if all red-haired men or all 6-foot-tall men were put on a 40-hour week. You have probably noticed most women supporting the bill are of the leisure class and wouldn't be affected by the discrimination it entails. If a 40-hour work week is forthcoming, let it be for all wage earners, whether they are men or women."

In this connection she also pointed out that of all the protective measures designed for wage-earning women, few had really helped them. "Even those planned for working women who bear children during the years they are employed," she added. "None of the measures for this have proved as effective as a bonus for maternity would be. So if men will want to protect women, why haven't they thought of that? When man-planned measures can actually protect women instead of deprive them of their rights, there will be no objection from any of us," she said.

Convinced women face a crisis today and must unite and take a definite stand for themselves, Mrs. Blatch pointed out there is no need of closing one's eyes to the situation as it really is. "If the back-to-the-home trend flows into an ebb tide, there may never be a flood tide again," she commented. "If younger women today could only realize how difficult it was to win what rights we have today, they would be less indifferent to this trend; would, in fact, stand against it with all their power."

She believes the solution of the ubiquitous "woman question" once and for all is the passing of the equal rights bill, which would place women on the same basis as men in every respect.

In Washington as the guest of her relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Gerrit S. Miller, at 2810 Adams Mill road, she will be honor guest and speaker at a tea to be given tomorrow afternoon by the D. C. Branch of the National Woman's Party at the Ava Belmont House.

Slick Slip Covers.

Slip covers used to look like nothing so much as an unmade bed, but not any more! The new way of making them assures a tailored fit . . . in fact, a good part of the time you can't tell them from upholstered covers. The secret is simple. It is explained in detail in Miss Boykin's new five-page bulletin, "How to Make a Slip Cover That Won't Wrinkle or Bag." This bulletin has diagrams illustrating the different steps, and besides it includes samples of excellent fabrics for slip covers. It will be sent on receipt of a 3-cent stamp.

Women Past 30 Band Together To Keep Jobs

London.—Several hundred "discarded" women, finding themselves too old at 30 to compete for a livelihood with young girls of more alluring faces and figures, have banded together in the Over Thirty Association.

The organization, which will wage a crusade to educate employers on the advantages of experience, has the backing of the London Council for Voluntary Occupation During Unemployment.

Many of these jobless women who describe their plight as "urgent and dire" are the victims of the post-war period when Britain's sacrifice of 1,000,000 men on the battlefield left thousands of attractive women with scant hopes of marriage.

Now, they admit, they are older and romance has passed them by.

The modern business world puts accent on youth to such an extent, leaders of the Over Thirty Association explained, that many women find themselves too old even at 25.

"It's a bit grim," said Miss Cecile Matheson of the International Council of Women, "when you remember that great artists and writers have said that woman's real beauty isn't attained until she reaches 30."

SUBSTITUTE SWEETHEART

By Priscilla Wayne

Hired to impersonate June, beautiful young stepsister of Jim Bradley, Ruth Dayton finds herself in love with her make believe brother. The impersonation was the idea of Joe and Clara Bradley, uncle and aunt of Jim. They had hired Ruth to go with them to Chicago to the bedside of Jim when he was thought to be dying after an auto accident. June, they said, was ill and could not go. Jim was blinded by the crash and would not know of the deceit.

Arrived in Chicago, however, a series of events leads Ruth to suspect that Joe and Clara are eager to bring about Jim's death. She is convinced that Pascoe, a man nurse hired by Bradley, is in the plot. Ruth's only hope for help appears to be Bette, Clara Bradley's maid. Bette secretly confides to Ruth that she knows Ruth is not June Bradley.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN.

Ruth found, much to her dismay, that, though Jim's bandages were gone, he was not improved. Evidently another of the bad attacks was on him. His face against the pillow seemed very thin.

As Bette had said, there was only one bandage left—it extended over the temple and a part of one cheek, held in place with adhesive strips. Jim's brown eyes, gazing intently at the doorway through which she came, seemed to see Ruth and yet not to see her. There were only pale lines—scarcely scars to show where he had been cut. Even those, it was clear, would not be visible long.

Ruth came close to the bed. She wondered if he could see at all. The intentness of his gaze puzzled her.

"All the bandages off and every thing," she said, pretending gayety. She mustn't let Jim see how sight of him shocked and worried her.

"Yes, and everything." Ruth was not imagining that his voice sounded flat and tired.

"Darling, can you see—anything at all?"

"Shadows," Jim said slowly. "Just shadows."

Ruth held his hand very closely. "That's something, darling. Something," she said, pretending gaiety, that the optic nerve isn't really severed or destroyed. Just injured. If you can see even shadows, doesn't that mean that some day you'll be able to see everything again, clearly?"

"I wonder," Jim said. There was no mistaking his weariness, his exhaustion.

Ruth bent very close to him. "Listen, darling, you mustn't you just mustn't get so blue."

"Are we all alone, June?"

"The nurse is just outside the door."

"Close it then, will you?"

"Yes." Ruth crossed hesitantly toward the door. She wondered what Pascoe would say. He had evidently heard Jim's instructions. He came close to Ruth now, whispered to her.

"Go ahead and talk to him. But don't make any false moves. He's an awful sick man. The slightest excitement might be the end of it all."

"I'll be very, very careful," Ruth said quite sincerely.

"I'll be just outside the door if you need me. And I'll come in in just a few minutes. He just mustn't talk too long."

"I'll remember." The door closed, Ruth went back slowly to the bed, sank on her knees at Jim's side. "We're all alone, dear," she whispered, her cheek close to his. "Was it something you wanted to say to me?"

"Yes." He seemed searching for the right words. "June, Dr. McGuire just went away from here."

"They told me he had seen you this morning," Ruth said.

"He wasn't very hopeful, June."

"Don't let them talk to you like that," Ruth begged, tears in her eyes, "you are getting better. I can see it every day. You are getting better."

Jim shook his head slowly. "I'm afraid I'm not, June dear. At first I thought that I was getting better. But the last day or two I'm not so sure. Dr. McGuire says there are internal injuries. He says there's nothing that can be done."

"But, Jim, they aren't trying to do anything." Ruth forced her voice to be calm. "There are doctors who perform miracles these days. Simply miracles."

"I know. I'm afraid it would take more than a miracle to help me." He smiled wistfully. "Just when life is so good, June, just when life is so—so beautiful—I have to go."

Ruth held him very close. She could not have spoken. Emotion gripped her too strongly.

"I've been thinking it over, June—ever since yesterday—there's something I want to talk to you about. I'm afraid my financial housesisn't in very good order."

"Don't talk about that, darling, please don't."

"I've got to talk about it, June. I've got to be sure that—when—I've got to be sure that you're provided for afterward."

"Get Well."

"I'll be provided for," June begged. "Please don't talk of it, Jim. Just get well. Please just get well."

"I'd like to, dear—I haven't had anything very much to live for—lately—until you came."

"Dear." Ruth whispered.

"Perhaps it's odd to you, June darling, that I've known you all these years and have just found out that I loved you. Odd, isn't it? I've always thought you were beautiful and loved you like a brother——"

"And you love me now——" Ruth felt abandoned, shameless. She wanted Jim to tell his love, tell it quickly, boldly.

"I love you like a lover, little sweetheart," Jim said. "Now, wait a minute. Please don't talk. Just hold your cheek close to mine. There, like that. I want to tell you something."

"I want you to call Uncle Joe and Aunt Clara and I want them to make arrangements for us to be married, right away. Please now," as she would have pulled away from him, "please don't move. Please listen to what I have to say. It can't be very long now and it will be the only way I can be sure that you are provided for.

"After you belong to me I want Reagan & Reagan called. They're my attorneys as they were dad's. They look after our estate and financial interests. I want my will to be rewritten safe and sure. Of course, I have one now. They insisted that I make it after dad went on. You're remembered, June. But I want this one to be ironclad. I want you to have everything—everything that belonged to me."

"And Aunt Clara? Uncle Joe?" Ruth could not have stayed the question.

"I'll remember them handsomely. Will you do it, dear, just to make sure?"

Ruth was sobbing in nervous excitement, holding close to Jim, knowing that she would do anything he asked her to do.

"Call Pascoe, June. Right away."

Pascoe came, and in turn summoned the Bradleys. Even in her worried excitement it was thrilling to hear Jim. Sick, in fact in a dying condition, he was yet master of the situation.

Calmness.

"Please make all the arrangements," he told Joe Bradley. Get the license and arrange with the minister of the church we attended when we were children. That would please you, wouldn't it, June?"

"Yes, Jim," Ruth was trembling in sheer excitement.

"When will it be?" Joseph Bradley's calmness amazed even Clara.

"This afternoon."

Clara found excited words. "Oh, Jim, we couldn't. Be reasonable. June has to have some pretty clothes. You wouldn't think of asking her to marry you unless she had some pretty things. At least a wedding dress."

"I don't need anything," Ruth started to say, but Clara hushed her imperiously. "Please be reasonable, Jim."

"Tomorrow morning, then, Aunt Clara. I want to be sure that—that everything——"

"Yes. Yes," Joseph Bradley said consolingly. "We'll have it all fixed for tomorrow morning."

"And now I'm going to ask all of you to go and let Mr. Bradley rest," Pascoe said, coming forward with authority.

"Please let Miss Bradley stay?" Jim asked.

Pascoe was firm. "Not now. Perhaps she can come back in the afternoon. But not now. Please. You need to conserve your strength."

Behind the closed door of her living room, Clara Bradley faced the cringing girl. "This is simply the most outrageous thing I have ever heard of in my life," she began.

"Be quiet, Clara," her husband said firmly. "Let me talk. You engineered this, I suppose," turning to Ruth; "we have you to thank for this sudden turn of events?"

"I didn't engineer it, as you call it," Ruth denied.

"Well, if you think we'd let you go through with it, you're crazy," Joseph Bradley said flatly. "Of course, if he's still alive in the morning, we'll have to put on some kind of a bluff. That'll be easy enough. We can do it if we have to."

Clara Bradley nodded. She seemed to be calming down now at sight of the assurance of her husband.

"Yes, I suppose that would be easy enough. Only Jim specified a minister. Suppose he'd know the difference?"

Ruth Worries.

"He'll be so far gone by tomorrow morning that he won't know anything," Joseph prophesied. "Don't worry. In the meantime," turning to Ruth, "you go to your own room. You'll not see him again if I can help it."

Locked in her room, Ruth felt that she would go mad with worry. Her only hope now was Bette. But even that hope seemed fading. Pascoe brought her lunch at noon, entered through Mrs. Bradley's door and chatted back and forth with Clara as he served both luncheons.

"I'm getting doggoned good and tired of this job. It's a combination nurse, housemaid and night-watchman job and I don't like it."

"It won't be long now, Pascoe," Clara laughed. "Say, ring and ask Bette to bring more hot water and some tea balls. This tea is as cold as ice. I'll be glad when we get down to a decent household regime once more."

It was not until late evening that Ruth saw Bette again, alone.

Woman Writer Calls Jealousy Chief Passion

PERSONS who list love, hate or greed as the most overpowering passions make a big mistake, according to Marie Belloc Lowndes, British author, who recently arrived in this country.

The author of 13 novels, and the sister of Hilaire Belloc, who has a number of books to his credit, Mrs. Lowndes believes modern authors generally do not write enough about jealousy, which is perhaps the greatest passion of all, being so overwhelming with most people that "we won't cure it until we get to Heaven," she said, in her first interview after she landed in New York.

"You see jealousy not only in love but in business and finance," she went on. "You see it, in fact, in everything. It begins with childhood, for it is a mistake to think that children necessarily like their companions any more than grown persons do. Children, like adults, are often terribly jealous."

Mrs. Lowndes believes, however, that as the average person grows older, jealousy becomes less. "Most passions do," she continued. "There is, however, no way to conquer jealousy. This generation will never be free of it, nor will any generation to come. It is an overwhelming thing and no person can overcome it if he falls victim to it."

Fortunately, she herself has never been of a jealous disposition, she said. "But that is probably because I have never lost the love of a dear one to another person," she added. She mentioned, incidentally, that her latest novel, "The Second Key," to be published soon, is a study of love and jealousy, with murder as the climax.

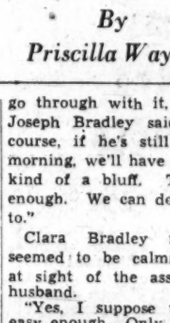
Make Face Pack at Home

THE FRESHNESS of youth, that springtime glow in the complexion—don't let it slip away! A simple face pack made at home will do wonders to halt the years and keep the skin lovely.



It's so easy. Just mix fuller's earth with witch hazel until it is soft as whipped cream. Spread it smoothly on your face, dodging the eyelids, of course. Let it dry, then remove with tepid water.

This works magic with blackheads and coarse pores and oily skin troubles in general. If your skin is dry, such a pack will clear up muddiness, but be sure to follow it up with an application of rich cold cream. Leave a film of it on over night. The pack is intended to remove surplus oil and the dry skin should therefore have the oil restored by creaming.

This is just one of those ten-minute tricks that take away the years. A few minutes of exercise each day keeps the chin and waist line trim and young. Flattering lines and colors soften the too-thin figure and slenderize the plump; tricks of make-up and hairdress play up fine eyes and seem to remold the face to better lines. These things take but little time and clip ten years from your appearance.

Don't let the traces of time work against you in business, or make people say "Mary's aging so much faster than her husband!" Our 40-page illustrated booklet is a real treasure of beauty lore, safe, sure and simple.

Shoulder Lines of This Dress Stress Slimness of the Waist

By Laura I. Baldt, A. M.,

MUCH DETAIL is concentrated in the bodice of this smart day dress. It is softly gathered into a yoke that extends into sleeves. The broad shoulder effect will make your waist look incredibly tiny. The gores of the slim-line skirt gives graceful fullness. Whether you make it of plain or printed crepe silk for immediate wear or of sheer cotton or linen prints you'll love it. In white or pastel tub silks, it is also adorable. Style No. 2852 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18 years, 36, 38 and 40 inches bust. Size 16 requires 3 yards of 39-inch material with ⅜ yard of 39-inch contrasting.

Send TEN CENTS (10c), (coin is preferred) for pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. Be sure to state size you wish. The Spring Fashion Book Costs ten cents. Send for Your Copy Today.

Many Aids to Housecleaning May Be Found by Visit to Stores

Brushes, Cream Treated Kidskin and Rubber Gloves and Other Accessories Lessen the Spring Task and Afford Protection.

THERE IS NO use in putting off your house-cleaning any longer. It is a task that must be accomplished sooner or later, and you will find that if you pitch right in and when the weather is still cool, you will be thankful for the rest of the summer.

You will find, however, that the task won't be nearly as obnoxious as you had expected, if before you begin, you take an early morning jaunt through your favorite department stores in search of a few housecleaning accessories that have been designed to make this annual worry as easy as possible.

If you have been wondering just how to remove the dust from the Venetian blinds that you purchased last fall, look for a brand-new three pronged brush in two handle lengths that will brush out the dirt in a jiffy.

Speaking of brushes, it might be a wise idea to assemble an assortment that will take care of every type of cleaning. You will find it a saving of time and energy in the end. A triangular brush for closet corners, a steel bristled, fairly long brush for gas stoves, a full-headed brush for bed springs, a slim long-headed brush also for bed springs, a button brush for tufted embroidery, a slim long-handled one for radiators—all these little bristling aids will be a boon to the housekeeper when she starts on her annual clean-up.

Gloves to Protect Hands.

If you dread housecleaning because it does things to your hands, take measures before you begin. You can purchase kidskin work gloves, cream treated, which leave your hands softer than they found them. Rubber gloves for working in water that have a roughened palm and finger surface to prevent precious breakables from sliding through soapy fingers are certainly an improvement over the old smooth surfaced type.

For your window cleaning you will find a spray gun a decided help. Then for floors there are several brands of wax that require no rubbing. After your floors are as slick as glass don't take the chance of laying the rugs without first applying a fluid to the underside of your rugs that keeps them from slipping.

Then your upholstery will need attention, and for this you can purchase—but you no doubt already own one—an attachment for your electric sweeper that draws dust and dirt from the fabric and crevices. There is a cream, too, to take off heat rings, and a cleaning fluid which will restore upholstery and drapery fabrics without odor or moisture.

Closets Need Attention.

Take special interest in your closets, for after they are cleaned it would be dangerous to winter fabrics and furs to put them back into a dark corner without using some moth preventative. You will find air-tight cedar chests that stand upright in the closet, or if you haven't enough closet space, ones that slide under the bed. Tuck wool clothes and blankets into these, but be sure to have them cleaned first.

Cellulose film bags for gloves and small articles of clothing will help to keep bureau drawers neat and tidy. To enhance the appearance of the closet after it is scrubbed and shining you might apply a dainty scalloped edging of dustable cellulose film to the shelves. Velvet-covered coat hangers will keep light dresses from slipping to the floor, and jaunty-colored hat racks take up less room than oversized boxes.

Bran Brittle And Lollipops Recipes Given

Correct Candy-Making at Home Saves Time and Material.

Children love home-made candy and are delighted when they are allowed to go into the kitchen to make fondant, taffy or brittle. Often the first trials are not too successful, but experience is a good teacher and soon certain signs are recognized which show when the candy is nearly done. But in gaining this experience, much time and material may be wasted.

If you make candy at home, it is wise to own a thermometer. This will insure accurate results and save fuss and worry. Sugar and water candies (such as fondant, taffy and brittle) should not be stirred while cooking because this will make them "sugar." Fudge may be stirred enough to prevent scorching. Always allow fondant and fudge to cool before beating. This will give a cream texture.

Ready-to-eat cereals are delicious in certain candies. They are easily digested and when added to home cooked sirups, form confections which are both wholesome and delicious, as well as inexpensive.

All-Bran Brittle.

2 cups granulated sugar
1 cup brown sugar
½ cup light corn sirup
1 cup water
¼ cup butter
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup cereal bran

Put the sugars, corn sirup, and water into a saucepan and cook, stirring until dissolved. Continue cooking without stirring until the temperature, 300 degrees F. is reached (very brittle). Remove from fire, add butter and salt, and stir only enough to mix well. Add bran and turn at once on a greased slab or on a greased inverted pan or baking sheet. Smooth out with a spatula. After about a half minute take hold of the edges of the candy and, lifting it slightly from the slab, pull it as thin as possible. Break into irregular pieces.

Lollipops.

2 cups sugar
2-3 cup light corn sirup
1 cup water
½ teaspoon oil of peppermint
Soloring matter

Put the sugar, corn sirup and water into a saucepan and cook, stirring until the sugar is dissolved.

Coloring matter

few minutes until the steam has washed any sugar crystals away from the side of the pan. Remove the cover and boil without stirring until the temperature 310 degrees F. is reached. Remove the candy from the fire, add the coloring and flavoring, stirring only enough to mix. Pour the candy into fancy moulds or on to a flat well-buttered surface. Insert skewers for lollipop handles. The lollipops may be decorated with tiny candies or faces can be put on them by using mints with holes in the center for eyes, jelly beans for nose and a nut for a mouth.

Light Desserts Of Fruit Flavor Spring Favorite

Light desserts with a fresh fruit flavor are especially popular during the spring. The housewife who is looking for a dessert with these qualities will welcome the following recipe for lemon chiffon pudding. It has the advantage, too, of being a dessert that can be prepared in the early morning, so it may be kept chilling in the refrigerator until time to serve, whether it is required for luncheon or dinner.

Lemon Chiffon Pudding.

1½ teaspoons gelatin
¾ cup water
4 eggs, separated
1 teaspoon grated rind of lemon
½ cup lemon juice
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt

Soak gelatin in water. Cook egg yolks, lemon rind and juice and half the sugar in a double boiler until of a custard consistency. Add gelatin and stir often while cooling in a bowl of ice. Add egg whites beaten until stiff and the rest of the sugar added. Pour into sherbet glasses, sprinkle with corn flake pastry crumbs and chill in refrigerator at least three hours before serving. Yield: 8 servings.

Corn Flake Pastry.

2 tablespoons butter (melted)
2 tablespoons sugar
½ cup corn flake crumbs

Roll or grind two cups corn flakes to yield one cup fine crumbs. Combine butter, corn flake crumbs and sugar and mix well.

Honey Has Place In Everyday Menu

What does honey mean to you—pale amber melting into a snowy flake of hot biscuit—a whiff of sweet clover, orange blossoms; your own garden flowers, the pungent fragrance of honey cake, fresh from the oven—a flavor that tantalizes and makes your mouth water just to think of it?

From any point of view—in color, fragrance or flavor, honey is truly the food of epicures; still it takes its place in the everyday menu and serves as a kitchen friend as well.

A cloying sweet alone, it becomes a real delicacy when served with bland foods such as hot breads; with crisp toasted cereals in the biblical combination of milk and honey; or in the modern version of cereal, fruit, milk and honey. It gives zest to baked hams, gingerbread, chocolate cake and such foods of rich flavor. Honey holds moisture in breads and cakes; keeps frostings and sirups from "sugaring."

Cocktail Shaker Develops Muscles

All America will soon mix drinks and perform calisthenics at one and the same time. Sounds impossible, doesn't it? Drinking and exercising have never been boon companions before, but the introduction of a new gadget bids fair to make us healthy as well as thirsty.

The novelty in question is a cocktail shaker that looks like a dressed-up version of the long familiar dumbbell. Chromium-plated, so that it is always bright, clean and stainless, the dumbbell shaker has a capacity of 12 cocktails. These shakers measure 11 inches from tip to tip, and they're easy to grip—and oh, so easy to shake.

They stand upright and are topped with either red or black caps.

It is predicted that a new generation of fun-loving Americans will mix their martinis and Manhattans while they go through the actions that will give them bulging muscles.

Historic House Of Blair Still Is 'Showplace'

Stately Mansion Will Be Opened to Public Next Monday.

By Frances Mangum.

Those who doubt that a house can be a home in the fullness of the term, and still be a "showplace" will find their theory in tatters on visiting the Blair house, 1619 Pennsylvania avenue. This historic place will be opened to the public Monday and Tuesday under the auspices of the District of Columbia committee of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation.

There is nothing museum-like about this house, although it has the stateliness of 100 years and is filled with antiquities and rare objects d'art collected from all corners of the world by many generations of Blairs.

From the moment you enter the reception hall with its tall marble-topped console table, Chinese Chippendale mirror, and marble bust in the corner you are impressed with a certain formality. But when you peer through the doorways and see shelf after shelf of books, large comfortable chairs, and nothing with a don't-touch-me air about it you feel the homeyness of the house.

A Medley of Modes.

This effect is further carried out by the casual arrangement of the furnishings. No room is stiffly, precisely Colonial. No room fully in the Queen Anne mode, the Duncan Phyfe, or the Chippendale. In all the rooms there is an assortment of different pieces, each in itself beautiful, and altogether charming.

In that small room in front of the house where Francis Preston Blair offered Gen. Lee command of the United States Army, is a medley of modes. A Sheraton sofa, some Queen Anne and Heppelwhite chairs, two Duncan Phyfe tables. On the walls, one or two portraits in heavy gold frames, some original cartoons which appeared in the papers during Andrew Jackson's administration, and an aquatint of Washington—incidentally the first picture of the city. This is a room with an air of comfort, a room teeming with interest.

A door from the "small room," as it is called, opens into an impressive dining room. Reflected in the highly polished surface of the Duncan Phyfe dining table is the scintillating crystal chandelier which, unlike the others in the house, has tallow candles instead of electric bulbs. Flanking the tables on one side is an early American sideboard laden with silver and Waterford glassware. There are two magnificent Sheffield candelabra, some exquisitely wrought trays and bowls, and, of particular interest, an Irish potato ring which Mr. Gist Blair, present owner of the house, brought back from Ireland.

In a Colonial cupboard hanging from the wall are two Paul Revere tankards and a silver tea urn dating back to pre-Revolutionary times. Carefully selected to carry out the blue of the Chinese rug are the 1830 French brocade drapes in soft blue and dull gold.

Library Is Interesting.

In the front drawing room—the most formal room in the house—the floor is covered with an Aubusson rug, with its huge vividly tinted figures giving out a glow of color. Over the marble fireplace hangs an immense gold mirror, matched by the one over the mantle in the adjoining living room. In the large side wall panels hang life-size family portraits, each in a massive gilt frame, each covered with protective glass. On cupboards and tables, Stiebal vases and milky glass candelabra and Dresden pitchers speak eloquently of Mr. Blair's penchant for collecting rare glassware.

One of the most interesting rooms is the library—large almost as the average apartment. Covering the floor from end to end is a rug which Mr. Blair ordered before the World War from a renowned Asiatic rug firm. The figures in the rug are reproductions of the figures in the woodwork of the house.

The walls are covered to a height of four or five feet with shelves of books, all bearing marks of use. The chairs are large and overstuffed like the enormous sofa. In the center of the room stands a heavy Chinese table of dark, brownish black wood. Over the shelves are more portraits, and a collection of Japanese prints.

Apple Dumplings Are a Year-'Round Dessert

Light spring luncheons open the way for crisp crust and fruit dessert. So when you are planning your luncheon menus for next week and considering just the right desserts, don't forget that apple dumplings served with caramel sauce and a glass of fresh cold milk will be ideal for the meal that serves a vegetable salad as the main course.

Apple Dumplings, Caramel Sauce Proof of Culinary Skill

PERHAPS THERE IS no beter way to demonstrate your culinary skill to your family and friends than to serve them delicious apple dumplings with caramel sauce. They are tempting to look at, tempting to eat, with their rich, golden brown butter crust, filled with spicy flavored apples, served with tall glasses of fresh milk. They are a pleasing combination for refreshments, a satisfying dessert for a smiple salad luncheon or a vegetable dinner.

This recipe for apple dumplings calls for butter as the shortening ingredient. Many women prefer it for its delicate flavor. Here are the tricks of making good butter crust. The dough is chilled in the refrigerator before rolling it out. It is combined with rosy, crisp apples sliced into the center of the pastry squares, topped with sugar and spice and a generous piece of butter, for flavor. The edges of the pastry squares are moistened with milk or slightly beaten egg white, then the corners are brought together on top and pressed firmly together. They are baked in a hot over (475 degrees F.) for 15 minutes to brown the crust, and then the heat is reduced to (300 degrees F.), or moderately slow, for 30 minutes or until the apples are tender.

Apple Dumplings.

2 cups pastry flour
10 tablespoons butter (½ cup plus 2 tablespoons)
About 6 tablespoons icewater
6 medium apples, pared and cut fine
2-3 cup granulated sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon flour
3 tablespoons butter for topping

Sift flour and measure. Cut the butter, using two knives or a dough blender, until of consistency of wheat grains. Add the water gradually, tossing lightly together with a fork until all the fat-flour particles are moistened. Press gently into a ball and place in refrigerator to chill while preparing apples. Remove pie dough from refrigerator, roll out slightly less than ⅛-inch thickness. Cut into 6 to 7-inch squares. In center of each place 2 to 3 heaping tablespoons of the apple. Sift together sugar, flour and cinnamon. Sift over the apples and 2 tablespoons of the sugar mixture and top each with one-half tablespoon butter. Brush edges and press firmly together according to directions given. Yield: 6 large dumplings.

Caramel Sauce.

1 cup granulated sugar
1½ cups boiling water
2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon cornstarch
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup cold water
1 teaspoon vanilla

Place sugar in heavy skillet and heat until it melts and browns to light amber color, stirring constantly. Be careful not to scorch. Carefully pour in the boiling water and continue heating, with cornstarch and salt mixed with cold water, and stir until well blended. Simmer for 20 minutes, stirring frequently. Cool and add vanilla. Serve with apple dumplings.

Food Pages Will Carry Recipe Winners' Names

Watch the food pages next week for more information concerning the winners of the four grand prizes in the recent series of Post recipe contests. All the winning recipes in this series of six contests will be rejudged to determine the winners of the final prizes—a chromium and black waffle set which includes tron, tray, batter bowl and ladle and sirup pitcher; an electric iron with heat control for every type of fabric; an electric casserole that may be used for warming food as well as cooking and an electric kitchen clock.

As soon as these recipes can be tested the final awards will be made.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"MY LITTLE GIRL and the next door neighbor's little girl play dress-up from one end of the house to the other. And my husband and I don't mind. After all, Helen is our only child and we'll have years and years of neatness and order when she's older. She'll only be this age once and we want her to enjoy herself. We just try to fix the house so that she won't wreck things too irrevocably."

The mother of Helen is a pretty woman with brown eyes and an eager voice. For all of her indulgence with Helen, she manages to have her house looking mighty nice all the time. Perhaps because she has systematically studied to have things that aren't too fragile.

The upholstered furniture is in blue frieze for winter; for summer, she has washable slip covers of flowered cretonne on a blue ground. The living room rug is a figured design that doesn't show foot marks . . . it's predominantly dark red. The wall paper is fresh looking and light—a misty gray indistinct design—but it is washable. The lamps have dark red pottery bases and white shades . . . the curtains are sheer white with dark red draperies lined with gray. She likes to have bowls of dark red roses or bright jonquils in this room. It's not a dramatic place, but it's a very pleasant home where Helen can play and her parents can be comfortable. And oh yes, . . . there aren't any little bibelots around on low tables to be brushed off and broken because a little girl forgot to be careful!

Send a 3-cent stamp for Miss Boykin's bulletin, "How to Make Slip Covers That Won't Wrinkle or Bag." It includes samples of spring fabrics recommended for slip covers.

British County Is 100% Audience for the Radio

There is one county in Britain where the homes are 100 per cent radio-minded, according to a survey recently made by the British Broadcasting Co. Selkirk, in the lowlands of Scotland, has a radio in every home. The English counties are led by Hertfordshire with 25 per cent. In all England, the average percentage of listeners to population was 17; in Scotland 13; in Wales 12, and in northern Ireland only 6.

35-lb. Baggage Limit Proves No Handicap if One Really Knows How.

How many clothes can a woman carry and still remain within the 35-pound baggage limitation of the air lines?

In answer to this question, United Air Lines cites what one of the Nation's best dressed women carried on a New York-California flight and still did not use up the full 35-pound allowance.

The contents of her airplane bag were:

Three printed chiffon evening dresses. One striped linen evening dress. Two pairs of kid street shoes—one navy and one dark red. One pair of golf shoes. One pair of silver evening sandals. One unlined foulard dressing gown. Four pairs of chamois gloves. Three square foulard scarfs. One alligator bag, and one white crepe bag.

Alsacian Influence Seen.

There may be some style significance in the revival of Alsacian folk costumes planned for Whitmonday in June. All Alsacians are to wear the distinctive garb of their grandparents. Fabrics are being prepared and tailor apprentices are being taught how to make the garments.

Joan of Arc Styles Hinted by Designers

"One of the newest influences in fashion might be the Joan of Arc," say stylists, who are enthusiastic about the costumes used in the production of "Saint Joan," Bernard Shaw's chronicle play, starring Katharine Cornell.

The short tunic, diversely interpreted in satins, silks and mail, is a style feature portrayed with lavish decoration. The applique theme is important again in all-over fleur de lis motifs or in diamond-patterned decorations. Directly in the modern feeling are the chain and mail belts which accompany the straight, close-fitting tunics.

High-cut shoes with up-pointed toes, worn by Miss Cornell in her crusader's costume, further the period influence in footwear.

Kitchen Time Cut by Cooking At Week-End

Preparation Aids Sunday Freedom; Short Order Dishes Advised.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THIS spring you can effect a menu plan for week-end meals that will give you as much time as you like away from the kitchen. If the following menus look complicated at first glance, don't pass them over, but give them a moment longer and use your most calculating eye.

Saturday's dinner comes first: The bouillon can be ready in less than ten minutes if you buy a good canned consomme and flavor it to taste with your favorite brand of tomato juice. Serve it hot with thin lemon slices stuck through with one or two cloves.

Baked beans take almost all day to cook, but they can be soaked overnight on Thursday, pre-cooked on Friday and finished in the oven on Saturday morning. All they need is a little reheating before serving. The frankfurters, of course, will cook in about ten minutes on top of the stove. The cabbage for cole slaw can be grated in the morning and wrapped in a damp towel and set to crisp in the refrigerator vedgetable container. Brown bread, the real steamed kind, can be purchased in cans. It can be reheated by merely immersing the can in boiling water for a short length of time.

Breakfast Longer.

Sunday's breakfast will take a bit longer to prepare than the usual breakfast, but the idea here is to have two meals on Sunday instead of the usual three. Let the early morning golfers, tennis players or horseback riders find their cereal and cream before they depart. Then serve the rest of the menu when they return about 11.

This plan will give you plenty of time in which to prepare the main meal of the day. Supper, if anyone needs further sustenance later in the evening, is a meal which suggests everyone find his own snack in the refrigerator.

The following recipes will be helpful in preparing the suggested week-end menus.

Cream of Cucumber Soup.

Melt four tablespoons butter in a saucepan.

Add three large cucumbers, peeled and sliced thinly, and two leeks, sliced thinly.

Cook for ten minutes, or until cucumbers are soft.

Add 3 tablespoons flour. Stir until well blended. Add 3 cups canned chicken soup, 1 cup milk, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon celery salt and ⅛ teaspoon white pepper.

Cook until mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Pour the mixture through a sieve and press the cucumber pulp through it. Reheat and add ½ cup of heavy cream. Serves four.

Strawberry Omelet.

Make your favorite recipe for omelet in the usual manner. When done turn out onto a hot platter. Spread one-half with fresh crushed strawberries that have been lightly sweetened with sugar, fold over, sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve at once.

Roast Veal, Stuffed Olives.

When your butcher is tying your roast of veal ask him to insert large stuffed olives in the crevices. Roast in the usual manner. The olives impart a delicious flavor to the meat. They also add an attractive colorful touch to the slices of meat. Meat roasted this way is especially nice served sliced cold.

Buffet Luncheons, Suppers Gain Favor With Hostesses

By Margaret Wallace.

BUFFET SUPPERS and luncheon are favorite forms of entertaining in Washington. The successful hostess makes this type of meal as appetizing and attractive as the formal luncheon or dinner.

While some hostesses provide small tables for buffet suppers there are many who cannot do this on account of lack of space. One of the reasons for giving a buffet party is to have more guests.

Some hostesses arrange small tables throughout the house. This is a good plan when the rooms are not limited to dining room and drawing room. It is really better to ask fewer guests than to have to have tables in the drawing room.

This rule can be broken, however, by the skilful hostess. One of the most successful of Washington hostesses often entertains at buffet meals, although she can use only one large room in her apartment. The guests are received and the buffet supper served in the same room. She uses small side tables for each guest and the supper is served from a long table at one end of the room. The tables are removed as soon as the meal is finished. The guests always stay late to play bridge and sing and even dance.

In planning a buffet meal much thought should be given to the kind of food to be served. If tables are not used the food should be of the variety that can be eaten with a fork or spoon. One Washington hostess has learned a lesson since she served delicious ham at a "stand-up" buffet supper and found it was not eaten by her guests because they had no way to cut the slices.

Even if tables are not provided the clever hostess will provide seats. Very few persons enjoy eating while standing.

Query—My sister has come to visit me. I have been invited to a buffet luncheon. I have tried to reach my hostess to ask her if I may bring my sister since her entertainment is a buffet one and she will not have to be worried about seating another guest. I have found out that my hostess will not arrive from her country home at her city home until a short time before her luncheon. Do you think it would be correct for me to take my sister anyway and explain I had tried to make the request.

Answer—It would be very rude to take your sister to the buffet luncheon without permission from your hostess. It is really not good form to ask for an invitation for anyone to a meal.

Query—Will it be proper for me to ask the guests to help themselves at a buffet supper? My husband and my son will, of course, endeavor to serve the women. There are to be other men present. Would it be proper to ask them to serve the women also?

Answer—It is usual for the men at a buffet luncheon to serve the women guests. It also is proper for the women to help themselves.

Query—I wish to ask the cousin of my fiance to be my bridesmaid. I have never met her. I would like to ask her to visit in my home at the time of the wedding. She lives in a distant city. Should I write to her or her mother or should my mother write?

Answer—Your mother should write to the young woman's mother and you should write to the young woman yourself.

Fresh Pineapple Cubes.

Fresh pineapple is easily peeled if the fruit is first cut in one-half or three-quarter inch slices. After cutting the fruit in rings, peel each one, slice the circles in strips and cube, removing the core of each slice. Place the cubes in a serving bowl and cover with granulated sugar. Cover the bowl and set to chill in the refrigerator until the fruit is cold and the sugar dissolved.

Recipe Contest

Strawberry shortcake is a subject of never-ending debate. The name itself suggests that this famous spring dessert should be made of a rich, short, biscuit-like dough, and many persons will confirm this opinion. But there are others who will vehemently deny that this is the true interpretation of the dessert, and will continue to eat their strawberries with a sponge-like cake, and even go so far as to turn down cream in favor of a sticky marshmallow sauce.

So, in announcing its new recipe contest for next week, The Post has decided to open the subject of strawberry shortcake to the food page readers. Each one of you is invited to enter your favorite recipe for strawberry shortcake in this new contest. Perhaps an overwhelming number of recipes for either type of strawberry shortcake will decide the true version without further controversy.

The five best recipes submitted in this contest will receive cash awards. First prize is $5, second, $3, and the three remaining prizes $1 each.

Simply write out your favorite recipe for strawberry shortcake and send it to Dorothea Duncan, in care of The Washington Post. Be sure to mail your entry in time to reach this office not later than next Saturday morning.

Results of this week's contest will be found in next Wednesday's food pages.

Women's Food Lacks Needed Iron Content

British Expert's Researches Disclose More Meat Is Eaten by Men.

The average woman is more anemic than the average man because she does not get enough iron in her food, reports an article in The Lancet of London.

This conclusion is commented on by the medical correspondent of The Morning Post:

"Investigators have shown that a group of men of the middle classes who weighed all their food for a week took half as much iron again as a group of women keeping similar records," he writes. "Even allowing for the smaller weight of women they took less iron and this was mainly due to a higher consumption of meat by men.

"It is clear that women are suffering from some deficiency of iron, for if large doses of iron are given to normal men and women as medicine, so to speak, the level of the iron containing pigment in the blood is not in affect in the men, but is definitely raised in the women.

"It is clear from the results reported that the average woman has little to spare before she becomes definitely anemic and foods containing available iron ought to form a regular part of her daily diet."

A BOWL of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN and stewed prunes is as good to eat as it is good for you. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides the "bulk" which is needed to promote regular habits.

Scientific tests have shown that ALL-BRAN corrects constipation due to insufficient "bulk" . . . a condition that may impair family fitness. This condition causes discomfort, may lead to headaches, loss of appetite, even disease.

Try the delicious recipe for ALL-BRAN Prune Muffins on this page. Take advantage of the combination of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN and prunes offered by your grocer.

If you haven't received your free copy of the ALL-BRAN recipe book, recently distributed in this community, write to Kellogg Company, Battle Creek, Michigan, and we will be glad to send you one.

ALL-BRAN PRUNE MUFFINS
¼ cup chopped prunes
2 tablespoons shortening
½ cup sugar 1 egg
1 cup Kellogg's ALL-BRAN
¾ cup sweet milk 1 cup flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
Soak dried prunes for one hour or longer; drain thoroughly, remove pits and cut into small pieces with scissors or chop medium fine. Cream shortening and sugar thoroughly; add egg and beat until creamy. Add ALL-BRAN and milk; let soak until the moisture is taken up. Sift flour with salt and baking powder; add to first mixture with chopped prunes and stir only until flour disappears. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full and bake in a moderate oven (400° F.) about 30 minutes.
Note: When sour milk or buttermilk is used instead of sweet milk, use ½ teaspoon soda and only 1 teaspoon baking powder.

How a Baby GROWS

By Dr. Arnold Gesell, M. D.

INFANT EYES: Vision leads early infant development . . . the baby uses his eyes before he uses his hands, can see before he can reach. The first row of pictures below are of a 4-week-old baby. He is able to stare only vacantly, for the 12 tiny muscles that move his eyeballs mature slowly. He can feel the feather on his bow or foot, but cannot look at it. He will not look at the rattle shown in the second picture until he is about 20 weeks old. In the second row of pictures, the baby is shown at 6 weeks of age. His eye muscles are beginning to co-ordinate efficiently, and his eyes now follow the ring as it moves past him for a short distance. At 20 weeks he will turn both head and eyes in pursuit of a moving object. TOMORROW: A full page of rotogravure pictures in The Sunday Post, showing character development in the child as evidenced in the expression of the eyes between the ages of 16 and 80 weeks.

Dozen Beard Aids Jailed; Wives Weep

Women, Hysterical, Are Guided From Court After Ruling.

In a scene almost without parallel in the history of the District Supreme Court, "Big" Sam Beard's gambling empire crashed yesterday when each of the 12 men convicted with him last May for conspiracy to violate the District's gaming laws was ordered ordered to prison to serve terms of 1 to 3 years.

In a never-to-be-forgotten courthouse drama, with its death-like stillness, the 12 men, most of them the fathers of small children, heard the sonatic voice of Justice Joseph W. Cox order them to the penitentiary. Even before the jurist had pronounced sentence, those in attendance could gather from his remarks his decision and two wives, hysterical, were escorted from the court.

As Justice Cox, mild-mannered and soft-spoken, announced that public policy led him to the belief that he had no right to release any of the 12 on probation, sobs arose in the courtroom. Of the 12, eight had never before been arrested for anything more serious than a minor traffic charge.

Soon after the defendants had been led to the detention cells in the basement of the court, their wives and sweethearts were allowed to visit them in the cell block. They were to be taken to Lorton later.

When Beard was sentenced last week he was sped to a train under guard and so to the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta, for two to six years.

Report on Each Case.

In appealing for thorough investigations by the probation officer of the cases of the 12 "little men," who had been convicted with Beard, Defense Attorneys Leo A. Rover, John J. Sirica and Maurice McInerney stressed the fact that the gaming overlord, because of his previous convictions, was ineligible for probation, but his associates were.

Justice Cox, at the time, ruled from the bench that he wanted a report on the case of each of the 12 men before he formally pronounced sentence.

Those sentenced yesterday were William Carroll, James T. Gallagher, Fred H. Heck, George E. Hutchins, Melville G. Jacobs, Sidney Kaplan, Lewis L. Levy, Fred J. Meese, Timothy H. Noel, Joseph A. O'Callaghan, John J. Sortori, and William J. Stone.

Justice Cox, in a lengthy dissertation prior to the sentences, said that had he had the information available to him yesterday he would not have issued the sentences he gave when the 13 men were convicted.

He asserted several of the defendants were World War veterans, that others had drifted into the gaming racket, and still others had acted as mere employes on a salary basis. Even so, he said, he had no right to change the sentence he originally imposed since the higher courts had officially upheld the convictions.

Beard and his cohorts were convicted of operating a gigantic race-track information service from the Mather Building. Their services were to a score of race "joints" where bets were accepted, police said. They were supplying up-to-the-minute information, otherwise obtainable only at the track or at one of the "joints."

Convicted in February.

Meanwhile, reversing action of the District Supreme Court, the United States Court of Appeals yesterday ordered the release on bail for Morris E. (Dutch) Irwin and five others convicted with him of violating the gaming laws, pending the outcome of appeals.

The Appellate Court held there were "substantial" questions of law involved in the Irwin appeal, and, under a recent ruling of the United States Supreme Court, asserted he and his five co-defendants were entitled to liberty on bond pending a final decision.

Irwin was convicted with Edward J. Gibson, Wilbur S. Carroll, Leonard F. Hill, Frank E. Crandall and James McIntyre. All were allegedly involved in the operation of a gaming establishment in the 1100 block of Fourteenth street northwest. They were convicted February 12 and were ordered to jail by Justice F. Dickinson Letts.

Jews to Fete Rabbi, Leaving For Palestine

The Rev. Gedaliah (George) Silverstone, who is soon to relinquish his post as Chief Orthodox Rabbi of Washington to make his home in Palestine, will be honored at a testimonial party tomorrow night in Tifereth Israel Synagogue, Fourteenth and Euclid streets northwest.

Rabbi Silverstone has occupied Capital pulpits 30 years, the last 12 of which he was spiritual leader of Tifereth Israel Congregation. He came to Washington early in the century from Belfast, Ireland, where he was chief rabbi.

His friends and fellow rabbis will gather at the Euclid street synagogue to pay tribute to the 64-year-old Jewish clergyman, who has married more couples than he can remember. The guest speaker will be Rabbi Joseph Konwitz, of New York, president of the Union of Orthodox Rabbis of the United States and Canada.

The retiring pastor, father of ten children, has gained Nation-wide prominence as a Zionist and social worker. He was formerly vice president of the Union of Orthodox Rabbis and was a delegate to the Sixth Zionist Congress at Basle, Switzerland. He is a director of the Jewish Sanatarium at Denver and a director of the Hebrew Home for the Aged in Washington.

He and Mrs. Silverstone live at 1639 Irving street northwest. Six of the ten Silverstone children are Washingtonians. A son, Harry, is a rabbi in Buffalo and a daughter lives in Plainfield, N. J. There is a daughter in France and another in England.

A. L. Schiller is in charge of arrangements for the farewell party tomorrow, which will begin at 8 p. m.

Radical Laws Imperil U. S., Dorsey Warns

The present majorities in both houses of Congress wish to enact unconstitutional laws to force State socialism on our country, Dr. Roscoe J. C. Dorsey, professor of law and jurisprudence of the Washington College of Law, said last night at the annual dinner of the Dames of the Loyal Legion at the Hotel Mayflower.

"Should these radical laws become the law of the land," he warned the 65 delegates to the legion's annual convention, "much that your fathers, brothers, husbands and sons fought to preserve shall be taken from us, and future generations shall pass into political and economic slavery."

Brig. Gen. Perry L. Miles, U. S. A., told the meeting of the Army's non-military work and of its modernization program. Mrs. Harriet Vaughn Rigdon, president of the Dames, presided. Remembering her bitter experience with the Marine Band, which walked out on her recently at the patriotic conference on national defense, she had obtained the services of th Army Band for entertainment last night.

The Dames opened their national convention yesterday morning. At the afternoon session, Dr. Stewart W. McClelland, president of Lincoln Memorial University, Cumberland Gap, Tenn., told about the university, which is supported by the Dames.

The convention closes this morning with election of officers. Mme. Cantacuzene-Grant is slated to succeed to the presidency.

Congressmen to Speak.

Senator L. J. Dickinson, of Iowa, and Representative Joe Starnes, of Alabama, will speak on "Americanism" and the "Deportation of Aliens" at a luncheon meeting Monday of the American Coalition at the Hotel Carlton.

4 New Wings Open Today At Glenn Dale

150 Additional Beds for Child Tuberculars to Be Dedicated.

Adequate Personnel Is Lacking, Due to Cut in Supply Bill.

By Gerald G. Gross.

Bringing new hope to the boys and girls of Washington suffering from tuberculosis, four newly completed wings providing 150 additional beds at the Glenn Dale Children's Sanatorium will be dedicated today.

But adequate personnel has not been authorized for the addition.

With the enlarged facilities, the sanatorium will have a maximum capacity of 300 beds. District officials united yesterday in asserting the prevalence of tuberculosis among Capital children is sufficiently great to have each of those 300 beds filled within a short time. Dr. D. L. Finucane, superintendent of the institution, was one of them. But he added:

"Even with the six additional nurses and six domestic attendants we have been allowed, it would be impossible to care properly for 300 patients because of lack of adequate personnel."

At present the sanatorium, off the Defense highway in nearby Prince Georges County, is filled to capacity. The District Tuberculosis Association is now in the midst of an early diagnosis campaign, which is expected to uncover many hitherto unsuspected cases of the white plague among children.

Scores on Waiting List.

Several score youngsters are on the Glenn Dale waiting list or under treatment in Children's or Gallinger Hospitals, while awaiting transfer to the country sanatorium. Plans now being made which will coordinate tuberculosis hospitalization activities of the Board of Public Welfare and the Health Department are expected to reveal more eligible cases.

In short, every effort is being made both by municipal and private agencies to get every boy and girl into the sanatorium who belongs there. The danger is that the campaign may prove too successful and the personnel shortage, already serious, will be aggravated to the extent the young patients' chances for recovery will be imperiled.

The District's 1937 supply bill, as passed by the House, took $10,020 off the Budget Bureau's recommended estimate for maintenance of the institution in 1936-37. Previously the Budget Bureau had slashed the estimate which had been submitted by the Commissioners.

In the report accompanying the bill, the House sub-committee on District appropriations said.

"Because testimony indicates that the institution will not be operated at capacity during the next fiscal year, the committee has disallowed five minor domestic attendants at $1,080 each." One property clerk, one carpenter and one mechanic also were disallowed.

Parents Give Up Hope.

Yet Dr. Finucane, Elwood Street, director of public welfare, and Dr. A. Barklie Coulter, director of the Health Department's Tuberculosis Bureau, all predicted yesterday that there should be no difficulty in filling the 300-bed sanatorium to capacity, as far as enlisting patients is concerned.

It was pointed out that scores of parents have been discouraged by the long waiting list and have given up hope of getting their infected children into the sanatorium.

And so the expanded health factory, now equipped with a splendid operating suite, sun decks and other modern facilities, will be dedicated this afternoon, confronted with the puzzling prospect of becoming uncomfortable and inefficient if its resources are used as they are supposed to be used—to the maximum.

It should be mentioned, however, that the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations has indicated it will restore the sanatorium funds eliminated by the House. Such action, even if enacted, would improve the situation, but still leave the institution undermanned.

The new additions will be presented by Lieut. Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, in behalf of the District government. Addresses will be delivered by F. W. McReynolds, chairman of the Board of Public Welfare; Dr. H. J. Crosson, chairman of the board's medical service committee, and Dr. Coulter.

The Rev. Dr. W. L. Darby will give the invocation, and the Right Rev. Mgr. John T. O'Grady will pronounce benediction. Music will be furnished by the Army Band.

The Kitten Has Eight Toes

3 Sisters and Brothers Are Normal, But They Lose Out to Freak During Scramble at Meal Time; Toilette Proves Difficult.

Eight toes on one's front paws are no handicap in the kitten world—at least Boxer, the gray Maltese kitten of Ernest Ladd, of 1601 New Hampshire avenue northwest, hasn't found it so.

Boxer, who despite his pugnacious name, is of the gentler sex, came into this world six weeks ago with three sisters and a brother. Where they were normal in all respects, Boxer had eight toes on each of her front paws. She received the name because of her paws' likeness to boxing gloves.

Her fellow-kittens, however, haven't isolated her as a freak and Boxer has been making the most of her eight toes. When milk or cream is served, Boxer wades in with her brothers and sisters. Being six toes to the good, she has been getting more than her share and is waxing fat.

The only handicap that Boxer has suffered so far has been in licking her toes. Boxer is lagging behind the other kittens in making her toilette.

Negro Housing To Be Discussed At Conference

Better housing for Negroes will be discussed in a two-day conference beginning this morning at Miner Teachers College, Georgia avenue and Euclid street, with Mrs. Roosevelt and officials of the Federal and District Governments participating. The conference is sponsored by the Washington Commitee on Housing, in co-operation with all Colored organizations interested, an dis expected to serve educational purposes only.

Mrs. Roosevelt will address the conference tonight at its only evening session. She is honorary chairman of the Washington committee, and has been active in national, as wel las local housing problems. Her interest has been invoked to help arouse interest in the significance of improved housing. Campbell C. Johnson, secretary of the Twelfth Street Young Men's Christian Association, is chairman of the committee.

Slums and public health will be discussed this afternoon by Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, who has been active in the campaign to decrease the high tubercuiosis mortality rate here. Delegates wil lbe welcomed at the opening session today at noon by Commissioner Melvin Hazen. Maj. Campbell Johnson will introduce as presiding officer the chairman of the Washington Committee on Housing, Clarence Phelps Dodge. Dr. Robert C. Weaver, of the Interior Department, will discuss "The Significance of Housing."

Other speakers will include George W. Beasley, president of the Federation of Civic Associations, and Hillyard Robinson, architect of the Langston Terrace low-cost housing project.

Traffic Riders Given to King For Judgment

The task of passing upon the several proposed riders to the District supply bill relating to traffic was turned over to Senator King, chairman of the District Committee, yesterday by Chairman Thomas of the sub-committee on District appropriations.

Because the amendments recommended by the District Commissioners are strictly legislative in character, Senator Thomas will await the judgment of Senator King as to how they should be handled.

It is likely that some of the proposals may be incorporated in separate bills and be reported without attachment to the appropriations measure.

The District Commissioners, in recommending the riders, also asked that favorable action be taken on four pending bills relating to traffic matters. The bills would authorize semi-annual inspection of motor vehicles, magistrate courts, higher penalties for first offense reckless driving and the cancellation of driving rights of non-resident offenders.

The riders would limit the number of taxicabs to 2,000, authorize the commissioners to require snow removal, set up a Congressional committee to study staggered hour plans for Government employes, permit the licensing and regulation of parking lots and authorize the commissioners to install parking machine devices at some future time.

Parking Meters Termed Additional Burden.

Parking meters in the city's downtown streets would force motorists to pay out $450,000 for "the privilege of being arrested more promptly because of a moment or two of overtime parking," according to a statement yesterday by the American Automobile Association's District Motor Club.

The statement announced the club's advisory council had voted overwhelmingly against the installation of such devices in Washington.

"The real effect of the meter would not be so much to improve parking conditions, but to saddle a further load of double taxation on the shoulders of car owners.

"The parking meter plan is not a safety plan; it is not a traffic control measure; it is not even an adequate parking relief measure. Its adoption would delay the working out of a sane, sound and effective solution of our parking problem."

World Youth on War March, Dr. Poling Warns in Speech

Over the world young people are on the march and the sound of their tread is ominous, Dr. Daniel A. Poling, president of the International Christian Endeavor Union, said last night.

"Outside of Great Britain I found no active peace movement," Dr. Poling, just back from a world tour, told 500 members of the District Union at their monthly meeting at the Covenant Presbyterian Church.

"In Europe and Asia youth is marching not to the promise of rewards," he asserted, "but to the call of a very hard patriotism and in the face of death. It is a call not of programs but of personalities.

"It is inevitable that they should meet some day at some frontier. They have met before. We promised God that that was the war to end war.

"There is only one alternative to this leadership. There is only one personality which transcends the popularity of the dictator. And that is the personality of Jesus Christ."

He then told of the resolution signed by representatives of 4,000,000 Christian Endeavorers belonging to 47 nations at the recent congress at Budapest which called for a "Christian peace—a peace after justice."

Before Dr. Poling took the platform, the 500 members voted unanimously to ask the House Judiciary Committee to report out an anti-gambling bill for the District.

The president, Frances Sangster, was empowered to appoint a committee to meet with the House group.

P.U.C. Values Its Properties At $478,537

Lays Down Conditions for Purchase by Capital Transit Co.

Payment Terms Fixed; Sale Held Likely to Be Effected.

A maximum price of $478,537.87 was put on the Washington Rapid Transit Co. by the Public Utilities Commission in a letter to the Capital Transit Co. made public yesterday.

The letter prescribed the price and other conditions under which the commission would approve purchase of the Washington Transit by the Capital Transit. It was in response to a proposal by the latter, made several weeks ago, to buy the interest held by the North American Co., a utilities holding concern, in the Rapid Transit Co.

Under the proposal, the North American was to have been paid $539,623, $63,710.13 more than the commission said it would approve. It was proposed the Capital Transit should pay $10 a share for the 21,237 shares of the capital stock of the bus company now held in the name of J. E. Baker, of New York, and should pay off a bus company note amounting to $327,253.87 held by the North American.

Cut Shares to $7.

The commission cut the $10-a-share price down to $7. This would place the total price of North American held stock at $148,659. There are 375 shares held by others. At $7 a share they would cost $2,625.

The commission said it would approve payment of the note held by the North American, but only under an extended payment plan, but payment of the note and for the stock would be contingent on the complete and absolute merger of the bus company with Capital Transit.

For the stock, $1 a share would be paid on consummation of the purchase contract; one-half of the balance would be paid on physical amalgamation or the two companies, and the remainder one year thereafter.

The note would be paid as follows: $27,253.87 on consummation of the merger and upon indorsement and transfer of the note to the Capital Transit Co., and the balance of $300,000 would be paid in ten annual installments of $30,000, with interest at not more than 5 per cent.

Merger Is Required.

As majority stockholder, on consummation of the purchase, the Capital Transit Co. would be required to agree in advance that it would "proceed immediately to effectuate an arrangement for the immediate operation of the properties, rights and franchises of the Washington Rapid Transit Co. as part and parcel of the properties of the Capital Transit Co., and that this unity or merger of properties will be made effective perpetually by proceedings, instruments or deeds at the earliest possible date."

Informal discussions of the purchase plan have been proceeding for some time, and although formal action must be taken by the companies on the purchase plan as amended by the commission, they are expected to give their approval.

Consummation of the merger would give Capital Transit all the major public transportation lines of the District. It would mean transfers between the street cars and buses of the car company and the lines now operated by Rapid Transit.

Various inequalities in bus fares are under study by the commission and proceedings are to be instituted soon looking to establishment of uniform bus fares throughout the city, it was said by Riley E. Elgen, chairman of the commission.

Tall Cedars to Parade Before Show's Opening

A parade by members of Washington's Forest 104, Tall Cedars of Lebanon, and Baltimore's Forest 45 will feature the opening of the Johnny J. Jones Exposition Shows on Wednesday night. The Tall Cedars are sponsoring the show.

The parade will start at Union Station plaza and go by way of Second, G, Third, K, Montello and Neal streets to the lot at Fifteenth and H streets northeast.

Horse Falls Into Mudhole In Search for Soft Track

Belle, a strawberry roan, owned by Arthur Cook, Negro, of 416 M street northwest, isn't much on a fast track—but yesterday she decided to try the mud.

The only mud to be found around for several miles is a sewer excavation in the rear of her stable. Walking back to investigate she fell into a muddy hole.

The more she tried to run the deeper she sank until only her back and head were above the mire.

Cook, her owner, doesn't believe in racing and would rather see Belle between the shafts of his wagon. Realizing Belle's plight he called the rescue squad.

No. 1 Rescue Squad responded and while police held back crowds they went to work. Two belts were placed under the mare's stomach. A block and tackle was rigged overhead.

Much heaving, some groans from Belle and the help of six spectators were required to bring her to terra firma.

A good bath and a bag of oats and Belle will be good as new, Cook said.

Today she will do all her running on concrete. "It's harder on the hoofs but easier on the stomach than mud," Belle neighed to onlookers.

Mendoza Calls Future Bright For Venezuela

When Gen. Juan Vicente Gomez, dictator of Venezuela, died last December, it seemed remote to people reading their morning papers over the breakfast table, but to more than 3,000,000 Venezuelans it meant the end of a long and brutal tyranny.

Jan Mendoza, new Venezuelan Minister to this country, said this yesterday. He reported that a "new deal" for the Venezuelan people was being instituted by the new government under the leadership of President-elect Eleazor Lopez-Contreras, former minister of war.

"Economically, Gen. Gomez did a great deal for our country," said the Minister in his room at the Mayflower, "but morally he put the country back many years."

The reign of terror which marked the rule of Gomez was such that no real cultural or spiritual progress could be made, he added. Admitted that the country had no foreign debt and that the last of the internal debt would soon be retired; he pointed out this was due, in large part, to a lowering of the standard of living and the selling of public offices.

"After such a long period of hardship it will take our country some time to recover," he said, "but we intend to carry out a series of public-work projects, such as roadways, to help our people, and to improve their situation."

At present the country is suffering somewhat from the world depression, he said, but the government is trying to help the farmers by giving them an export bounty on all produce they send abroad.

Although he has traveled several times in Europe, this is the first time Senor Mendoza has been in this country.

Undertakers Report Theft of Auto in Bethesda.

W. W. Chambers Co., undertakers, reported to the police last night that one of their funeral cars had been stolen yesterday afternoon while O. O. Philips, an employe, was making funeral arrangements in Bethesda, Md.

A woman in the house across the street, Chambers said, told police that she saw two young men drive off in the car.

Drive to Halt 'Prize' Games Opens Today

Police to Enforce Ban on Bingo and Similar 'Luck' Pastimes.

Edwards Orders Rigid Guard; Social Groups 'to Play Bridge.'

Enforcement of the recent ruling of District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett prohibiting all "games of chance," including bingo, punch boards, raffles and door prize lotteries, at religious, social and fraternal benefits and carnivals, was scheduled to begin today.

In letters sent last night to all precinct captains and to Lieut. Little, of the Vice Squad, Inspector Edwards ordered all of them to be on the lookout for violators of the lottery law as interpreted by Garnett.

The letters were sent out upon receipt of a letter by Edwards from Garnett calling attention to the fact that "bingo games are games of chance and therefore illegal," regardless of the purpose for which the proceeds of the game were to be donated.

Garnett's only concession to bingo games operated for worthy purposes as contrasted with those run purely for profit was to recommend leniency for first violators.

"In cases of first violators," he wrote, "these violators should be given a proper warning and arrest and prosecution should follow on a second offense. If defenders are known to be gamblers no second should be given them."

With all "games of chance" prohibited, bridge seems likely to replace bingo as the chief pastime of hundreds of Washington housewives, lodge brothers and sisters, mothers and church auxiliaries. Many organizations forced to rearrange their functions to come within the law have already decided to substitute one-night bridge tournaments.

Assistant District Attorney Roger Robb has approved bridge and most other card games as "games of skill," which are permitted. Regarding poker, Mr. Robb was not so certain, admitting that the way some persons played the game it was a matter of sheer luck and that the way others played skill might easily dominate.

Protests against Garnett's ruling continued to pour into the office of the district attorney yesterday.

The sorrowful task of returning funds already collected for raffles and bingo parties was forced on several organizations. The Anacostia Citizens Association, for example, which had sold more than 300 tickets at 25 cents each for the bingo party scheduled for last night, called off their affair yesterday.

Another group of Federal employes who had sold 1,100 tickets for an automobile raffle also had to make refunds.

Anti-Noise Campaign To Get Under Way Soon

Date for launching the much-discussed official anti-noise campaign is to be fixed at a meeting of District officials and others with Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen next Wednesday. Commissioner Hazen set the gathering yesterday after instructing William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic, and chairman of the Noise Abatement committee, and Harry P. Somerville, committee secretary, to have plans ready by that time for beginning the movement to cut down the noise.

Glamorous, beautiful Anna Held was popularly supposed to get her unrivalled complexion from bathing in milk.

"Scandalous," said the women. "Marvelous," said the men. But as a matter of fact it wasn't true. She didn't bathe in milk. And if she had it wouldn't have helped her complexion.

AND FOR A VERY GOOD REASON

Beautiful skin comes from within. It's not something to be plastered on. Nature's most important beauty secret, as every doctor knows, is a healthy body. And that's where milk does play an important part.

We all know that there's nothing like milk for growing youngsters . . . to build sturdy bodies . . . to put "roses" in their cheeks. No other food supplies them with quite the same vitamins . . . with the nourishing elements so needed to keep them bubbling with health.

But did you ever stop to think that grown-ups, too, need this vital easily digested food? For milk is brim full of vitamins . . . those health-giving elements which mean so much to our bodies.

Ovation Greets Knockout Bill At the Earle

By Nelson B. Bell.

"MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN." Columbia Pictures filmization of a story by Clarence Buddington Kelland, adapted to the screen by Robert Riskin, starring Gary Cooper, with Jean Arthur, George Bancroft, Lionel Stander, Douglas Dumbrille, Raymond Walburn, H. B. Warner, Emma Dunn, Warren Hymer, Ruth Donnelly, Christian Rub, Walter Catlett, John Wray and George Cooper. Directed by Frank Capra. Previewed Tuesday, April 14.

Tuba players, judges, psychiatrists, lawyers and all the rest of us, it seems, are more likely than not to be "pixilated."

"Pixilated" is a funny word of doubtful lineage employed to lend point to Frank Capra's latest funny picture, which yesterday rocked the largest audiences of the season at the Earle Theater. It harks back vaguely to "pixie" and has to do with being misguided and misguiding others — a polite term, as a matter of fact, to be employed when it appears disadvantageous to accuse a person frankly of being a "nut."

BELL.

That was the charge finally lodged against young Mr. Longfellow Deeds, who, like the hero of "Three Men on a Horse," was a verse writer for a firm of postcard publishers, when his shyster legal advisers haled him into court for a sanity hearing because he played a tuba and was about to give away a fortune of $20,000,000.

Uncle Pulled a Boner.

To get the full import of this situation, it is necessary to go back to the death of a rich old codger who left Longfellow the $20,000,000. He was only an uncle, and not very well acquainted with his nephew, or he would have known better. Longfellow wrote his postcard verses, for some of which he received as much as $25, oom-pahed on his tuba in the town band and otherwise had himself a swell time in the little New England village where he was born and raised.

Longfellow didn't fit in the city, except as a laughing-stock for the smart-crackers, fall guy for a clever newspaper gal and prospective meal ticket for his unscrupulous attorneys. Because their accounts were slightly out of whack, these last-named gentlemen, comprising the firm of Cedar, Cedar, Cedar & Budington, decided to take over, by one means or another, as much of Longfellow's $20,000,000 as they could lay their talons on—which turned out to be none at all! In the meantime, the blonde reporter and the hick from the sticks had fallen in love. Longfellow had just about fallen out again upon learning of the perfidy of the only person in New York he had trusted.

That is the status of things when the action moves into court for one of the sanest, most surprising and most amusing lunacy hearings ever scribbled on a docket. How it all comes out will not be disclosed here to destroy the fun of future audiences.

It will not be going too far, however, to set down that Frank Capra has contrived another comedy-drama that is as expertly articulated, as full of breezy action and unexpected twists of plot and as understandingly directed as any of his earlier hits, not excluding "It Happened One Night," "Lady for a Day" or "Broadway Bill." Much of the effectiveness of the story, of course, is due to the expert casting of the principal roles.

Cooper Perfectly Cast.

Gary Cooper, whose star distinctly has been in the ascendant recently with such naturalistic bits of work to his credit as he revealed in "Desire," for instance, is perfectly cast as the small-town tuba player who sets New York right in the matter of honest thought, decent living, kindly impulses, humanitarianism and a few other trifles like that. He finds a perfect foil in Jean Arthur, who appears as the young newspaper reporter, "Babe" Bennett, the creator of the "Cinderella Man" yarns that add so much to her boy friend's discomfiture. The editor of the tabloid is played with gusto by George Bancroft, who has not been seen enough of late, and a big-city press agent is done to a turn by that tough young hombre, Lionel Stander, who is rapidly becoming the screen's only acceptable exponent of this sort of hard-boiled business.

H. B. Warner, as the understanding judge; Douglas Dumbrille, as the mainspring of the crooked law firm; Raymond Walburn, as a patient valet, and John Wray, as a symbol of the "forgotten man," do most to lend the support authenticity and sharpen the comedy intervals of the play by striking contrast. Among the others who contribute to the fun of a comedy that is many planes higher than any frivolous farce, may be mentioned Warren Hymer, Ruth Donnelly, Spencer Charters, Emma Dunn, Mme. Margaret Mantzenauer, former star of grand opera; Christian Rub, Jameson Thomas, Mayo Methot, Gustav von Seyffertitz, Walter Catlett, Margaret Seddon and Margaret McWade.

Garber Wins Ovation.

On the stage, Jan Garber and his radio orchestra, assisted by a group of singers, dancers and comedians, offer an hour of entertainment of the first grade. Jan has completely altered the style of his orchestra from that of a "hot jazz band" to the gentler ryhthms and legato melodies of an organization dedicated to music rather than noise. Audience response yesterday amounted practically to an ovation at the first performance and, presumably, throughout the day.

Singing frequently during the smoothly running program are Judy Randall, Charlie Foster and Grace Palmer, with Lee Bennett, Col. Luke Oliver and others helping out from the band. Miss Randall scored with "Goody-Goody" and "Truckin'" and Mr. Foster with a "scat" arrangement of "Dinah."

A splendid dance interlude was provided by Lorraine Santschi and Josephine Buckley, two graceful young women, whose sinuous interpretations of the modernized art of Terpsichore won huzzas from the crowd.

Scores a Hit With His Band

Returning to the city in which his first successes were scored, Jan Garber this week brings the best orchestra he has ever had to the stage of the Earle Theater for an hour of superlative entertainmnt. Famous over the air, this popular conductor and his instrumentalists, assisted by a group of clever specialists, are no less effective when seen in person on the stage. Yesterday's first performance was in the nature of a complete triumph for the young maestro whose likeness appears above.

"THE COUNTRY DOCTOR." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Charles E. Blake, adapted to the screen by Sonya Levien, photographed under the technical supervision of Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, featuring Jean Hersholt, Dorothy Peterson and the Dionne Quintuplets, with June Lang, Slim Summerville, Robert Barrat, Michael Whalen, Jane Darwell, John Qualen, Frank Reicher, Montagu Love, David Torrence, Helen Jerome Eddy, George Meeker and William Benedict. Directed by Henry King. Previewed Wednesday, April 15.

Devoted primarily to the struggle of an obscure backwoods physician to secure adequate hospitalization for his snowed-in charges—especially in times of epidemic—this homely and deeply moving picture is notable also for the first appearance outside the newsreels of the 2-year-old Dionne Quintuplets, who prove baby comediennes of potent charm.

The entire story, as must be generally known by this time, is based on the career of Dr. Allan R. Dafoe, the country practitioner in the bleak woods of northern Canada, who brought the five famous babies into the world and preserved the lives of all of them against seemingly overwhelming odds. Interwoven with this authentic story is a vein of sharp rebuke for the smug officials who have it within their power, but not within their inclination, to help those in dire need. The birth of the quins in the film story is made the climacteric espisode that brings the world and the bigwigs in Montreal to the door of the modest medico who had achieved one of the miracles of his profession.

Romance and Comedy.

Threaded through the story is a secondary narrative of youthful romance, between the young aviator who flew the needed serum through blizzards to the bleak outpost in the North and the daughter of the company manager, who rules the village with an iron and unscrupulous hand. The developments of a drama that is serious in both purpose and treatment are not without their frequent relieving touches of comedy. The high points of this comic relief are reached in the birth of the five babies—a sequence, by the way, that is handled with the utmost discretion and good taste—and in the later scenes in which they are at play in their nursery, as they appear today.

The comedy rests principally upon the shrinking shoulders of John Qualen, cast in the role of the northwoods father of the quintuplets, whose parenthood never before had encompassed any addition to his large family more multitudinous than twins—and the attenuated Mr. Slim Summerville, in the role of a bewildered sheriff, who finally permits his human instincts to overthrow the law.

The title role is played with a kindly and sympathetic forcefulness by Jean Hersholt and his faithful nurse by Dorothy Peterson, who turns in a crisp and engaging performance. On the side of the play's near-villainy are Robert Barrat, as the town manager, and Montagu Love, as a short-sighted and pompous government official. Among the many in support, may be mentioned June Lang and Michael Whalen, as the young lovers; Jane Darwell, Frank Reicher, David Torrence, as the Governor General; Helen Jerome Eddy and George Meeker, an accessory to the dirty work.

When Marie, Annette, Cecile, Emilie and Yvonne appear upon the scene, all thought is lost of any dramatic narrative in the unconscious humor of their baby adventures with a roomful of toys and a lot of strange actors. They prove alert, happy and smiling young actresses on their own account and reflect tremendous credit upon the kindliness and sagacity of Dr. Dafoe, the man who brought them all through the critical period of their lives.

"Varieties" on Stage.

The second edition of "Phil Lampkin's Varieties" occupies the stage at Loew's Fox this week and features a group of artists of the first rank in their respective fields.

Foremost of the roster is Jimmy Savo, pantomimist par excellence, who scores emphatically with his distinctive brand of silent comedy and in songs that he sings a little differently from any other artist on the stage. He did not forget to revive "River Stay Away From My Door" yesterday afternoon. Coheadlining with Savo is Benay Venuta, the striking young blonde vocalist seen here earlier in the season in "Anything Goes," at the National. Mis Venuta slays the customers with a vibrant voice in "I'm Shootin' High," "Let's Face the Music and Dance" and "Let Yourself Go." She let herself go in all of these and then the audience let go in applause—all of which, no doubt, just goes to show the power of suggestion!

The Elida Ballet, held over for a second week, opens the bill and appears several times during its length in new routines, and the Stone-Vernon Foursome present two flashy intervals of adagio dancing, the last featuring their famous "Tiger Dance."

The orchestral overture and interpolated numbers, played on the stage, and an interesting issue of the Fox Movietone News augment a feature that is heavily laden with human interest and diverting byplay.

"LOVE ON A BET." RKO-Radio picturization of a story by Kenneth Earl, with screen play by J. P. Wolfson and Philip G. Epstein, featuring Gene Raymond, Wendy Barrie and Helen Broderick, supported by William Collier, sr., Spencer Charters, Walter Johnson, Addison Randall, Eddie Gribbon and Morgan Wallace. Directed by Leigh Jason. Reviewed Friday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

Based on sure-first comedy predicaments, with a full realization of the possibilities of those situations, "Love on a Bet" offers as fast and hilarious a farce as one might want to see.

It is this way: In New York Michael MacCreigh wagers with his uncle that he can, starting out cashless and clad only in his underwear, reach Los Angeles in ten days, the while acquiring $100 in cash and a pretty girl as a prospective bride.

If that does not present opportunities for a smart, fast-moving, laugh-packed comedy, then what does?

The action had not progressed, after the wager, more than a couple of (screen) minutes when Our Hero emerged with white tie and tails, and from that point on until his arrival in Los Angeles ten days later it is just one continuous laugh, which varies in intensity, from time to time, from giggles to guffaws.

As the youth who wagers backing of a play against going into the meat-packing business, the blond boy of the screen, Gene Raymond, is great. He is admirably suited to the particular role, and his manifest enjoyment of the part adds to the authenticity of the portrayal. It is not one which is taken seriously—rather one for unalloyed entertainmenet. That is the way Mr. Raymond plays it.

Helen Broderick Amuses.

While the vicissitudes of the transcontinental trip are, per se, of engaging moment, much of the hilarity of the picture is to be found in the dry quips of Helen Broderick, as aunt to Our Heroine. She, Miss Broderick, that is, likes no whit the self-attachment to her party of the quasi-dishabille maniac of Central Park—and she makes no bones about it.

Primly important to the story, yet third in order of histrionic display, is the role played by Wendy Barrie, whose personal charm has hardly ever been more fetching than here. Miss Barrie, as also the other members of the company, is not called on for any great display of talent other than keeping the story and the action moving.

William Collier, sr., is the meat-packing uncle; Spencer Charters, the hotel proprietor who first contributes to the acquisition of the required $100; Addison Randall, Miss Barrie's would-like-to-be husband, and Eddie Gribbon and Morgan Wallace, the escaped convicts whose capture brings the capital necessary to winning the wager.

In is interesting to note that "Love on a Bet" utilized in its climactic scene the time-loss device which Jules Verne employed in "Around the World in Eighty Days."

"Time Marches On."

The thirteenth issue of "The March of Time" presents four discursive commentaries and timely topics. The pros and cons of the Florida canal from Jacksonville to Inglis are offered; a discussion of dogs, with general attention to the Tennessee championship field trials, and of Champion Sulu in particular, is given; the story of arson squads, from the time Fire Marshal Thomas P. Brophy first uncovered the racket, is thrillingly re-enacted, and a presentation is made of the origin and unexpected development of the Princetonian Veterans of Future Wars. Here, indeed, are news, education and entertainment perfectly blended.

Other supplementary subjects are "Molly Moo-Cow and Robinson Crusoe," a color cartoon, and the Pathe News.

Flowers Supply 'Triangle' Clew In Attack Death

Cord Believed Used to Tie Mrs. Titterton's Wrists Traced to Factory.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 17.—Search for the slayer of Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton took a new turn tonight with police investigating the conflicting stories of a neighborhood florist and the victim's husband regarding the possibility of a domestic triangle.

Although police quoted Lewis H. Titterton as denying that his book-critic wife had been annoyed by other men, they set out to check the story told by Mrs. Katherine Velios, who said an unidentified man had been in the habit of buying gardenias at her shop for Mrs. Titterton, slain a week ago today.

Titterton told detectives that a plant which was found in the apartment he occupied with his wife, and which Mrs. Velios said had come from her shop, actually had been purchased by himself at another place.

Often Bought Bouquets.

The detectives said he told them he frequently had bought bouquets for his wife, but not at Mrs. Velios'.

Mrs. Velios said a clean-shaven, well-dressed man of about 35 had bought gardenias at her place for Mrs. Titterton every week or two for the last three or four months.

"These are for Mrs. Titterton," he would say. "I want them to be just right."

Detectives said, however, they were doubtful of the information supplied by Mrs. Velios. Titterton wears a slight mustache.

Cord Is Traced.

They indicated they were more encouraged by information from Hanover, Pa., that a piece of cord found under Mrs. Titterton's body, when it was discovered in the bathtub of her apartment a week ago today, had been identified by description as a product of the Hanover Cordage Co. plant.

Assistant Chief Inspector John A. Lyons ordered a detective to leave immediately for the company's plant to begin tracing the cord from there. Police believe the cord was brought into the apartment by Mrs. Titterton's assailant and used to bind her wrists while she was being attacked and strangled.

Laboratory technicians meanwhile studied samples of paint scraped from the fire escape and windows of the apartment, presumably to determine whether it corresponded with a smudge found on a bedspread in Mrs. Titterton's room.

Columbia

"CHARLIE CHAN AT THE CIRCUS." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a screen play by Robert Ellis and Helen Logan, suggested by the original Earl Derr Biggers novel, starring Warner Oland, with Keye Luke, Francis Ford, George and Olive Brasno, midgets; Maxine Reiner, J. Carroll Naish, Wade Boteler, Shia Jung, Shirley Dean and Paul Stanton. The Barnes Circus used for atmospheric background. Directed by Harry Lachman. Reviewed Friday morning by Sally Stroud.

Charlie Chan, noted Chinese criminologist, goes to the circus. It is a holiday for him and his family. The family consists of numerous offspring, ranging in size from a babe in arms to a tall young fellow who desires to emulate the successful detective career of his famous father.

The Chans are immediately drawn into the personal lives of the circus performers. Young Chan falls in love with Soo Toy, the cute human pretzel; the midgets, Mr. and Mrs. Tim, swap autographs with Charlie; Mr. Kenney shows him threatening letters he had been receiving, asking the sleuth's aid. Which Charlie laughs off, saying he is vacationing.

Charlie sucks a lollypop, tosses off a few neat Chinese proverbs, and is having a fine time, when he learns Kenney has been murdered.

At the insistence of little Mrs. Tim, Charlie cancels an intended sightseeing tour to assist in the solution of the crime. The entire circus is threatened with disruption, since some of the star performers are among the suspects jailed by the stupid, muddling chief of police.

All Under Suspicion.

Mr. Holt, who owns half-interest in the circus with Kenney, is suspected, because he owed Kenney money; Holt, the animal trainer, is suspected, as are the midgets, the snake charmer and numerous other show folk who are known to have reason to hate and fear the dead man. Clews fall thick and fast . . . Caesar, the ape, gets out of his cage. Did he do it? If not, who did?

Charlie moves imperturbably through the melee, examining stray bits of evidence. Then a snake is thrust down the skylight into his room by someone who resents his interest in the case.

Nellie, the wardrobe woman, casts glowering looks at Marie, the petite trapeze artiste. Kenney had showed Marie marked attention, and Nellie felt kindly toward Kenney.

Later, in fact, she says they were secretly wed. Did she kill him for his insurance? If not, who did?

Charlie sees Marie shot down by a mysterious marksman as she does her perilous trapeze act. He finds a newspaper clipping in her scrapbook, which puts him on the trail of the murderer. Caesar, the ape, keeps getting out of his cage. Chaos, mystery.

And that is all you will learn from me concerning the plot.

A Real Circus.

You will laugh at Chan, jr.'s, bungling detective methods, and at his amorous attempts to interest Soo Toy. You will smile at Charlie, sr.'s, gentle baiting of the police chief and his crime detecting will astound you with its methodical logic.

There is plenty of authentic circus color—clowns, giants, puppets, popcorn, all the noise and excitement of a big-tent show. And there is suspense and horror and tragedy and humor.

Warner Oland, as Charlie Chan, is quite as fascinating as the Earl Derr Biggers character upon which his role is based. With smooth urbanity he proves the truth of one of the Chinese axioms he utters: "Good tools shorten labor," for he solves a crime which is baffling and prevents a second murder. His tools are a cool head, scientific deductions and a microscope.

The Terrytoon short is good. It shows Olympic tryouts in an animal village. A dizzy turtle, who converts his shell into a racer, is the featured performer.

The newsreel shows New York circus performers doing the same things the artists do in the feature picture.

This bill is recommended for Orientals, Occidentals, the Boy Scouts and Gramma. It's all that good!

"CAPTAIN JANUARY." Twentieth-Century-Foz picturization of a story by Laura E. Richards, adapted to the screen by Sam Hellman, Gladys Lehman and Harry Tugend, starring Shirley Temple and featuring Guy Kibbee and Slim Summerville, with Sara Haden, Buddy Ebsen, Jane Darwell, June Lang, Jerry Tucker, Nella Walker, George Irving, James Farley and Si Jenks. Music and lyrics by Lew Pollock, Sidney D. Mitchell and Jack Yellen. Directed by David Butler. Dances staged by Jack Donohue. Reviewed (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

The appealing charm of Shirley Temple, supported by the work of Guy Kibbee, Slim Summerville, Buddy Ebsen and June Lang, is in "Captain January" at its best—so no wonder the picture this morning starts its second week.

Showing an ever-increasing degree of perfection in each succeeding picture, the wee Shirley might well carry this work through her own efforts as an actress, a singer and dancer. But to make the story even more enjoyable and to give us looker-atters further excuse for spilling no end of superlatives, she has been given a supporting cast of proved talent.

Since only last Monday morning there appeared in these columns a complete and enthusiastic appraisal of "Captain January," one need add only that Star, Cap'n January, Cap'n Nazro and all the others are still on view.

The auxiliary program includes "La Fiesta de Santa Barbara," a Technicolor musical revue presenting a constellation of Hollywood's great, greater and greatest; "The Early Bird and the Worm," also a natural-color subject, featuring the most astonishing rattlesnake in cartoonal annals, and clips from both semiweekly issues of the Metrotone News.

Roosevelt Hails 3d Anniversary Of CCC Camps

Fechner, Reading Message Over National Network, Hints Projects to Stay.

President Roosevelt, in a radio message read by Civilian Conservation Corps Director Robert Fechner, last night hailed the 1,500,000 past and present members of the CCC on the organization's third anniversary, saying:

"You and the men who have guided and supervised your efforts have cause to be proud of the record the CCC has made in the development of sturdy manhood and in the initiation and prosecution of a conservation program of unprecedented proportions."

The massage, broadcast over a national network to the 350,000 men now in CCC camps, came on the third anniversary of the establishment of the first CCC camp in the George Washington National Forest, near Luray, Va., which is still in operation.

Camp Permanency Seen.

Fechner, in an address following his reading of the President's greetings, remarked that "It is practically certain that the camps will become a permanent institution." He pointed out to businessmen that "An honorable discharge certificate from the CCC is a valuable recommendation for any boy," and extended "a hearty invitation to employers to visit the camps when they are in need of good men."

Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Tree Association, telegraphed congratulations on the Army's administration of CCC camps to the commanding general in each of the nine Army Corps Areas. He said many State foresters had advised him that their State programs had been advanced from 10 to 20 years by CCC work.

The president said, in part:

"Our records show that the results achieved in the protection and improvement of our timbered domain, in the arrest of soil wastage, in the development of needed recreation areas, in wild-life conservation and in flood control have been as impressive as the results achieved in the rehabilitation of youth.

Both Nation, Boys Benefited.

"Through your spirit and industry it has been demonstrated that young men can be put to work in our forests, parks and fields on projects which benefit both the Nation's youth and conservation generally.

". . . Although many of you entered the camps undernourished and discouraged through inability to obtain employment as you came of working age, the hard work, regular hours, the plain, wholesome food and the outdoor life of the CCC camps brought a quick response in improved morale."

11-Month-Old Baby, 5, Held in Coiner Ring

Detroit, April 17 (AP).—Secret Service men had six persons in custody today, including an 11-month-old baby in whose clothing they said they found ten counterfeit $5 bills.

George Boos, in charge of the Secret Service in Michigan, said from 300 to 500 spurious bills were printed here. Those under arrest are Russell Kett, 35, released from the Southern Michigan Prison; his wife and the baby; Mrs. Margaret Kett, Thomas J. Soski, and his brother, Walter Soski.

Breezin' Along.

At Dinty Moore's fifteen minutes before midnight, Ray Bolger and his pretty wife drop in for a bite to eat after the show . . . The lanky Bolger shakes hands with a great hoofer of an earlier generation, Lou Clayton . . . "How do you feel, kid?" asks Clayton solicitously . . . "Swell, thanks to him," says the new dancing star of the Stem, pointing to Willie Moore, Crown Prince of the establishment . . . "He kept me alive for the opening by pouring beef broth into me" . . . It's an old Moore custom . . . Johnny Dundee and Jimmy McLarnin, after weighing in for their fights, always rush to Dinty's for their beef broth . . . Mrs. Moore makes it . . . At the bar Leland Hayward knocks off a highball, raves over the "The Great Ziegfeld" . . . He is Col. Hayward's son, and has been reported engaged and married to Katharine Hepburn for years.

HEPBURN.

* * * *

A few hours later, I was reading about Katharine Hepburn in "The Curtain Falls," a book written by Joseph Verner Reed . . . He is describing the first reaction of the managers and company to Katharine Hepburn when she applied for a part in the Jane Cowl show, "Art and Mrs. Bottle," at the Maxine Elliott: "Angular, with a jarring voice, the whole company considered Kenneth (MacGowan) and me mad for even giving her a chance. When Benn Levy laid eyes on her he said: 'But not seriously, Joseph. Her skin glistens. No allure. Impossible. Out with her.' The storm raged for four days. One minute Katharine Hepburn was Judy, the next, she wasn't. She was hired and then fired six or seven times a day. On the fourth day, at the close of a rehearsal in which she had not been allowed to participate, Katharine strode up to me. She was smiling very bravely. 'Here's your part back,' she said. 'Thanks for letting me try. I'm going. I won't be back.' . . . But she got the part.

More amusing was the scene when Jane Cowl, depressed by the great labor of rehearsals, spoke to the company: "There's some one here who wishes me evil—some one who doesn't like me. Ever since the beginning, some one among you secretly has been wishing me evil. Let him speak! Let him come forth now. Who is it among you who wishes to destroy me. Is it you, my girl? What's your name? Miss Hepburn. is it you, who for weeks, has been wishing me evil?" . . . Katharine spoke up meekly: "I've only been here a week, Miss Cowl" . . . That settled that . . . And it was under these auspices that Miss Hepburn finally crashed into the Broadway theater . . . Perhaps, understanding the things that happened to her in this apprenticeship, you can pardon her for acting the grande dame now . . . Reed's book, printed some time ago, but new to me, is absorbing reading . . . If he flopped as a producer, he clicked at least as an author.

Add Success Stories: Two years ago, Robert Taylor, getting a Clark Gable build-up, was receiving exactly $35 a week from Metro . . . John McCarthy, famous through Westchester for the roadhouse he operated at Port Chester, in the old days died Monday . . . Belle Bart, astrologer, warns that airplane travel on the twentieth is fraught with danger . . . Dave Loew will produce for RKO . . . Charlie Moscowitz and Sid Piermont leave for a Florida vacation Saturday . . . Outside of Ben Marden's Riviera, on the banks of the Hudson, no plans are being made for summer clubs in and around New York . . . The hotels will be happy to learn that their roof gardens won't have much competition . . . Pelham Bay Parkway and Boston Post Road, once lined by a score of roadhouses, seem to have retired from the business . . . Times are changing . . . Nobody has reported the torrid Coast blaze fueled by John O'Hara and Anita Colby (Counihan) . . . Most gorgeous rubies in town, those decorating the Marchesa de Portago.

The piece here on Howard Thurston, great magician who died at Miami, has stirred the letter-writers to action . . . Don Campbell recalls when he took his 6-year-old grandson, Buddy, to see Thurston at a matinee in the Wood's Theater, Chicago . . . When Thurston had the girl in the act "suspended" in mid-air, he invited all the boys and girls in the audience to come up on-stage, Buddy with them . . . He invited the youngster to kiss the Egyptian ring the "suspended" girl wore, and told him that it was so magical that if Buddy made a wish, he'd get it within 30 days . . . "So what do you want most in the world, my boy?" asked Thurston . . . "A pony and a cart with a white tail," said the youngster excitedly . . . The audience roared, and Thurston bent down and talked earnestly to the 6-year-old . . . "Now what do you want?" asked Thurston again . . . "A pony and a cart with a white tail," insisted Buddy . . . Not even Thurston could talk him out of that.

Within the space of a block on Eighth avenue, two fighters once managed by Jack Kearns are doing all right in another field . . . Jack Dempsey and Mickey Walker . . . Dempsey's restaurant and Mickey's bar are playing to heavy trade . . . Coming of the circus to Madison Square Garden spurted business for both of them, fathers insisting that their young sons shake hands with the ex-heavyweight champion and ex-middleweight champ while they're in the neighborhood . . . The handshaking that goes with their jobs is more exhausting than any of their fights, according to Dempsey and Walker . . . Dempsey, shortly, is taking a vacation to get away from it all.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 17.

So Mr. Ford Frick, president of the National League, has fined Dick Bartell, of the Giants, and Van Mungo, of Brooklyn, 25 slugs each for their vulgar fisticuffing the other day at the Polo Grounds. Well, well. Yes, indeed, such rowdyism must be stamped out of baseball and I can picture Mr. Frick slapping fines on 'em quick as anything in a stern attempt to protect the fair name of the game.

POVICH.

I doubt, though, that Mr. Frick's tongue was bespeaking his mind when he called Bartell and Mungo on the carpet at National League headquarters. Mr. Frick, you may or may not know, graduated to the presidency of the National League from the press boxes of the circuit and is not at all blind to the benefits of a bit of first-slinging on the diamond. So, with apologies to Eugene O'Neil, I give you, in a few asides, this department's version of Mr. Frick's reprimand to the two offenders.

Mr. Frick: So you, Bartell, and you, Mungo, are the two ruffians who cast a smirch on the national pastime by resorting to a vulgar display of fist-fighting on the field of play (that was nice work, boys, and I wish I could tell you how much I appreciate it).

Mr. Frick still talking: I'll have you understand right now and forever that the National League won't stand for that sort of thing and we're going to take steps (a few more scenes like you two put on and we'll pack 'em in all over the circuit).

Mr. Frick continues: Fist fighting has no place in baseball and, as president of the league, I am going to be quick to protect the honor of the game. Offenders will be dealt with harshly (that next Giants-Brooklyn game ought to draw 30,000 at Ebbets Field).

Still speaking for Mr. Frick: And as for you, Bartell, this is not your first offense. Players of your type who can't control their tempers are detrimental to baseball and—er—have no place in the national game (I'd like to see about 25 more Bartells in this league, then that American League wouldn't have a show with us).

Mr. Frick still with us: This is a serious offense, I'll have you know—fighting on the ball field—and it's a horrible example for American youth. I have the complete report from my umpires and my mind is made up as to your guilt (it must have been a beaut as long as it lasted, from what the umps tell me).

Mr. Frick concludes: So, Bartell, and you, Mungo, I cannot let a thing like this go unpunished. I have already told you the seriousness of the offense. Your guilt in the matter is quite clear and I hereby fine you each $25 (the league ought to pay your fine and give you each a $200 bonus for putting on that show).

That Mr. Frick had his tongue in his cheek when he slapped the extremely moderate fines on Bartell and Mungo is fairly obvious. Only a couple of days before he had issued a league ukase forbidding pre-game handshakes and fraternizing among opponents on the field. The fine for each handshake reported by his umpires would be $5, he announced.

Thus, with a mere handshake valued at five bucks, the tax for a good, old-fashioned fist fight like Bartell and Mungo put on ought to run anywhere from 100 bucks to 500, but Mr. Frick appreciates, apparently, the effect of fist fights on the gate receipts and was in no mood to deal harshly with the culprits. When he fined 'em only 25 bucks, he was saying, in effect:

"Great stuff, boys, if we had more of this sort of thing every club in the league would make money."

In Short—

In striking contrast to Frick's handling of the Bartell-Mungo affair was the action of Will Harridge, American League president, in dealing with the rioteers in the Washington-Yankee clash at Griffith Stadium in 1933. Harridge brought the might wrath of the league down upon Ben Chapman, Buddy Myer and Earl Whitehill with $100 fines each . . . Forever intimidating 'em and oblivious to the fact that the fist-slinging at Washington resulted in the appearance of a crowd of 30,000 at Yankee Stadium the next day . . . Under the league rules, club owners are forbidden to pay the fines for their athletes . . . But the suspicion persists that Col. Ruppert reimbursed Chapman for his $100 . . . When the late Miller Huggins used to slap fines ranging as high as $1,000 against Babe Ruth, the Babe simply referred the matter to Ruppert, who reached in his other pocket and handed the fine back to the Babe.

Only 82,000 See Second 'Openers'

Weather Cuts Crowds Almost a Third.

New York, April 17 (AP).—The second series of major league "openers" today drew only 82,423 customers to seven games as a result of generally cold and unfavorable weather. This compared with 205,000 for the eight games on the official opening day Tuesday.

Of today's games, only the world champion Detroit Tigers' home debut drew a respectable crowd, 36,000 turning out to watch the Tigers battle the Chicago White Sox.

The figures for today's openers:

American League—Chicago at Detroit, 36,000; Boston at New York, 20,000; Washington at Philadelphia, 2,000; Cleveland at St. Louis, 1,000. Total, 59,000.

National League—Philadelphia at Brooklyn, 10,000; Cincinnati at Chicago, 9,423; New York at Boston, 4,000. St. Louis at Pittsburgh, postponed. Total, 23,423.

Grand total, 82,423.

Grove Shuts Out Yanks By 8-0

22,000 Fans See Game; No New York Runners Reach 2d.

New York, April 17 (AP).—Bob (Lefty) Grove, pitching two-hit ball in his initial start of the season, spoiled the New York Yankees' opening before 22,256 shivering fans at the stadium today as the Boston Red Sox took an 8-to-0 decision for their third straight victory.

The lanky southpaw, the American League's most effective hurler last year, turned the Yanks back in order for the first four innings. Lou Gehrig came through with a scratch single off Jimmy Foxx's legs in the fifth and cracked out a clean single in the seventh. Not a Yankee reached second base, however, and only one other player besides Gehrig reached first. That was Red Rolfe, who coaxed a walk out of Grove in the sixth.

Fourth win.

The victory marked the fourth successive time in two years that Grove had beaten the Yankees, three of them being shutouts. The defeat was the third setback suffered by the Yanks in four starts this season.

Gathering ten hits of their own and aided by four Yankee errors, the Red Sox had little trouble with Red Ruffing, also making his 1936 debut, and Steve Sundra, a rookie who hurled the last two innings.

Errors by Ben Chapman and Tony Lazzeri, coupled with two passes and Grove's single gave the Sox four unearned runs in the fourth after they counted once in the third. Another error by Roy Johnson went into the scoring of one of the Sox's two runs in the seventh. Rick Ferrell's homer in the sixth accounting for the other tally.

Buffalo Boy Eliminates Gevinson

Capital Boxer Gambles and Loses National A.A.U. Battle.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 17.—Lou Gevinson, Washington featherweight, gambled in his semifinal match with Joseph Church, of Buffalo, here tonight and was eliminated from the National A. A. U. senior championships.

Ripping rights to the jaw to gain a slight margin in the first round, Gevinson backed the sturdy Church into a corner in the second session and whipped over a left hook that dropped the Buffalo scrapper for a count of seven.

Church Can Take It.

Church, a rugged boxer whose ability to absorb punishment was proven several times in the tournament here, was weaving from side to side when he arose and Gevinson tore in to try for a knockout.

Shooting blows from all angles, Gevinson smeared the Buffalo gamester with gore, but was unable to put him on the canvas for the second time.

As a result of his furious pace, Gevinson was a weary boxer when he came out in the final stanza. Church, meanwhile, recovered during the rest period and launched an attack in the third round that had the Washington battler hanging on.

Crowd Cheers Rivals.

With the crowd yelling wildly, both boxers stood in the center of the ring and traded punches until they became so tired they could scarcely stand.

There appeared to be little advantage either way at the end of the bout, but officials, impressed by Church's stirring rally, gave the decision to the Buffalo fighter.

Terry's Pinch Hit Wins for Giants

Boston, April 17 (AP).—Bill Terry, pinch hitting for Carl Hubbell in the sixth inning, struck the blow today that gave the New York Giants a 6 to 4 triumph over Boston as a chilled gathering of 4,000 fans turned out for the Bees' opening game at home.

The Giant's manager inserted himself in the line-up with the bases loaded and the Bees leading, 3-2. He connected with one of Bobby Reis' pitches, driving the ball to the centerfield fence for a double and clearing the bases. Hubbell received credit for the victory although Fred Fitzsimmons hurled the last four innings, and held the Bees to one run.

Phillies Are Brooklyn's First Victim, by 4 to 3

Brooklyn, April 17 (AP).—Big Babe Phelps' bat gave the Brooklyn Dodgers their first victory of the season today as they opened at home with a 4-to-3 victory over the Phillies in ten innings.

A crowd of 8,000, braving weather that was more suitable to football, saw eac team score three runs in the second inning and then watched as Bucky Walter and Fred Frankhouse waged a pitchers' battle until Fred Lindstrom opened the tenth with a single.

Cubs Defeated By Slugging Reds, 12-3

Derringer Allows Seven Hits While Mates Collect Twelve.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 17.—Chicago's National League champion Cubs received a cold, rough reception from the Cincinnati Reds in their opening home game today, going down to a 12-3 defeat before a slim crowd of 9,423 fans who shivered in 40-degree weather.

While Paul Derringer was holding the champions to seven hits, four of them scattered over the first seven innings, the scrappy Reds were pounding Tax Carleton, Clyde Shoun and Clay Bryant for 11 of their 12 hits and all of their runs in the fourth, fifth and sixth frames.

Two former Cubs, Kiki Cuyler and Babe Herman led the Reds' attack which included eight extra-base clouts. Herman got his second homer of the season, scoring behind Cuyler, who had singled in the fifth. Cuyler himself doubled to start the fourth, after Carleton had retired nine batsmen in order, and scored on Herman's infield single and Lombardi's double. A hit batsman and McQuinn's two-baser completed the four-run fourth.

After scoring two more runs in the fifth, the Reds scored six more runs in a big sixth frame, featured by doubles by Goodman and Lombardi, a triple by Alex Kampouris and a single by Derringer.

The Cubs scored three times in the eighth on three hits and two infield outs.

Wisconsin Offer Denied by Crisler

Princeton, N. J., April 17 (AP).—H. O. (Fritz) Crisler, head football coach at Princeton University, tonight professed complete ignorance of reports emanating from Madison Wis., that he had been selected as director of athletics and head football coach at the University of Wisconsin.

"I have not received any proposals," Crisler said. "I have not written any letters, and I know nothing about it. As a matter of fact, it's all news to me."

Besides, Crisler added, "I have no idea of taking another job because by contract here has another four years to run."

White Sox Win, 5-3, in Tigers' Opener

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, April 17 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox cast gloom over an opening day crowd of 32,000 chilled fans today by defeating the Tigers, 5 to 3, behind the seven-hit pitching of Johnny Whitehead.

The Sox, who beat the Tigers in the opening game last spring and started them on a skid to the bottom of the standings, chased Elden Auker to the showers during a three-run rally in the seventh inning today. That attack erased a lead the Tigers had collected due, in part, to a first inning triple by Hank Greenberg with a man on base. Manager Cochrane was out of the game with a sore thumb, injured by a foul tip Wednesday.

The game was played in 40-degree temperature, and a high wind that carried occasional snowflakes.

New Hurler Effective But Wild; Teammates Blast Out 13 Safeties

By Shirley Povich,
Sports Editor of The Post.

Shibe Park, Philadelphia, Pa., April 17.—James Brooklyn De Shong, who was discharged as incompetent by Connie Mack four years ago, came back to Shibe Park this afternoon in a Washington uniform, and sweet was his revenge.

His incompetency took the form of a two-hit pitching performance and a 3-2 victory over Mack's minions in their 1936 home opening, staged before a paltry 1,000 fans and 31,000 empty seats.

Mayor S. Wilson Davis, of Philadelphia, who was scheduled to toss out the first ball, was spared the futility of the A's against their former pal when he received a call to the City Hall before the game started. Director of Public Works Martin McLaughlin officiated in his stead and upheld tradition with an absurdly wild pitch.

Wild at Start.

The power of suggestion evidently affected De Shong at the outset because it was as the result of two consecutive wild pitches in the first inning that the Athletics scored one of their runs.

Thereafter, however, De Shong was superb in his debut as a Washington pitcher. He pitched Rabbit Warstler a meaningless single in the third inning and he pitched a home run to Frank Higgins in the sixth, but not another hit did the A's make.

The Nats won the ball game the hard way, barely eking out their victory despite the 13 hits they made off Harry Kelley, a diminutive right-hander who received a tryout with Washington nine years ago. By dint of leaving a dozen runners stranded on the bases, the Nats succeeded in making it close all the way despite De Shong's two-hit feat.

Cliff Bolton, Joe Kuhel and Cecil Travis were the authors of the blows that drove in the Nats' runs, but co-starring with De Shong was young Buddy Lewis who made good at the first asking when Manager Bucky Harris sent him to third base today. Rookie Lewis contributed a wild throw in handling six chances in the field, but he was cutting off base hits all afternoon.

A's Take Lead.

Without striking a blow, the A's took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when De Shong was making serious threats to throw the ball game away. He walked Moses to start the inning and then wild-pitched Moses to third. On the next pitch, De Shong uncorked another wild heave on which Moses scored. Before the inning was over, De Shong also walked Warstler and Puccinelli but he struck out Higgins to avoid further trouble.

The Nats bounced right back to tie the score in the second inning after two were out. Joe Kuhel rifled a single to right field and Cliff Bolton bounced a double off the rightfield fence that scored Kuhel.

De Shong was looking for trouble in the third when Warstler singled, but Lewis pulled him out of a hole by turning Johnson's hard smach into a force play. At that, De Shong filled the bases with a pair of walks before the inning was over.

Washington took a 2-1 lead in the fourth, performing the feat of scoring only one run on four straight hits. Travis singled, to right, Reynolds singled to center and Kuhel singled to left to score Travis. Bolton bounced a hit of Kelley's glove to fill the bases but the rally was halted when De Shong rolled into a double play with Reynolds forced at the plate by Newsome's throw.

With almost a minimum of effort the Nats made it 3-1 in the fourth after two were out. Powell, who had drawn a walk, promptly stole second and Travis just as promptly scored him with a single to left.

De Shong had a one-hit game in his possession going into the sixth, but Higgins dismissed any such notion by pounding a homer into the leftfield bleachers. When Ogleby walked, the A's had the tieing run on base with none out, but Hill made a swell catch of Newsome's long fly and young Lewis contributed a brilliant stab of Hayes' liner to halt the threat.

The A's never got another man on base against DeShong, despite the appearance of three pinch-hitters in the ninth. None of 'em hit the ball out of the infield and DeShong, personally, threw two of 'em out.

Newsom to Face Athletics Today

Philadelphia, Pa., April 17.—Buck Newsom will tote his sore jaw and strong right arm to the pitching mound at Shibe Park tomorrow.

The Washington Club yesterday rejected a request by the Yankees that Newsom be reserved until the Nats meet the Yankees at Griffith Stadium on Sunday.

Col. Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, suggested to Clark Griffith that Newsom's presence on the mound in New York against Lefty Gomez on Sunday would attract 50,000 fans to the game, as the result of their 1-0 duel in the Washington inaugural.

Griffith and Manager Harris refused, however, to alter the regular pitching schedule.

Georgetown's Sluggers Held in Check by Elon Hurler.

Elon College, N. C., April 17 (AP).—Behind the airtight hurling of Webb (Bull) Newsome, Elon right-hander, the Elon College baseball club did what several of the State Big 5 clubs have failed to do during the past week, trim Georgetown University's sluggers by a score of 5 to 2 here this afternoon.

Newsome held the visitors to only six scattered hits while his teammates hit hard in the pinches. The locals scored once in the first, fourth, sixth, seventh and eighth frames on some neat baseball tactics.

Ben Bullock, Elon rightfielder, led the batting. He had a perfect day at the plate with two hits for two trips. Tomorrow Elon will meet Wake Forest at Southern Pines as a feature of the sports day festival being held there.

Daily Double Amounts to $126.10

Bob's Boys, Letter Box Are Winning Pair; Gold Band Scores.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace Race Track, Md., April 17.—Swashbuckler, a shaggy looking son of Canter, marched postward this afternoon with his tongue tied down, threatened to wreck the starting gate, broke sluggishly, took the lead, lost the lead and then came on in the stretch to score a handy victory in the first division of the Griffwood Purse. The race was the afternoon's feature and drew a group of eight 3-year-olds which contested over the 6-furlong course.

Swashbuckler is a sort of family affair, being owned by Mrs. Janon Fisher, jr., and trained by her better half. The colt carried top weight of 119 pounds and proved much the best in the running if he did not carry off the beauty prize.

Jean Bart, the odds on favorite, making his first start of the year under the colors of Walter M. Jeffords, was a smashing, driving second, and Jockey Leo Fallon was drawing in on Swashbuckler at the end. Sun Rap, from the Foxcatcher Farms, was third.

Swashbuckler had a scattered backing and provided the faithful with an $18.40 mutuel.

The second half of the Griffwood went to Galmica, representing the Shandon Farm, and again the long-shot players cashed, for the son of Galetian paid $17.60.

Although there was no need for it, the judges brought the camera finish into play while the press boys were writing Transporter as the second horse by a head margin. Third in the field of eleven came Deliberate.

Some 7,000 customers watched the program and only those who connected with one of the numerous long shots or cashed the $126.10 daily double enjoyed the sport. The twin bet mutuel was produced by winning efforts of Bob's Boys and Letter Box.

The little regarded Bob's Boys, capably handled by Carl Hanford, took the first race to the tune of a $36.70 mutuel and to the disgust of the favorite players. Taranto was second and Forest Play was third. Bob's Boys worked his way to the front entering the stretch and held Taranto safe in the final drive. Forest Play probably was the best of the lot, coming from last position to put on a stretch rush that would have given him the decision in a few more strides.

Gold Band proved much the best in the second race for juveniles. The Jean Valjean colt followed the pace of Cathy P. to the stretch and then bounced far out in front in the run to the wire. Owned by the Bomar Stable, Gold Band paid an $8.80 mutuel. Cathy P. hung on to save second money from Slump.

Letter Box gained a neck decision over Pumice Stone in the third race. Laura S. was third in the bulky field of 12. Several of the better played horses met interference in the race. Cliff Stafford put up a good job of riding the winner, a favorite at a $9.80 mutuel.

Eudes won his third race of the current season in the finale to pay $16.70.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

The In Memoriam colt just lasted to garner principal honors by a head from the field of 3-year-old maidens that met in the mile and 70 yards event. Taranto (on inside) placed, while lesser share of the purse went to Forest Play, a Kentucky Derby nominee which finished fast after a slow beginning. The winner returned better than 17 to 1.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOB'S BOYS, $36.70, $11.10, $8.50; TARANTO, $8.90, $7.20; FOREST PLAY, $16.50.

BOB'S BOYS, taken to the outside for racing room when straightened into the backstretch, worked his way to the leaders readily, assumed command midway of the final turn, drew clear midway of the homestretch, but faltered badly nearing the close and barely lasted long enough. TARANTO gained steadily when put to pressure, saved ground, and finished determinedly on the inside of the winner. FOREST PLAY was very slow, circled his field and closed an immense gap. STAR SCOUT fell back leaving the backstretch, came again and completed tiring horses. RE-ELECTION lacked early speed and could not threaten seriously. SNOBBY SCAMP was done after going six furlongs. BRISTLE had no mishaps. TURKEY RUN opened up a long lead early, but stopped badly when caught. CUSTER displayed early foot.

SECOND RACE—Four and a half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:07. Off at 3:15. Winner, Bomar Stable's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLD BAND, $8.80, $4.90, $2.60; CATHY P., $4.70, $2.60; SLUMP (entry), $2.10.

GOLD BAND, way forwardly and forcing a steady pace in the early stages, moved to the pacemaker readily when straightened into the homestretch, took an easy lead in the closing furlong and drew out smartly at the close. CATHY P. began swiftly, showed good speed for the first half-mile, but weakened fast after being overtaken. SLUMP was hustled hard to gain a forward position, swung to the outside and came with good courage under punishment. WHITE SWEETS was hard ridden all the way and had no excuses. MOONBURN was unable to improve his position. HOLLBIT and KENNER were never factors.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:46. Off at 3:48½. Winner, Mrs. W. Strawbridge's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LETTER BOX, $9.80, $4.90, $4.30; PUMICE STONE, $6.20, $4.50; LAURA S., $9.20.

LETTER BOX, away forwardly and kept under hard urging, went into contention steadily and closing determinedly when reaching the homestretch wore LAURA S. down and barely lasted to stall off PUMICE STONE. Latter, a keen factor from the beginning, battled nicely in the final test and fought it out gamely. LAURA S. had good speed while setting the pace, saved ground, and continued with good courage when put to a hard drive. SOCIETY COLUMN improved her position on the outside and finished gamely. ROYAL BALLAD luckily obtained racing room on the inside and showed a good effort. SEEDLING closed a big gap after being slow to get going. HARI could not enter contention. ROLLING ALONG and SYLVIA G. tired after racing forwardly for five furlongs. BAY GIFT suffered early interference.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. The Griffwood. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:20. Off at 4:27½. Winner, Mrs. J. Fisher, jr.'s ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SWASHBUCKLER, $18.40, $5.60, $4.10; JEAN BART, $2.90, $2.60; SUNRAP, $4.00.

SWASHBUCKLER, hustled hard to maintain a forward position while on the inside, took a slight lead when midway of the turn, responded readily to a hard drive when straightened into the homestretch and came out slowly approaching the finish. JEAN BART, shuffled back in the first quarter-mile, swung to the outside in the last five-sixteenths and finished with a strong rush. SUNRAP was crowded midway of the turn, fell back, and came again when clear. GREEN MIST was used up getting into contention early, and he tired when the real test came. REDLEY was in tight quarters most of the way. KEOKEE went well. NARISE was outrun. SAVINGS showed a flash of speed in the first three furlongs.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:36. Off at 5:01½. Winner, Shandon Farm's br. s. (3), by Galetian—Mica. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GALMICA, $17.60, $6.60, $4.60; TRANSPORTER, $7.90, $6.60; DELIBERATE, $15.40.

GALMICA, as usual slow to get going, worked his way up on the outside when settled in his stride, closed fast when straightened into the homestretch and won up right at the end. TRANSPORTER, rated forwardly in the early stages, went to the leaders gradually, took slight lead inside the final sixteenth, but could not withstand the winner. DELIBERATE, a strong factor in the early racing, disposed of ST. ELMO when reaching the homestretch, saved ground, but weakened during the closing furlong. SACHEM, shuffled back midway of the backstretch, swung to the outside in the last five-sixteenths and finished full of run. NIGHT PLAY could not improve his position at any stage. CONQUER raced in spots. BUBBLETTE was never prominent. ST. ELMO showed good speed for five furlongs, then tired. ANEROID had nice speed early.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward (foaled in Maryland). Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:31. Off at 5:33. Winner, G. L. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TAUNTON, $6.30, $4.30, $3.40; BULL MARKET, $7.10, $5.10; ANNIMESSIC, $16.90.

TAUNTON, messed about in the first six furlongs, was crowded back midway of the backstretch, luckily obtained racing room between the leaders when reaching the homestretch, went to the inside when straightened out and, closing gamely, was up in the last few strides. BULL MARKET followed close up early, swung around his field to assume a slight lead in the last furlong, but failed to withstand the winner. ANNIMESSIC bettered his position steadily and closed with good courage in the final issue. FAIREST FLAG lacked speed and was never prominent. VANDA CERULEA moved clear going to the first turn, was steadied until challenged, but failed to rally when challenged. PEPPERY was outrun. TIGHT WAD quit badly after moving up strongly midway of the final curve. SECURED stopped in the last five-sixteenths.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:01. Off at 6:03. Winner, W. Ryan's ch. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—EUDES, $16.70, $8.40, $5.90; BILLOWY WAVE, $6.10, $5.20; CHIRAC, $6.10.

EUDES, reserved from the early pace, responded readily when called upon, came around the leaders entering the stretch and drew out under urging. BILLOWY WAVE, far out of it in the early racing, moved up very fast on the final turn and was wearing the winner down at the finish. CHIRAC, always a forward factor, was given a respite when leaving the backstretch and closed stoutly through the stretch. STEELHEAD lacked early speed, but closed with a rush to make up ground. WANDREL had no excuses. PLAY BOOK, WAR SAINT and KINDACORN all had good early speed, but stopped badly.

Graw Grits

By Clocker Mike.

Havre de Grace, Md., April 17.—The $10,000 added Chesapeake, a test of a mile and a sixteenth, features tomorrow's program here at the head of Chesapeake Bay. . . . Ten horses have been named for the fixture and all were considered likely starters tonight. . . . Chief interest will center around the initial appearance of Grand Slam, the Bomar Stable's Kentucky Derby candidate. . . . He will be opposed by a speedy field including Postage Due, A. G. Vanderbilt's star; Bright Plumage, C. V. Whitney's colt; Bright Light, feature winner at Bowie, and Teufel, highly tousted speedster from the Wheatley Stable . . . There wasn't a finish close enough to warrant a camera finish today, but the judges flashed the sign and consulted the pictures and then did the expected in naming Galmica the winner . . . if the judges weren't satisfied that Galmica won in the first place they shduld consult an eye specialist. . . . I'm going to make Nautch my special for tomorrow. . . . I haven't been doing so well lately . . . which probably is not news to my friends. . . . Redley ran like a ready horse today . . . might be worth writing in the old hat. . . . If I have written anything that might indicate that Mrs. Bosley's Peppery might be another Chase Me, just skip it. . . . After all these years, the Graw has been making a drive against touts . . . but those three-card-monte games still do a brisk business along the path to the race trains . . . the boys work in groups of six and seem satisfied if they clip one sucker a day for a $20 bill. . . . Whenever you feel like you want to watch that game, pass it up and instead give a quarter to that legless fellow who sings, or even donate something to the young man who always asks, "Mister, please give me a nickle" . . . it's lots safer!

Episcopal Trackmen Upset Tech, 73.5 to 53.5

Record Is Set In Javelin Throw

Strength in Weight Events Is Margin of of Victory.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., April 17.—Episcopal High School's track and field team scored a surprising 73½-to-53½ victory over Tech High School this afternoon on Hoxton Field. The superior strength of the home team in the weight events was largely responsible for their victory. They scored 26 points out of a possible 27 in the shot, discus and javelin.

Bill Rhinehart set a new record for Hoxton Field, in the javelin throw, heaving the spear 155 feet 5½ inches. Art Bryant, was also knocking at the door of Episcopal's hall of fame, as he came within a few inches of breaking records in the shot and discus. He came within 8 inches of the shot-put record, throwing 50 feet and 3 inches. His throw of 123 feet 8½ inches with the discus was just 3 inches short of breaking that record.

Episcopal led throughout the entire meet, but Tech swept through the high and broad jump to place themselves in a position to tie the score. However, the Episcopal relay team of Cronley, Hopkins, Mason and Henderson, captured the 880-yard relay and with it the match.

Shot put—Bryant (Episcopal), Brown (Episcopal), Waterman (Episcopal). Distance, 50 feet 3 inches.

Blair High Nine Wins From Damascus, 13 to 2

Montgomery Blair High began its quest for a third consecutive undefeated Montgomery County season yesterday by pounding Hawkins, of Damascus for 13 runs and 18 hits, while Mike Godfrey was granting the visitors but a pair of runs from seven hits.

For four and a half innings it was a ball game, the Damascans tying the score with two hits and a pair of errors by Wilmeth in the fifth. The big bats of Dick Sills and John Orrison that banged out four hits apiece cracked loudly in the next five innings, however, to insure the victory by the 11-run margin.

Hawkins pitched the whole game for the Damascans, taking all the punishment, although nine errors behind him contributed to the Blair total. Godfrey fanned 15 men.

Naval Training Nine Downs Central High, 3-2

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Norfolk, Va., April 17.—Pushing over a pair of markers in the seventh inning the Naval Training Station scored their second victory of the week over Central High School today, winning 3-2.

The Navy aggregation got to Lefty Heft for nine safe blows, one a ringing triple that knocked in the tying run. The husky sailor hurler scored the winning tally a moment later when Jones boomed a single to centerfield.

A group of fair but unsuccessful contestants in the Washington Golf and Country Club's tournament yesterday compare cards after the 18-hole test. In the usual order are Miss Marion Brown, Manor; Mrs. Ralph W. Payne, Congressional and president of the District Women's Golf Association; Miss Ellen Kincaid, Beaver Dam, and Miss Helen Dettweiler, Congressional.

Budge Wins Net Title Over Surface

Pinehurst, N. C., April 17 (AP).—Donald Budge added the North and South Championship to his collection of tennis titles today by trouncing Hal Surface, of Kansas Cty, in straight sets with a superb exhibition of speed and control.

The red-haired Davis Cup star's game was near its peak and he allowed Surface, the country's twelfth ranking player, only 30 points in defeating him, 6—0, 6—1. Surface, who had played fine tennis throughout the tournament, defeating Gene Mako and J. Gilbert Hall among others, could carry only three games to deuce and lost five by love counts.

The women's title was annexed by Eunice Dean, of San Antonio, Tex., who defeated Mrs. Virginia Rice Johnson, of Boston, 6—4, 6—4, with a clever placement game, which kept her in control of the match throughout.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase Blanks Sherwood, 18-0

Pounding the offerings of George Bonifant for 18 hits and as many runs, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High swamped Sherwood High, 18 to 0, yesterday on the Garret Park diamond. It was Sherwood's first game of the season and Bethesda's first triumph in two county starts.

The Sandy Springers got but one hit off Fuller and Day. The latter hurled the last five innings, allowing no hits, and receiving credit for the game. Ligon's single in the fourth was the losers' lone bingle.

Harris of the Lelanders hit a home run with the bases empty in the third, and shared batting honors with Putnam and Schneider with three apiece.

Misses Hacker, Keeler Tie in Golf Play

Low Gross Prize Results in Deadlock Also at Washington Club.

Miss Betty Keeler, of Indian Spring Golf Club, former District municipal women's champion, tied Miss Susan Hacker, of Chevy Chase Club, for the Phylls Keeler Miller Memorial Trophy in the 18-hole tournament yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club.

Miss Keeler scored 96—15—81 and Miss Hacker, 94—13—81.

The low gross prize also resulted in a tie between Mrs. S. G. Crisp, of Army and Navy, and Miss Elizabeth Houghton, of Chevy Chase, runner-up for the District championship. They scored 92 each.

There was a tie for third low net between Mrs. Howard Simons, of Manor, with 94—12—82, and Mrs. R. N. Sutton, of the host club, 100—18—82.

The playoff for the honors will take place Monday morning at Washington Golf and Country Club's course at 10 o'clock.

Scores were abnormally high, as many of the better known golfers saw their shots driven by the high wind all over the fairway and rough. Mrs. Betty Meckley, Middle Atlantic and Maryland champion, scored a 93, after finishing 7-6. This was the same gross score posted by Helen Dettweiler, of Congressional. Mrs. Roland Mackenzie, of Congressional, who has a three handicap, shot an even 100.

Mrs. E. L. Duffies (Washington), 115—18—97; Mrs. Dixie T. Wright (Kenwood), 124—18—106; Mrs. Leo Walper (Kenwood), 96—3—93; Mrs. C. B. Eagle Netmen Defeat Bridgewater Team, 7-2

The American University tennis team routed Bridgewater yesterday at Columbia Country Club by a score of seven matches to two. Woods, of the visitors, outsteadied Hudson in the singles, 9—7, 2—6, 6—3 and then paired with Geiman to defeat Sarls and Thrasher in straight sets.

Most of the interest, however, centered around the No. 1 singles match, which saw Sherman Lee outstroke Bill Sanger and the ranking doubles session in which May and Benscoter trounced Sanger and Henry.

Singles—Lee (A) defeated Sanger, 6—1, 6—1; Harris (A) defeated Henry, 6—1, 6—2; Baras (A) defeated Weber, 6—2, 6—2; May (A) defeated King, 6—1, 6—1; Benscoter (A) defeated Geiman, 6—0, 6—4; Woods (B) defeated Hudson, 9—7, 2—6, 6—3.

Doubles—May and Benscoter (A) defeated Sanger and Henry, 6—1, 6—3; Taylor and Zink (A) defeated Weber and King, 6—2, 6—3; Geiman and Woods (B) defeated Sarls and Thrasher, 6—4, 6—2.

Blair Golf Team Beats Gonzaga, 6-0

Buddy Sharkey, Gonzaga golf star, and recent winner of the Georgetown Prep School invitation tourney, met the first defeat of his scholastic career yesterday when he bowed 1 up to Alfred Shorb, of Montgomery Blair, on the Rock Creek course. The Blairites backed Shorb heavily to win the match, 6 to 0.

Shorb and Sharkey waged an even battle all the way, although both were guilty of spotty golf. Shorb's second shot on the last hole was short, but his chip was good and he sunk a 4-footer for victory while Sharkey was floundering around, taking a 5.

Results:

Shorb (Blair) defeated Sharkey (Gonzaga), 1 up; Thompson (Blair) defeated Fitzgerald (Gonzaga), 3 and 1. Best ball, Blair, 2 and 1.

Dean, Raspi Meet In Six-Round Bout

Three six-round bouts and a four-round preliminary will support the main boxing event between Eddie Mader and Billy Nichy at Turner's Arena next Monday night.

Johnny Dean, the latest showstealing lightweight sensation, will engage rugged Young Raspi in a six-rounder billed as a semifinal. In the other sixes, Frankie Litt will meet Bobby Dechter and Kirk Burk has been matched with John Daniels.

Kennel Club Entries Are Large in Roanoke

Roanoke, Va., April 17 (AP).—Large classes of sporting dog and terrier breeds and a large number of local entries will be among the features of the third annual dog show to take place at the Roanoke auditorium Monday.

Blue Flame Sees Action.

The Blue Flame Valets will play the Plaza Wine & Liquor Co. nine an exhibition game tomorrow at 3 p. m. on the No. 9 diamond near the Tidal Basin. The Valets are The Post Association Sunday champions of the city.

It will be their opening game. Manager Tony Baruto will work his three ace pitchers, Frank Dinnina, Lefty Morgan and Joe Hartman three innings apiece. Cliff Keyser will do the catching.

Peewee Champions Win.

The Cardinal A. C., Peewee champions of the District, won their fifth straight victory of the season yesterday with a 24-2 slaughter of the Ossie Bluege Peewees on the Eastern High diamond. Lefty Duckett pitched one-hit ball for the winners.

Junior Players Practice.

All former members of the Versis and Auth's Junior baseball teams and new candidates report at No. 9 diamond near the Tidal Basin at 1 p. m. tomorrow for practice.

Duckpin Play Today Honors Isemann

2d Annual Sweepstakes to Be Bowled at Mount Rainier, Rosslyn.

George L. Isemann, executive secretary of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, whose part in the promotion of the small-pin game has made him popular throughout the duckpin centers of the East, will be honored this afternoon and tonight, when the country's foremost maple experts compete in the second annual George Isemann Sweepstakes.

The event consists of ten games, the first five to be rolled on Hugh Crawley's Mt. Rainier runways at 2 p. m., and the latter at Galt Davis' establishment in Rosslyn at 8 p. m.

Wilmer Robey, of Baltimore, the defending champion, beat out an imposing field of 54 entries in the inaugural of the event last year with a total pinfall of 1,282.

Prominent visiting pinmen who will pay tribute to Mr. Isemann are Jack White, "Bozo" Dente, Pete Schoenberg and Nick Tronsky, of Connecticut, the latter, the No. 1 ranking bowler of the country. Baltimore will be represented by such stars as Ray Von Dreele, Willie Keeler, Johnny Miller, Paul Lohr and Hap Franz. Astor Clarke, No. 1 pinman of the District, will head a large local entry.

The first annual Margaret Lynn Handicap Sweepstakes will make its bow among the city's list of honorary stakes tonight at the Arcadia Alleys. Mrs. Lynn has been a prominent bowler in the Capital's major women leagues for some time and played a huge part in the organization of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation League.

The event will be run in two shifts, the first at 7:30 p. m. and the second at 9:30 p. m., and is open to men with an average of 106 or under and women of 103 or less. The entrance fee is $2 and includes cost of games.

Astor Clark, District bowling champion, scored his second triumph in three weeks over Jack White, New Haven's (Conn.) honorary first-ranking bowler of the United States, last night at the Clarendon Alleys. His margin was 30 pins.

The local star assumed the lead in the opening game and was neither tied nor headed thereafter. Clark rolled games of 116, 120, 136, 106, 146—624, as compared with White's run of 111, 110, 119, 139, 115—594.

In an exhibition doubles match, White and Pete Schomberg defeated Clark and Paul Harrison, 790 to 730. White captured individual honors with a 416 set and a 153 game.

Maryland Tennis Team Beats Richmond U, 5-3

University of Maryland's tennis team won its second match in as many starts by defeating the strong Richmond University racketers, 5-3, yesterday at College Park. It was the Spiders' second loss in six matches.

The engagement was begun on the clay courts, but after the completion of three strings of singles was completed on the hardwood of Ritchie Coliseum.

Singles.

Chalmers (Richmond) defeated Rintoul, 6—2, 6—2; Epstein (Richmond) defeated Krulevitz, 7—5, 10—6; Beachem (Maryland) defeated Dickinson, 6—0, 6—4; Land (Maryland) defeated Brown, 6—1, 4—1; Brooks (Richmond) defeated Lehman, 9—7, 6—3; Meloy (Maryland) defeated Pond, 6—2, 6—2.

Doubles.

Land and Krulevitz (Maryland) defeated Chalmers and Dickinson, 3—6, 6—3, 6—4; Beachem and Lehman (Maryland) defeated Brown and Pond, 6—1, 7—5.

District Girls Bow, 48-16, In Swim

Marie Duval Regains Trophy at Philadelphia; Takes Only First.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 17.—The combined Washington-Baltimore girls' swimming team was submerged by a 48-16 count here tonight in the Penn Athletic Club pool when they opposed an All-Philadelphia ensemble in an intercity dual meet.

The visitors succeeded in winning only one of the eight firsts when Marie Duval, the comely Shoreham Hotel Club mermaid, romped off with the low-board fancy diving honors, as expected. In addition, Miss Duval regained the Charles S. Bayer, jr., trophy she won in 1933 by her performance. The girls' meet was held in conjunction with the all-trophy event for men and women, including the low-board diving.

Rita Augusterfer, Washington, and Doris Baugher, garnered a pair of seconds. The former finished runner-up to Marie Glazier, Philadelphia, in the 220-yard free style, and Miss Baugher was nosed out in the 50-yard free style by Dorothy Lubin. Miss Glazier figured in two seconds, breaking the 220-yard resident pool mark and then sharing in the new Middle Atlantic district 150-yard medley relay event, the clocking revealing 1:41.3.

The summaries:

200-yard relay—Won by Philadelphia (Mildred Heisel, Caroline Cummin, Dorothy Lubin, Dorothy Forbes); second, Washington-Baltimore (Ann Arenson, Doris Baugher, Rita Augusterfer, Ann Bono). Time, 2:01.9.

100-yard breast stroke—Won by Florence Peck (Philadelphia); second, Doris Baugher (Baltimore); third, Ann Bono (Washington). Time, 30.1 seconds.

100-yard fre estyle—Won by Marie Glazier (Philadelphia); second, Dorothy Forbes (Philadelphia); third, Rita Augusterfer (Washington). Time, 1:05.8.

200-yard free style—Won by Marie Glazier (Philadelphia); second, Rita Augusterfer (Washington); third, Virginia Brooke (Philadelphia). Time, 2:50.5. (New resident record, breaking Margaret Ravior Young's 2:53 set in 1926.)

150-yard medley relay—Won by Philadelphia (Dorothy Campbell, Florence Peck, Marie Glazier). Time, 1:41.3. New Middle Atlantic record, breaking old standard 1:45.7.)

Fork Union Nine Beats Western High by 15-4

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fork Union, Va., April 17.—Fork Union Military Academy defeated the Western High nine of Washington today, 15 to 4.

Western drew first blood, scoring 3 runs in the first inning when Lawyer and Edmonston were safe on errors and Borden poled out a long one for a home run. Fork Union knotted the score in the fifth when Hennis drove one in with a homer to deep center. They added five more in the sixth and from then on the game was all Fork Union.

Retiring Boxing Head Lauds Post Contest

One of the last official acts of the retiring chairman, Fred W. Buchholz, of the District Boxing Commission, was to praise the boxing contest now being conducted by The Washington Post.

"The Sarron-Miller scoring contest you are conducting in The Post is good stuff for boxing," Buchholz wrote The Post.

"Not only will it keep alive day-to-day interest in Washington's first title fight and thus help the worthy work of the Police Boys Clubs, but it will also aid in educating the average fan to the proper way in which to score a boxing contest."

REMARKS .....

NAME OF WINNER .....

NAME OF ENTRANT .....

ADDRESS OF ENTRANT .....

The Object.

To predict as closely as possible the official outcome of the Freddie Miller-Pete Sarron featherweight championship boxing bout to be held at Griffith Stadium May 11.

The Prizes.

First prize—One ticket, railroad transportation from Washington and hotel bill in New York for the Joe Louis-Max Schmeling bout to be held in June.

Second prize—One ticket to the Louis-Schmeling fight.

Third prize—One ticket to the same contest.

The Rules.

File your entry on the above coupon, or similar blank, showing just how you think the bout will end. If you think it will end in a knockout, mark the coupon thus, showing the round in which you believe it will end, the winner and the time of knockout. In case of a knockout, the entrant calling the winner and round will win. If two or more call the winner and round, the one coming nearest to the time of knockout will win. If two or more are tied on time, the contestant scoring the fight nearest to correctly in the rounds preceding the knockout will win.

If the bout goes the distance, the contestant whose total score most nearly approximates the average score struck by the referee and two judges at the Sarron-Miller bout will be declared the winner. In case of a tie, the contestant who has the greatest number of rounds scored correctly will be declared the winner.

All ties that cannot otherwise be broken will be decided on the time of receipt of your entry. All scoring must be done according to the rules and regulations of the District Boxing Commission. The commission rule on scoring reads as follows:

"Scoring shall be by the '5-point' system." The winner of any round is marked 5. The loser of any round is marked from '0.1' to '4.9.' When a round is even, each contestant is scored '5.'"

Employes of The Post and their relatives are not eligible to enter this contest.

Freight Traffic Continues Rise Over Last Year

Total of 622,138 Cars in Week Is Increase of 6.1 Per Cent.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended April 11 totaled 622,138 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 35,570 cars, or 6.1 per cent, above the corresponding week in 1935 and 42,157 cars, or 7.5 per cent, above the corresponding week in 1934. Loading of revenue freight for the week of April 11 was an increase of 8,271 cars, or 1.3 per cent, above the preceding week.

Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 263,244 cars, a decrease of 6,409 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 23,431 cars above the corresponding week in 1935, and 24,549 cars above the corresponding week in 1934.

Loading of merchandise less than carload lot freight totaled 161,806 cars, a decrease of 806 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 1,186 cars above the corresponding week in 1935. It was, however, a decrease of 3,953 cars below the same week in 1934.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 29,344 cars, a decrease of 624 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 3,764 cars above the corresponding week in 1935 and 2,101 cars above the same week in 1934. In the Western districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week ended April 11 totaled 17,671 cars, a decrease of 610 cars below the preceding week this year, but an increase of 1,875 cars above the same week in 1935.

Livestock loading amounted to 11,117 cars, a decrease of 380 cars below the preceding week, 1,549 cars below the same week in 1935 and 3,752 cars below the same week in 1934. In the Western districts alone, loading of livestock for the week ended April 11, totaled 8,626 cars, a decrease of 286 cars below the preceding week this year and a decrease of 1,209 cars below the same week in 1935.

Coke loading amounted to 6,951 cars, an increase of 410 cars above the preceding week, 1,063 cars above the same week in 1935, and 1,560 cars above the same week in 1934.

All districts reported increases in the number of cars loaded with revenue freight, compared with the corresponding week in 1935. All districts also reported increases compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

Lansburgh's Awards Prizes to Sales Staff

Charles Roper and Alvin Newton, of the furniture department, and Mish Lina Rusher, of the lamp department, at Lansburgh's, yesterday received prizes of a three-day trip to New York with all expenses paid for making the highest percentage of gain over the previous year's sales. Miss Daisy Weirsdorff, of the basement store, received the fourth prize, $50 in cash, and Miss Mary Lacey, also of the basement store, recevied $25 in cash as fifth prize.

Prizes were presented at a meeting of the employes at which Mark Lansburgh and other store officials were present.

Frank M. Hall Elected To Local Exchange

Frank M. Hall, partner in the newly formed investment firm of Hall, Peters & Bryson, with offices in the Southern Building, was elected a member of the Washington Stock Exchange yesterday.

He was formerly manager of the local office of Graham, Parsons & Co. and at one time was associated with the National City Co.

Motor Truck Sales Are 97% Of 1929 Record

Demand Indicates That New High Will Be Reached This Year.

New York, April 17.—Demand for commercial motor vehicles has been at high level thus far in 1936 and, given sustained activity of general business, this year is expected to set a new high for domestic sales, according to the Standard Statistics Co. today.

Final registration data for 1935 revealed that more than 510,000 commercial units were sold in this country, or about 97 per cent of the 1929 peak. It is estimated that domestic sales in the first quarter of 1936 were close to 25 per cent more than a year ago. Such a rate of improvement may not be fully maintained through the year, in view of the substantial volume of this type of business which was developed in the latter part of 1935, but a reasonable expansion is indicated, which should bring the 1936 total well ahead of the some 527,000 units retailed in the previous peak period.

The larger vehicles, of course, still represent only a small part of truck sales, but it is probable that this division will expand somewhat more than the lighter classifications in the intermediate future, as the heavy industries extend their recovery trend. Bus sales have also been substantial, reflecting the modernization of transit facilities of many urban systems and also an active interurban vehicle business.

$50,000,000 Bills Offered by Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that tenders are invited for Treasury bills to the amount of $50,000,000, or thereabouts. They will be 273-day bills; and will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidder. Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks or branches up to 2 p. m., on Monday, April 20. Tenders will not be received at the Treasury Department.

The Treasury bills will be dated April 22, 1936, and will mature on January 20, 1937, and on the maturity date the face amount will be payable without interest.

Gen. Motors Buys Crosley Radio Plant

Detroit, April 17 (AP).—General Motors Corporation announced today the purchase of the Kokomo, Ind., factory of the Crosley Radio Corporation.

The plant will be taken over May 1, and will be used to manufacture automobile radio sets as the Delco radio division of Delco-Remy. The announcement said that General Motors would continue to purchase a considerable portion of its automobile radio requirements from outside manufacturers.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent

Stocks Continue to Decline in Slow Trading; Government Bonds Lower; Wheat Strong.

New York, April 17.—Stocks could recover only slightly in activity and virtually nothing in price. On a turnover of around 1,300,000 shares, the price changes at the close were irregularly lower, but for the most part not distressingly weak. Bonds also were mostly lower and Government issues felt the blight. Industrial news of the day was unimportant, but some attention might have been given to the flare-up between Great Britain and Italy. Whatever it is waiting for, the market clearly showed no inclination to go ahead. Wheat, on the other hand, found a stimulus in dry weather reports. May options closed 2⅛ cents higher at $1 a bushel.

This is the season of quarterly reports, in spite of the stock exchange's encouragement to the 12 months' running report method, and many stockholders are finding out what more fortunate individuals have known for some time, namely, that first-quarter earnings were not so good as the sharp advances in stocks up to recently had led them to believe. Many of the current sharp declines in prices can be traced to such revelations, but on the whole the first-quarter results are turning out to be considerably better than those of the corresponding period of a year ago.

Silvers Weaker.

Oil shares today were generally higher and activity increased, but Standard of California was an exception, heaviness following the yearly report for 1935, showing only 2 cents a share. Mail order stocks were firm, but Case broke 4 points on nervousness among short-time speculators over the general behavior of the market and in spite of a sharp gain in wheat prices. Silver shares were rather weak in the face of a rise in the domestic and the London price for silver, that development having no direct connection with most of them, sellers as they are to the Government at the high-pegged price.

Outside the oil division the stock market was colorless. The best oils were Houston, Atlantic Refining, Socony and Jersey. Higher prices were paid for a miscellaneous set of stocks, of which Yellow Truck, Eureka Vacuum, Harvaster, Corn Products, Cerro de Pasco and American Smelting were prominent with gains of 1 to 2 points. Except for Auburn, motor shares were fairly firm. Some of the rails were steady and others slipped, especially Central. Phillip Morris continued in favor. Among the heavy losers were Bon Ami A, Jones & Laughlin preferred, Ingersoll Rand, General Cable preferred, National Lead and National Supply preferred. Steel was down a fraction.

Money Outlook.

Money markets did not appear to be much disturbed by the implications of higher money contained in the Federal Reserve Bank of New York yearly report. The New York bank in its review made out a case for a 25 to 50 per cent uplift in reserve requirements for the banks, which apparently could be done without embarrassment in this district. The fact that the Reserve bank made a survey of the matter and pointed out that excess reserves were far greater than any possible need and were a potential source of excessive credit inflation draws attention to the question of credit control.

Doubtless the banking authorities, or some of them, are becoming somewhat concerned, less with regard to an outbreak of credit inflation than from the standpoint of too cheap money or too long a period at current rates. What some of them have in mind is that the cheap money, while aiding recovery, may result in such high bond prices that eventually, when rates harden, bank and other investment losses on bonds will become severe enough to make a real problem. However, that may be, it is unlikely, in the view of the best informed people in the financial district, that (1) any further softening of money rates will be permitted and (2) that any appreciable tightening will take place soon.

No Action Soon.

As for action looking toward higher reserve requirements or other direct means of bringing down excess reserves, the authority rests with the Federal Reserve Board, i. e., the Administration; and the vote of the New York bank, even if it should be directed toward action at this time (and there is no evidence that it is) scarcely will be heard at Washington. Meanwhile this week's Federal Reserve Board report shows a sharp rise in excess reserves, on faster Treasury spending, bringing the total excess for the country to $2,550,000.

Foreign exchanges were dull and without significant changes in rates, aside from a drop in the Italian currency to the lowest rate yet seen. The decline probably was connected with the rebirth of British opposition to Italian policy in Africa, as the course of the fighting, according to Italian reports, suggests that left alone Italy might soon conclude her African adventure. Even so, the financial costs of the war largely remain to be paid.

Brokers' Loans.

The rise of $36,000,000 in brokers' loans in a period of hesitant markets will be explained on several grounds. The bears will say that it confirms other reports of the growth of margin trading in stock as opposed to the former preponderance of cash tractions. If shares held outright are sold to who buy on margin, brokers' loans will tend to rise even though prices decline. Others will give the credit for the loan rise to borrowings by security dealers. Another explanation, and one which has some weight, is that brokers are taking securities to the banks and borrowing against them, in anticipation of the lower borrowing power of securities which takes effect with the new loan regulations for banks on May 1. After that date a broker and his client can secure less money from the banks on security collateral. Still another factor may have been the securing of funds for payment of the New York State income tax.

Monthly Reports.

If any change in corporation reporting is to be made, the monthly system ought to be adopted. It has proved to be of great benefit to holders and prospective holders of railroad securities, and the railroad business is just as seasonal and as subject to special adjustments as any other. Not only that, and what is more important, directors of industrial and public utility companies are supplied with running monthly statements of condition and earnings. What valid objection could be given to supplying the same information to security holders? Let all start at scratch.

New Capital Financing Far Below Average

But I. B. A. President Sees Continued Demand for Securities.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, April 17.—Baltimore investment bankers were hosts today at luncheon and dinner meetings in honor of Orrin G. Wood, of Boston, president, and Alden H. Little, of Chicago, executive vice president, of the Investment Bankers Association of America. The luncheon was held at the Belvedere Hotel and the dinner at the Maryland Club. Both meetings were arranged by the association's Southastern group, of which Yelverton E. Booker, of Y. E. Booker & Co., Washington, is chairman. Mr. Booker, who presided at both of yesterday's meetings, is also a member of the board of governors of the Investment Bankers Association, as is T. Stockton Matthews, of Robert Garrett & Sons, Baltimore.

Mr. Wood, who is a partner in the investment banking firm of Estabrook & Co., Boston, discussing the outlook for the investment banking business this year, said:

"While I do not wish to stand in the role of a prophet, it does seem reasonable to anticipate that the investment banking business will experience a year at least as satisfactory as 1935, and possibly even more so. There is still a large accumulation of funds seeking investment, so that the demand for securities should continue to be good. There is still a large amount of refunding to be done that would be advantageous to corporations. Finally, and even more important, the general business outlook is in many respects encouraging, and it is possible that during the course of the year business activity may reach a high enough level to stimulate a demand on the part of corporations for new capital for purposes of business expansion.

Room for Improvement.

"Of the $2,250,000,000 par value of new corporate issues sold during 1935, only $400,000,000 represented financing to obtain new capital. On the other hand, if we take the 10-year period from January 1, 1921, to January 1, 1931, and omit the abnormal years of 1928 and 1929, we find that the average annual corporate financing amounted to almost $4,500,000,000, and of this amount over $3,500,000,000 represented financing to obtain new funds. So, even though 1935 was the best year that the investment banking business has experienced since 1931, you can see that there is still a good deal of room for improvement.

"So much for the favorable elements in our outlook for 1936. There are also certain unfavorable factors that must be considered. We face an election year, traditionally disturbing to business. In addition, there are certain policies of the Federal Government which must be altered before we can feel that business recovery is taking place on a truly sound and lasting basis. Courageous steps must be taken to remove the fear of inflation.

"As long as business is subjected to doubts as to inflation, there can be no real business confidence, and accordingly no genuine and sustained business recovery. To this end, I believe that the most effective step that could be taken would be a definite indication on the part of the Administration of its intention to reduce expenditures, and to bring the Federal budget into balance. Once such a move were made, and the possibility of inflation thereby greatly diminished, I feel that we could face the future with a good deal of assurance that a period of real business prosperity was definitely in the making."

I. B. A. President

Lehman to Support Flintkote Market

New York, April 17 (AP).—The investment firm of Lehman Bros. laid before the Securities and Exchange Commission its proposal to support the market for its recent issue of Flintkote stock before it notified members of the banking group of its intention, it was learned today.

In openly notifying dealers of the syndicate that it would bolster the market for the stock, Lehman Bros. was the first concern to take such action since passage of the securities and exchange act of 1934.

Banking circles saw in these developments indications that the commission would not in certain instances interfere with bankers' attempts to stabilize prices of new issues. It was understood, however, that while the commission raised no objection to the support of the newly issued stock by the Lehman group, this in itself does not constitute a general policy.

Penn's 1,700 Trucks Run 7,000 Miles a Day

By the Associated Press.

Vast trucking operations of the Pennsylvania Railroad were pictured yesterday in a tentative Interstate Commerce Commission report recommending that the road's move to gain control of another truck line be denied.

J. Edward Davey, of the I. C. C. bureau of motor carriers, in his report said the Pennsylvania, which started using motor trucks in 1923, now operates trucks over 7,000 miles daily, serving 955 stations. It maintains a collection and delivery service over its entire system, he said; has an investment of $1,563,000 in 19 trucking companies operating 1,700 vehicles and has 80 station-to-station truck routes paralleling its rail lines.

Pacific Fruit Orders 1,500 More Cars

New York, April 1.—Pacific Fruit Express Co., controlled jointly by Union Pacific Railroad Co. and Southern Pacific Co., has placed with Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing Co., American Car & Foundry Co. and Pacific Car & Foundry Co. orders for 1,500 refrigerator cars, each company being allocated 500 cars.

These are in addition to 500 awarded to General American Transportation Co.

Baldwin Locomotive Orders Rise Sharply

Philadelphia, April 17 (AP).—The dollar value of orders taken in March by the Baldwin Locomotive and subsidiaries, including the Midvale Co., was announced today as $1,675,249, compared with $1,471,824 for March, 1935. These bookings brought the total for the first three months of the year to $7,128,704, compared with $4,643,955 for the corresponding period last year.

Wheat Climbs 3c Per Bushel On Crop Fears

Rise Persists in Spite of Heavy Realizing Transactions.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 17.—Critical domestic crop prospects, together with reports of strained political conditions in Europe, hoisted wheat values today to nearly 10 cents over recent low levels.

Topmost prices since last February, about 3 cents up overnight, were reached for Chicago wheat futures, with broad speculative demand in evidence. Toward the end of the day, however, buying ardor was tempered a little because of some rain in western Oklahoma, suggesting more or less relief from persistent widespread drought that has acutely endangered 1936 winter wheat production.

Despite exceptionally heavy selling to realize profits on advances, wheat closed firm at almost the day's high point, 1⅛@2⅜ above yesterday's finish; May, 99⅞@1.00; July, 91¾@91⅞; corn, ⅜ to 1⅛ up; May, 62@62⅛; oats, ½ to ⅝ advanced, and provisions 2 cents to 15 cents down.

Japanese Offer Steel on Coast

Cleveland, April 17 (AP).—Daily Metal Trade said today iron and steel jobbers in the Pacific Coast area "are alarmed by threatened invasion of their markets by Japanese interests offering a wide variety of iron, steel and nonferrous metal products."

The publication asserted that Japan, heretofore an iron and steel importing nation, "appears to have definitely joined the ranks of exporters of these materials."

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, April 17.—Approaching budget discussions and preparations for week-end settlements restricted activity in the stock market today. Oils, rubbers and industrials were firmer and drew most of the attention, while gilt-edged securities held steady. Transatlantic shares were easier and the market closed irregular.

Paris—The strength in rentes helped prices in other sections to hold steady. The closing tone was firm.

Liverpool—Wheat futures were higher on small Australian and Argentine exports and good demand from the United Kingdom for imported wheat.

Cotton futures advanced on trade and local buying caused by reports of insufficient rains in the United States Western belt. Prices reacted partially under Bombay selling.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

More than 30,000 Government employes throughout the country will be polled on the five-day week question, it was announced last night by the American Federation of Government employes.

BAKER.

While the formal poll will be confined to A. F. G. E. membership, which, incidentally, was reported last night as having passed the 30,000 mark, nonmembers are invited to send in ballots. These ballots may be obtained from the national offices of the A. F. G. E. or through any of its local lodges.

The A. F. G. E., as well as the American Federation of Labor, with which it is affiliated, has gone on record in favor of the five-day 30-hour week. So drastic a reduction, however, will hardly be practicable at this time in the Government service, Federal officials and employe leaders feel, unless it is instituted in industry as well, under terms of the Connery Bill or some similar measure.

But, several proposals specifically applicable to Government workers and more or less practicable at the present time, have been advanced, and the purpose of the ballot is to learn just how each of these plans appeals to the employes.

A preliminary poll in Washington dealing only with retention of present hours in the departmental service, and with the proposal of Chairman Ramspeck, of the House Civil Service Committee, to introduce instead a five-day week of eight hours daily—40 hours in all. This preliminary poll showed a strong sentiment in favor of retention of the present hours, reasons advanced being:

1. Danger of eyestrain.
2. Difficulty of continuing evening college work if hours are lengthened.
3. Fear that the eight-hour day might be made permanent and Saturday work ultimately restored.

Those favoring the five-day, 40-hour week point out:

1. The desirability of two full days for rest and recreation.
2. The schools would adjust their evening class schedules to conform to the Government hours.

The Federal Diary will welcome expressions from employes on the Ramspeck five-day, 40-hour plan.

The first athletic team to represent National Archives will take the field at 3 p. m. today when the Archives softball team meets the National Labor Relations Board on Diamond No. 1, south of the Reflection Pool.

$500 Reward Offered.

A reward of $500 is offered by the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks for the arrest and conviction of persons responsible for depositing in or sending through the mails packages containing bombs or other objects designed to kill or injure the recipient or persons handling the packages.

The reward was prompted by the explosion of a bomb in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., recently, which resulted in the death of two persons and serious injury to three.

"This reward is offered," declares Leo E. George, federation president, "in the hope that public-spirited citizens and organizations will join in making such illegitimate use of the mail an extremely unhealthy practice."

Diary Guest Tickets.

If F, P or C appears after your name call on the Federal Diary editor in person today only between 12 and 2 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Jimmy Savo, Benay Venuta and other acts; screen, the Dionne Quintuplets and Jean Hersholt in "The Country Doctor"); or to P, Loew's Palace (second week of Shirley Temple, Guy Kibbee, Slim Summerville and Sara Haden in "Captain January"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (Warner Oland in "Charlie Chan at the Circus").

With tired feet and hope drained low,
Up and down the halls folks go;
Their Senators they long to meet,
But they receive no welcome sweet;
Each door is locked and bears a sign,
"Out today, drop us a line:"
Nowhere else in the world, we're bound,
Can be seen such an expert "run around!"

J. J. J. (F), Commerce.

Treasury Dance Tonight.

The Accounting Division Social Club, Treasury, will be host at a dance at Wardman Park Hotel tonight, according to Jack Harrington (F), member of the arrangements committee.

Working on the project, which promises to be one of the outstanding Government employe social affairs of the season, are W. Lehman, G. Alexander, Agnes Carlson (P), Lillian Young, Marie Vernon, Byrd Hall, Rosalie Henderson, Roland Haskins, Helen Hile (C), Mary Kendricks, Mary Ray, V. Kavanaugh, Mrs. K. Holzberlien, Ann Thorne, Leonard Tucci and Alwyn Cole.

Nominees are Listed.

The May session of the D. C. Federation of Federal Employes Unions will be marked by the election of officers who will direct the activities of the National Federation of Federal Employes here during the coming year. An unusually large number of nominations have been received by the federation to date and further opportunity will be presented to name candidates immediately preceding the balloting.

Joseph Syansfield, Interstate Commerce Commission, retiring as president of local, No. 2, after serving three terms and the incumbent, John W. Ginder, Treasury, are named for the presidency. William E. Hoffheins, War, is the sole candidate for vice president as yet. Miss Grace E. Reardon, War, the incumbent, is opposed by Zaff Rogers, Treasury, for the office of secretary-treasurer. Four have been nominated for the post of trustee: Miss Belle Trouland, Bureau of Engraving and Printing; Miss Gertrude Coyle, War; Louis Rosafy, War, and Louis Mehlinger, Agriculture.

Friends of John P. Thompson, veteran N. F. F. E. worker and national vice president for many years, will be grieved to hear of his recent death. The D. C. Federation of Employes Unions paid fitting tribute to Mr. Thompson, who was well known here, at its April meeting.

Weather Maps to Ships.

Q. Can you tell me how Weather Bureau maps are transmitted to ships at sea?—Mrs. G. R. Connelly (P.).

A. According to E. B. Calvert, in charge of the Weather Bureau's forecast division, several liners are now equipped with apparatus for receiving weather maps. The bureau prepares the maps, and the Radio Corporation of America transmits them by radio equipment along the general lines of wire equipment used in transmitting press photographs.

On the Air Today

"Fashioned by Fay!"

That's to be the alpha and omega of the new series of shows presented with and by Frank Fay, beginning tonight at 9, WRC. If, by any chance, that name is not entirely familiar to you, just recall the droll humor of the Vallee variety show of the past few months—such devices as the Amalgamated Haters of America, Inc.; the We Take Your Place Regardless Service and the Association of Excavation Watchers. Those are typical of Frank Fay's brand of nonsense.

According to advance notice, the new series will present Fay as master of ceremonies, singer, comedian, announcer—and practically everything else. Fay has a penchant for breaking ether precedents, which may suggest one substantial reason for his radio rise.

His songs will be new and old, funny and serious. He may sing them straight or "psychoanalyze" the lyrics. He might even sing the whole song backwards. Give him a trial tonight, by all means.

* * * *

Booking of the new Fay show for spring Saturday nights is another bit of evidence pointing toward an increase of approval of this once considered "flat night" for radio entertainment. Another winter season should see as many, or perhaps more, of the better shows on Saturday nights as other nights of the week, excepting Sunday, which doubtless will continue on and on as the best radio night of the week.

Just note, for example, the entertainment scheduled for this particular Saturday night; Estelle Taylow, Bill Robinson, George Olson, Ethel Shutta, Billie Burke, George Jessel, Basil Rathbone, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Fannie Brice, Benny Fields, Red Nichols and orchestra, Richard Bonelli and Frank Fay, not to mention numerous dance bands and other programs of the non-guest star type.

* * * *

From Moscow: Accordion orchestra playing works of Russian masters, by short wave, WRC, 10.35 a. m.

Debate: Teams of Catholic University and Emory University (Atlanta), on "Resolved, that intramural athletics are more consistent with the aims of college and university life than intercollegiate athletics," WMAL, at 2. (Catholic, represented by James A. Gartland and Joseph F. Spitzig, has the negative.)

Jamboree: Presents Estelle Taylor as guest, WMAL, 6:45.

"Chateau": Presents Billie Burke and Basil Rathbone in scene from "Mrs. Moonlight;" Babe Didrickson, woman athlete; George Jessel and Dorothy Lamour, WRC, at 9:30. With Victor Young Orchestra, Smith Ballew.

Ballet Russe: From Metropolitan Opera House, WMAL, at 2:30. Pit performance of Tschaikowsky's "Aurora's Wedding."

Fred Allen has rejected the leading role in a new picture, "Sing Baby Sing," because he's determined to vacation in the truest sense this summer. He maintains he gets 13 weeks air vacation and wants it for play—not more work. One of the automobile companies has released a new recorded program to almost 350 radio stations—a crack band under a nom de plume. The wise ones along Radio Row say it's the Warings and the Pennsylvanians.

Culbertson on Bridge

When a generous correspondent supplies me with excellent material for one of these daily articles, why shouldn't I grasp the opportunity for a short vacation? I do, forthwith!

Dear Mr. Culbertson:

"This is the most unusual squeeze play I ever made or remember. It was a squeeze and a throw-in, but it was not an end-play because it was a middle-play on the seventh trick. And, instead of having given up the four tricks I could afford to lose, first, it happened after the loss of only two.

"Played last night with my wife against Mrs. R. L. Winham as West and Bill Muench playing the role of East, the victim.

'My wife (she's the top, or North, hand) bid a diamond; Bill said a spade; I said two no trump; my favorite wife said she'd have another of the same, not too sweet.

"West led the spade 3, if it matters, which it doesn't, and I let them keep it. I took the next and started diamonds. East eventually took the ace, and I took another spade, discarding a club, and ran diamonds, discarding a heart.

"I still was prosperous enough to afford to lose two more tricks. East was getting ready to foreclose when he discovered the New Deal would not allow it. He had to give the government one of his good spades or else his red 3 spot, in which case he'd be sold out in hearts. Or the same in clubs. So he turned in a spade and dummy led the ace and a low heart, so East collected only the legal rate of interest. You mix the next round of drinks and metaphors.

"What kind of a squeeze is that? It didn't much matter what the opening lead was, or what anybody played, or when, or which opponent got thrown in. Yours,

"Philip E. Barney, Tampa, Fla."

There is, unfortunately, no particular name for the "kind of squeeze" referred to, but in any event it was a good one.

Mr. Barney's breezy style probably requires clarifying for less-than-expert players.

West opened the three of spades and declarer allowed East's nine to hold, winning the second round. The diamond ace was knocked out and, on the third round of spades, which followed, dummy discarded a club. Four rounds of diamonds were played, on the last of which South discarded a club. East had great difficulty finding safe discards for the last two diamonds. He let go one club but, in order to guard clubs and hearts, had to discard one of his precious spades as well. The ace and another heart threw him on lead. He cashed his remaining spade, but had to lead away from his club king into North and South combined tenace.

'Labor Council' To Make Laws Urged by Walsh

Clergyman Advocates New Unit, Profit Sharing to End Communism.

Creation of a national economic council with legislative powers was demanded last night by the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., Georgetown University vice president, in a Gaston Hall lecture.

A sweeping reform advocated by the clergyman to "end Communism" was mandatory issuance of "labor shares" to give workers a "cut" on profits comparable to the dividends of investors.

"An empty stomach has no ears," Walsh warned in urging both mapor political parties to beware of "the sickness that sooner or later afflicts" every form of popular government.

Communist agitators, the crusading anti-radical declared, long have challenged democracy on two counts. He interpreted their protests as:

"It has permitted the control of our economic destiny to be lodged in the discretion of a small privileged minority controlling the wealth, the economic resources and the financial life blood of the Nation.

"It has failed to provide security and sufficiency for the broad masses of the people who rely on daily toil for their subsistence."

He proposed the economic council as the answer to the first complaint and the labor shares as the cure for the second.

Says "Time Has Come."

"Has not the hour come," he asked, "for an economic council, composed of selected representatives from all the major occupations, sitting permanently in Washington, in the form of a recognized instrumentality designed to legislate for the good of all the people, not for any section or specific industry?

"Without suggesting that it should displace or usurp the constitutional functions of Congress, it could undoubtedly achieve much that Congress cannot or will not do.

"A Representative or a Senator represents a definite territorial area, not a social constituency of the Nation. His interests are limited chiefly to his district, which if it be an industrial or a financial region of a Northern State, leaves him possessed of an academic interest only in the agriculture of the Middle West or the cotton crops of Louisiana.

"And vice versa, a mining Senator from Nevada is rarely moved to eloquence by the plight of fisheries in Maine or textile disasters in Massachusetts.

Would Include Arts.

"In such a house of national welfare no one group could hope to secure advantages for any special interest for they would be obliged to submit their programs to the impartial scrutiny of all classes in the community. And I would include representatives of the arts and sciences, of education and religion.

"It would be an integrated representation of the integrated organic thing that life is. It could command the best brains in every walk of life.

"In his Baltimore speech a few days ago the President clearly warned industry that the 'breathing spell' is over and compulsory legislation is again in sight."

Services Are Today For Henry Hazard

Funeral services for Henry C. Hazard, one of Washington's pioneer residents, will be held at 2:30 p. m. today at the Warner E. Pumphrey funeral home, 8424 Georgia avenue, Silver Spring, Md. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mr. Hazard was born in Washington, November 12, 1856, and lived here practically his entire life. As a young man he was active in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, attaining the office of grand master of the Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia in 1891. He was retired from his services with the Eastern Railroad Association in 1934.

He died Wednesday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Harvey Brake, of Washington Grove, Md. Two other daughters, Mrs. Fred D. Blake, of Washington, and Mrs. Kent Groves, of Oak Grove, Va., survive, as well as a son, Samuel T. Hazard, of Chevy Chase, Md., and a sister, Miss Eva Hazard.

Quake Terrifies Greeks.

Athens, April 17 (AP).—An earthquake in the Epirus area of northwest Greece terrified inhabitants today. A church was wrecked at Doveski, a gymnasium was destroyed at Devegiana and a school was shaken down at Georgiana. No loss of life was reported.

Bonsal Speaks On News Work To Pen Women

'Facts Stubborn, Slippery for Reporter,' He Tells Gathering Here.

Reporters should remember "facts are not only very slippery but very stubborn," Stephen Bonsal, the war correspondent, told the National League of American Pen Women last night.

Mrs. Phyllis Fergus Hoyt, of Green Mountain, Vt., was elected national president.

Other new officers: Mrs. Lillie Hunt, District of Columbia, first vice president; Mrs. Harriet Chambers, District of Columbia, second vice president; Mrs. Francesca Falk Miller, of Illinois, third vice president; Mrs. Louise Hartley Wassell, of Arkansas, fourth vice president; Mrs. Grace Boles Hedge, of San Francisco, fifth vice president, and Mrs. Kate Speake Penny, of Birmingham, Ala., historian.

Bonsal drew on his half a century as a newspaperman for incidents to bear out his advice that reporters should be cautions in pursuing facts.

Checks on Atrocities.

He once was sent to Macedonia, he related, to check on statements of British clergymen that natives had been impaled and otherwise tortured. He found no atrocities had occurred, but three months later the natives actually were treated as originally reported.

While he was in Vienna on a peace mission after the World War, Bonsal added, a high official told him how he saw the prime minister, in a menacing voice, persuade the king to plunge Hungary into war.

"A month later," Bonsal said, "the prime minister was assassinated. When his state papers were published it was clear he urged the king to stay out of the war.

"My informant was in the room when the prime minister and the king talked it over. He stood 30 feet or so away and was bumfoozled by circumstantial evidence into believing the prime minister was advocating war."

Experiences in Cuba.

On his arrival in Cuba to cover the Spanish-American War, Bonsal said, he learned the American Army was poorly organized and equipped. The soldiers had not been given any target practice "and couldn't hit the broad side of a barn."

Several correspondents, he explained, speculated on whether they should encourage the Spaniards by wiring American papers the truth about Uncle Sam's troops.

"Two of the correspondents, however, "cabled the truth to New York. They were recalled and their stories never did get into print."

Rolling Stone Gathers Crop Of Whiskers, Writer, 76, Finds

A rolling stone does gather moss, and exceptionally fine moss at that, in the opinion of James Martin Miller, veteran globe-trotter, who exhibited a very fine crop of "Shanghai whiskers" yesterday on his return from a trip around the world.

A veteran newspaperman of 76, who covered many big stories of years past, Miller still thinks of life in terms of headlines. On his third trip around the world the thing which most impressed him is the remarkable progress of Japan.

"When you think that 36 years ago, when I was last in Japan, the railway trains had to have black streaks on the glass to keep the passengers from sticking their heads through windows, on the theory that there was nothing there," he said, "you can imagine what difficulties they had to overcome."

As to the campaign of conquest which the Japanese are embarked on, Miller is quite philosophic about that, too. Most of the Americans and others would really rather have the Japanese in China than the Russians, he feels.

If the Chinese were Sovietized, as they would be under Russian influence, there would be no place for any Occidentals in the Far East, he asserted.

"China has been influenced a great deal by American civilization," said Miller, "but there is only one thing I found in which they beat the Americans. That is in their gangsters."

Dou-Yu-Seng, a Chinaman of the Jesse James ilk, has all the Capones and Dillingers roped and hog-tied when it comes to rackets, the veteran journalist said. Even the rickshas are organized by racketeers.

Passing to the situation at other places, Miller commented on the strained atmosphere and the continual spy-scares which he encountered in all the ports from Arabia westward. No cameras were allowed, and the population was visibly living under a strain.

"As we came through the Suez Canal we saw huge transports taking the Italian troops to Ethiopia, and bringing back the wounded," he said. "The men on the ships that we passed going were singing and happy, but it was a different story with those coming back."

As a newspaper correspondent Miller covered the annexation of Hawaii, the Philippines insurrection, troubles in Samoa in 1898, the Boxer Rebellion in North China in 1900, the marriage of Queen Wilhelmina, of Holland, to Prince Henry in 1901, and Queen Victoria's funeral on January 28, 1901, just 35 years before he witnessed the funeral of the late King George.

F. W. Lowery, Ex-Budget Aid, Dies in Phoenix

Frederick W. Lowery, 64, assistant to former Budget Director Lewis W. Douglas during the early days died Thursday in Phoenix, Ariz.

Mr. Lowery suffered a heart attack while riding in a taxicab. He died just as he reached a hospital.

While assistant to Mr. Douglas, Mr. Lowery was known as one of Roosevelt's "ax men." He and Alvin Brown, another assistant to Mr. Douglas, passed upon all appropriations to executive agencies at the time the Administration was attempting to effect a 25 per cent reduction in running expenses.

Mr. Lowery quit what he termed his "first and last" Government post after Budget Director Lewis broke with President Roosevelt and resigned.

He was a native of Iowa and began his career as a lawyer. After moving West, he entered the mining industry and became associated in mining enterprises with J. S. Douglas, father of the former budget director.

Richard Hubbard, Business Man, Dies

Richard Carrington Hubbard, of Brookneal, Va., died yesterday at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Carrington Hubbard, of Takoma Park. He had been in poor health for the past six months.

Mr. Hubbard was born near Brookneal, Va., where his family has lived for generations. For a number of years he was a resident of Washington. In business in Brookneal for the past four years, he was a member of the Brookneal Chamber of Commerce and of the Indian Springs Golf Club.

Mr. Hubbard is survived by his wife, Mrs. Erma Ginther Hubbard; a daughter by a former marriage, Nancy Jane Hubbard; four brothers, Herbert, of New Market, Va.; William, of Parkersburg, W. Va.; Samuel and Reed Hubbard, of Takoma Park, and two sisters, Mrs. Mamie Hubbard Drake and Miss Nellie Hubbard, both of Takoma Park.

Funeral services will be held in Brookneal. Burial will take place in the family cemetery there.

James Black Dies; Building Inspector

James A. Black, 41, a District building inspector, of 1343 Clifton street northwest, died at Sibley Hospital yesterday from endocarditis. He had been ill for more than a month.

Born in Hagerstown, Md., Mr. Black served in the Navy during the war and later was employed by the Otis Elevator Co. He lived in Greensboro, N. C., for about ten years, coming to Washington five years ago.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary E. Black, and by a son, Frank, employed in the Merchant Fleet Corporation of the Shipping Board here.
